LENNON REMEMBERED

BEARING WITH IT

Alex Carpenter, a Conklin Shows employee for four years, gazes out onto the midway during a slow spell at this year's Quinte Exhibition. On Saturday she was remarking how well business was booming during the annual fair but on Sunday her spirits may have been dampened a little because of Mother Nature. (Smith Photo) By David Botting

The time was 1961 or 1962. The place was the Marquee Club on Oxford Street in London. There was an air of excitement as groups searched out new sounds that would take rock in a new direction.

Who was John Lennon? That question about the most famous of the legendary Beatles has been re-opened in a controversial book. The Lives of John Lennon. Some dispute Goldman's version, among them Peter Quaife, bass guitarist for the Kinks, and now a cartoonist under the name of Peter Kinnes for the Quinter Weekly News, recalls John Lennon as he knew him in the sixties.

Everyone played at the Marquee Club in long jam sessions the Yardbirds, the Bluesbreakers, the Rolling Stones, John Mayo and the Kinks. That's where Peter Kinnes, then known as Peter Quaife and a member of the Kinks, first met John Lennon and the Beatles.

Pssst! Elvis lives! Spread the word!

Last week's spoof on "Elvis lives" drew an interesting response. The president of the local Elvis Presley fan club called to say the column was in poor taste because knows he is alive. She saw his face behind a window during a pilgrimage she paid to Graceland after his "death".

Two others called, wanting to know exactly who had seen him and where I had gotten my information. And, last

All right I me persuaded. He's alive. Now the question is where. I have some thoughts on that.

DON'T BREAK THE CHAIN

Chain letters of various sorts keep surfacing over the ears, but a new idea in chain letters cropped up just the other day - a chain letter for creditors.

The idea is simple. Send the chain letter to ten people who owe you money, telling them to pay up. They, in turn, send the letter to ten people who owe them money, and so forth. Within days, you will be inundated with money. You will be voted one of the world's ten most sexy men (or women, depending on your sex), your children will receive scholarships to Harvard from anonymous donors, an uncle you had never heard of will leave you a million dollars and your halitosis will clear up unexpectedly. But if you break the chain, watch out! Your mail will contain nothing but bills, the cheques you were expecting won't arrive and any mail you send out will be returned to you for insufficient postage. You oldest son will smash up you for insufficient the car and it will turn out that you forgot to renew the insurance. And don't expect that halitosis to clear up. Don't break the chain!

WHOSE RABBITS?

Seems the Quickerts have a problem with rabbits at Reid's Dairy in Belleville. Ever since they installed a small farm zoo, people have been complaining about how sman farm 200, people in the temperature of the rabbits get out and run onto the road. Vroom! Dead. And another motorist comes in to tell the Quickerts they have to treat their rabbits better.

Trouble is, those aren't the Quickerts' rabbits. Attracted by the food in the farm zoo, they hop over the enclosure, eat to their heart's content, then hop out again to wander in their brainless way across busy roads.

Didn't they make a movie about that? Who Killed

Roger Rabbit, or something like that.

LIBERALS: NO CAKE WALK FOR AREA TORIES

Ly John G. Smith
Prince Edward-Hastings Progressive Conservatives who think of the riding as a "cake walk" are in for a "big surprise," said Larry Shannon, president of the riding's Liberal associa-

Four people in particular are hoping that he's right.
After all, one of them will be leading the party into the next federal election.

Ted Jianopoulos, manager of a local restaurant, is the latest candidate to seek the Liberal nomination on Saturday. First to announce his intentions was John Fryters, an addiction councillor, followed by Lyle Vanclief, with an agricultural background, and Louis Desjardin, sales representative with a pharmaceutical house

As preparations fall into place for Saturday's convention, Mr. Shannon is confident of the chance for a Liberal to be the next MP of the riding.

"We're ready to go now," he said. The Liberal party is a "very viable alternative for the next federal election."

But when will the elec-tion be? So far, that's anybody's guess.

Mr. Shannon, however, sees an early November election for a number of reasons.

If ties between the Reagan and Mulroney government are strong, the Prime Minister will likely want an election before the Americans in the event of Mr. Dukakis winning the country's presidential race,

Timing the federal election before municipal ones is also an advantage in larger sectors where cam-paigns could crowd each other as well, he pointed

But whenever the election is called, Mr. Shannon is confident of a Liberal

Mr. Turner's decision to try to block the agreement in the senate until an elec-tion is called is a "legitimate" parliamen-tary process, he said. "It's as legitimate as limiting debate on the issue."

Feeling good

Why does the government spend money on making Canadians feel good about themselves?

Last week, a glossy press package arrived by courier from the Federal Department of the Secretary of State of Canada, announcing that an exhibit called Bravo Canada! was going to appear at the Quinte Ex. The exhibit salutes Canadian achievers and achievements in all fields of human endeavour and is travelling across Canada to fairs and other exhibitions

According to the background notes included in the press release, the goal of the exhibit is: "to inspire a feeling of national pride; to make Canadians aware of our achievements as a nation; to make these achievements relevant to individual Canadians of different backgrounds and regions; to help Canadians see themselves as active citizens; to encourage Canadians to learn about Canada.'

How much money is our government spending on this exhibit and materials promoting it? How much money is our government spending on similar projects? And to what purpose - simply to make Canadians feel good about themselves and their nation?

Surely, Canadians don't need such cultural cheerleading to instill pride in themselves. Surely Canadian schools aren't doing such a bad job of education that the federal government has to mount exhibitions of Canadian achievers and achievement.

Frankly, we'd feel a whole lot better about Canada if the government spent less time and money on making Canadians feel good about themselves and more on the real issues confronting Canadians

IN YOUR OPINION

Best summer ever, says

Thank You Bell Scabs (Bell summer indeed! Managers):

I read with interest a letter from a Bell manager's wife published in your paper Aug. 30, 1988. She very adequatly described the life of a Bell technician. It is very rewarding to know that Bell Canada allows its managers to lead a normal family life not so readily passed on to its technicians. I sincerely thank them because this is the best summer I have experienced in thirty years of marriage to a technician. I have not missed conducting Bell Canada's business throughout the night, nor have I missed the occasional manager calling me a liar at three in the morning before I have the chance to explain that my husband has already been called

While this particular person advocates a standing ovation to scabs who are prolonging the strike, I am sure that she will eagerly accept all the extra benefits that managers will result of the strike.

Neither managers nor retired employees chose to help the striking technicians, yet they are eagerly awaiting indexed pensions. When you receive your in dexed pensions, please give operators a standing ovation

This year was disastrous for lawns

high temperatures and drying winds have turned lawns into a browned-off wasteland and even if you have been able to pour the water to them, the results have been, to say the least, patchy.

ARDENING AND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

But take heart, all is not lost. Your lawn is not dead, just dormant, awaiting the cooler temperatures and rains of late summer and fall to surge back lush and green. And that will be your chance to turn a problem into an opportunity.

Contrary to popular belief, fall, not spring, is the best time to vitalize an embattled lawn, to seed, to feed, and to weed, to top dress or patch and to tackle insect or grub problems. Let's start with the

The problem is the browned-off state of your lawn has masked any damage that might have been caused by either the white grub or the chinch, but those problems will redefine themselves as soon as your lawn starts to regenerate. If patches show up, especially in full sun areas, that are dead and are dry and dessicated to the tough, you probably had a chinch bug invasion this summer. There's really nothing you can do about it. The damage is done, the bug is gone and the only answer is to recondi-

However, if you tug at the grass in the dead pat-ches and it comes out by the handful, there is something you can and should do - treat for white

Begin by cutting a square of sod and turning it over and the chances are good the culprit will ap-pear, a fat, whitish grub with a brown head. At this time of the year they are not full grown and are highly susceptible to the right insecticide - chlor-pyrifos - available under a number of brand names in your local nursery

The chances are the invasion will not be heavy mainly because the white grub is the larvae of the June bug and right now they are in a low cycle. Therefore, rather than treat the whole lawn with a fertilizer containing an insect killer, you'll find it more economical to use a liquid and make spot ap-plications according to directions on the label.

Next on the eradication list are lawn weeds, because, like lawn grasses, they like the cool, wet conditions of late summer and fall. In fact, there are weeds that only appear during this season such as the Fall Hawkbit or August Flower. It looks like an oversized dandelion, but it's not. Fortunately, it can be knocked off with the same broadleaf weedkiller you used on the dandelions last spring.

Again, unless the invasion is extremely heavy, you don't need a weed and feed fertilizer. The liyou don't need a weed and feed fertilizer. The li-quids are more economical and do an excellent job and they avoid the hazard of a general application and a dry weed and feed, especially if you are using a spinner-type spreader. The broad-spectrum ber-bicide makes no differential between broad-leaved weeds and broad-leaved garden plants. So, unless' you are extremely careful or use a drop-type spreader, you-could cause severe damage to your flowering plants. Feeding your lawn at this season of the year is a flowering plants.

Feeding your lawn at this season of the year is as important a step as the spring treatment, perhaps more so. The one thing you want is a lawn that goes into winter tough and healthy. The only question is, which foundation should you choose: one with a low nigrogen or one with a high-nitrogen content? It's an interesting controversy and that's what we'll talk about next week.

Dear M.A.K. (Carrying Place).

Your feelings are strong and your emotions push you at times to act hastily or rashly. Your emotional situations and happenings stay with you so that you can work them through. You have already learned how to handle your feelings very well and you cope admirably well with life's experiences. You feel secure with your family and you draw stability for yourself from home.

You are able to take in what you learn and you can assess for yourself what you think is important for you. Often you are totally busy with your own thoughts and shut out the world around you. This is excellent for doing home work and you should not have any problems at school. However, you can also turn into your own world of thought when you should be more in contact with others around you.

You are always thinking and you can be quite critical. This is not bad in itself, because it can teach you to evaluate and it does protect you from being gullible. But at the same time, do try to feel more generously towards others and give them room also. You may feel it takes too much time and effort to be involved with others, but you could give yourself a bit Practise patience. No one is perfect. Accept advice from trusted adults.

You work very well with your hands: you have so-called "intelligent hands" geared to creativity. A hob-by making things with your hands could be a helpful stimulent for you. M.A.K., you are honest and know how to work through personal proglems and you have pep. Keep on playing ball and start enjoying your high school years, the summer vacation was long enough.

MARRIAGE WITHOUT QUEENSBERRY RULES

SEPTEMBER 7

Gentleman Jim Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan in the first major prize fight subject to Marquis of Queensberry rules on Sept. 7, 1892. The three-minute rounds and gloves instead of bare knuckles attracted wide attention. Corbett's purse was $35,000.

Boxing is a very Christian pursuit wherein it's better to give than to receive. I learned this firsthand as a young man frequently confusing the sport with baseball and throwing no-hitters. My manager could have sold

May I suggest that your Armchair Athlete, John G. Smith, becomes a Bathtub Athlete? Just add up all the hours Vicki Keith has spent in the water, duplicate her diet and let him just lay there for the same length of time. The water temperature should never go above 20°C. Perhaps then, when he finally hauls himself out of the tub, he will not disparage her efforts to help disabled children.

People who have crossed the English channel don't choose the widest port; why should Vicki?

I'll send Mr. Smith 10 cents for every hour he stays in the tub, but no TV, no reading, no lights at night - just lay there and shiver.

Patricia Strevett RR 2 Belleville

First of all, thanks for the response, but I'd like to mention a few points. First of all, I agree that Variety Village is a noble cause and Vicki Keith should be congratulated for the money she's raised.

She should also be commended for her records in the breast stroke set dur-ing her latest swim in Lake

The only thing I disagre with is crediting her with "crossing" these lakes. If she doesn't cross it at the widest point for this credit, she should cross a proportional distance.

After all, can we consider a 34km swim as a "crossing" of Lake Superior?

If we do consider this a crossing, where do we draw the line?

What she did swim, however, is more than I ever could — far more and if I thought sitting in a cold tub for hours could raise substantial funds for the charity, I would.

But I better look for an official sized bathtub first. wouldn't want another writer to say I didn't ac-

Aw, let's hear it for poor George Bell.

After getting his act together Friday night, Bell said in an interview, "It's kind of painful the way people have treated me in Toronto. I've tried my best for Toronto and Canada. I wish they'd get off my back."

Maybe he should remember the paycheck he's getting is because he's supposed to hit the ball every once and a while -maybe even catch a few.

And his memory is pret-ty short if he thinks he's trying his best for Toronto. Remeber when he pouted over talk of placing him on the DH list?

Correct me if I'm wrong, but it sounded to me like he was trying his best for himself — not for the team

LENNON WAS AFRAID OF NO ONE

They were new to the club. A few of the musi-cians there had heard of the Beatles and knew they were something to be reckoned with, but this was new turf for the group from Liverpool.

"No one knew him (Lennon)," recalls Peter, "but everyone (the crowd) kind of parted for him.

Before the night was out Lennon did a number with one of the bands during the jam session, and Peter knew that here was a man and a group to watch.
That's the Lennon he remembers, a man who seemed larger than life even in the hyped-up world of rock in the heady days of the early sixties, a man who made reverberations by just walking into a room, a man to whom others gravitated.

The person he describes is very similar in some ways to the John Lennon of Albert Goldman's new book, but with a difference. He seems more human, perhaps more likeable, certainly understandable.

The book upsets Peter. It seems sensational too him, not true to life, not true to the Lennon he knew then. And it seems a liberty taken by someone who never knew the man who played such a major role in changing the face of rock. "What right does anyone have to write about so-meone they don't know?" Peter asks, adding that, as far as he knows, Goldman never met Lennon and knows nothing about the Liverpool neighbourhood or musical background from which Lennon came.

"He (Goldman) turns him into a horrible, nasty little man. He (Lennon) could be an asshole," Peter admits, "but hang on a minute and look at what he gave us. Look at the other sides of his life." So who was John Len-

He wasn't a genius — "that word can be bandied around to bloody easily"—but he was "incredibly talented," Peter said. And with that talent went a bit of what he calls pottiness. "Doesn't it always?" he

He recalls, for example once drinking a bottle of whisky with Lennon at a nightclub with scantily clad go-go dancers in hanging cages. "You bloody can't dance," challenged Lennon, and next thing he knew, Lennon had stripped off his own clothes and dragged Peter along with him into a cage to dance.

"That got us kicked out of that nightclub," he says. He recalls Lennon as en tremely extroverted. "He didn't care what he said or did to anybody. He'd answer back to anyone,"

But it wasn't a case of egomania, it was a case of thought was right.

"Paul McCartney was very full of himself," Peter says, choosing his words with care. "But John Lennon was very full of what he believed he had the right to be full of." And if he thought someone else was right, he would defend them to the death.

"That's what I liked about John," Peter added. Oddly, Lennon could be very shy and reticent with people at first. "He'd sit there and suss you out," Peter remembers. "Then, if he didn't like you, he made no bones about it or went out of the room."

Lennon could be almost truculent about rights. "I've got a bloody pound note out and it's going to buy me the same thing as a bloody rich man's pound note," Peter remembers Lennon saying.

Sometimes Lennon's mouth got him into trouble

commitment to what he "He'd hear something on the other side of the room that he disagreed with and he'd argue right back. And then the guy would get up and up and up. That's when he'd push Paul Mc-Cartney in front of him,"

> Although Peter never Although Peter never felt the rough edge of Len-non's tongue himself, he once got in trouble with him. "He gave me that look," he said. "I thought: 'I'd better get his grifficand 'I'd better get his girlfriend off my knee

The Lennon he remembers, though, is a man with not only a tremendous talent, but an insatiable desire to know about things.

Goldman alleges that Lennon tried homosexuality with Brian Epstein, manager of the Beatles. Peter isn't sure if Lennon's inquisitiveness would have led him there. "It could have. He was very inquisitive; he had to experience everything,

I really doubt it very, very much. He wasn't exactly raving anti-homosexual,

And he remembers Lennon as a man who had a tremendous feeling for and commitment to human rights, animals and conservation. It's a man that comes through best in Lennon's song Imagine, a song he couldn't write until he had shaken off the shackles of restrictions set by the record companies and left his songwriting partnership with Paul McCartney.

There's a lot of Lennon in Imagine. John felt like that a long, long, long

It gave Peter a jolt when he heard it. "I thought, cripes, you finally did it!"

Next week: How the pressures of fame changed John Lennon and the attempted to explain these items by telling the police he was planning to frighten a guy who had done him wrong. No one bought that one. Detectives questioned Ada's neighbors again. Who was Michael Baronovitch? Well, actually, no one had ever seen him, but the young man who lived with Mrs. Rice had often mentioned him and with Mrs. Rice had often mentioned him and suggested that she may have run away with him. The young man was, of course, our Jerry. Convinced that a major crime had taken place, police thoroughly searched Ada's home. They found bankbooks, which led to the questioning of bank officials. The ledger boys revealed that they had received a letter from Ada asking them to transfer $135 from her savings account to her checking account. The letter was written after the last time anyone had seen Ada aive. anyone had seen Ada alive.

anyone had seen Ana aiwe.
Further snifting revealed that Ada had deeded her home to Jerry. When faced with this information, Jerry laughed and told the officers the deal was legitimate. He had paid for the property with mining stock. Upon investigation it was found that the mining stock was worthless. Jerry was like Detectives questioned Jerry for two days. Although they had no concrete evidence, they felt sure that Jerry had killed Ada and disposed of her body. They appealed to him to give the woman a proper burial. They allowed reporters to interview him, while photographers snapped his picture. Jerry loved the spotlight. In his warped mind, he felt he could remain the cent of attention indefinitely if he produced Ada's body of attention indefinitely if he produced Ada's body of the produced Ada's body and a returned to the house late at might. It was dark inside. Two individuals were engaged in a struggle. Jerry picked up a pofer and swung. One of the antagonists fell and the other fled out the door. Jerry recognized the eleing figure in the monolight. It was Michael Baronovitch.

Jerry switched on the lights. There was Ada's body on the floor. What to do' No one would ever believe his accident story. He thought and thought for a full day before deciding to get rid of the body himself. He lugged Ada out to his car and drove to a deserted canyon. There he buried her and sprinkled the body with lime after planting.

When asked further about Michael Baronovitch.

sprinkled the body with lime alter planting. When asked further about Michael Baronovitch, Jerry roared with laughter and changed his story. He had hit Baronovitch over the head and killed him too. Jerry claimed he weighed down the body and threw it into San Mateo Bay. Jerry led law officers to a lonely canyon where they uncovered the decomposed body of Ada Rice. He laughted as the body was removed from its crude resting place. The area around the San Mateorude resting place. The area around the San Mateorude was dragged for Baronovitch's body, but nothing was recovered other than three old tires.

Jerry pleaded guilty to first-degree murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Ada Rice. He was shipped off to San Quentin and that, for all intents and purposes, should have been that. But it wasn't.

From the moment those big doors closed behind him on March 14, 1936, Jerry became active in prison life. He was the institution's champion weight lifter and was a star member of the prison's tumbling team. His record was unblemished. Still, he was denied parole, but did manage to get transferred to the California Institution for Men at Chino in May, 1944.

A year later he escaped and headed for Minnesota. It was wartime, Jerry managed to register with the draft board, which necessitated having his fingerprints taken. It was only a matter of time before the FBI caught up with him, but before they fill caught up with him but before they fill caught up with the Canadian Army. In fact, Jerry was a corporal by the time he was shipped back to the U.S. to finish his sentence.

San Francisco police never tried that hard to pin the Michael Baronovitch murder on Jerry for the simple reason they were convinced that the Bulgar-ian was nothing more than a figment of Jerome Braun von Selz's fertile imagination.

And the Liberals have their visions and their leader, despite his leadership being contested in April. "It worked out to April. It worked out to his advantage," he said. But Mr. Shannon is focusing his attention on the leadership of this riding as a convention and election approach.

Despite reports, finances are in relatively good shape for the party, he said. "The federal Liberal deficit is lower than that of the provincial PC's."

Local finances in this riding are "good," said Mr. Shannon. We have the funds to get things rolling."

And despite what a Sept.

16 Gallup Poll might show, he's quick to point out that "election day is the only poll that counts."

But will this election show better results for the Liberals than the one which gave the PCs such an enormous majority?

Mr. Shannon pointed out that people once questioned the same thing about provincial Liberals before the outcome of the last election. In particular, he cites the Liberal victory in Prince Edward County, an area considered by some to be Conservative.

"The party is far from dead," he said noting reports after the last election saying it was. "There has been a rebirth of the Liberal party."

And it's this new party that people will be considering at the polls.

On Aug. 16, 1988, some visitors from western Canada were visiting Belleville and parked their motor home at Zwick's Island while they walked through the park

Zwick's Island while they walked through the park. As they returned from their walk, they observed a white male, about 21 yrs. old, 5'10", 175 lbs. with brown collar length hair, high cheek bones, long pointed nose and muscular legs wearing blue shorts, white T-shirt and running shoes, emerge from their motor home. The suspect ran north across the island towards Dundas St. W.

Investigation revealed that the suspect had stolen approximately $10,000 worth of items, including a camera, a men's diamond ring, two pearl necklaces with matching earrings, and a number of dark Italian gold necklaces, two with medallions engraved with Italian wording on the back.

The camera was later recovered near the water filtration plant on Sidney Street.

So you're interested in becoming a municipal politician for a chance in the Nov. 14 election. But how do you do it? What are the rules and regulations involved?

After all, it's politics — there has to be red tape in there somewhere doesn't there?

Surprisingly enough, the procedures to follow are quite simple, but it's very important to follow them.

First of all, are you qualified to run for office? You don't have to be a lawyer or developer to run for council, but there are a few guidelines. On or before polling day, you must be 18 years old, a Canadian citizen and a resident of the municipality in which you are running, a tenant (or spouse) of land in it or a non-resident

DISQUALIFIED

But certain people aren't allowed to hold municipal office. Those who are disqualified from holding office include employees of the municipality, judges, members of the legislature, senate or house of commons, crown employees, undischarged bankrupts or insolvents or inmates of a prison can't run

Well, if you're not reading this piece behind bars or fall in any of the other categories, you're allowed to run. Now it's time to start organizing your campaign

This is the first year that you must register your intentions with the city clerk even before you seek the nomination to run.

Unless you register, your campaign organization isn't allowed to raise or spend any money - and what's an election campaign without buttons, posters and other assorted paraphernalia? These cost money, you know.

On your registration form, due before Oct. 17, you have to appoint a chief financial officer for your campaign (even if it's yourself), an auditor if you're spending over $10,000 on the above mentioned paraphernalia, campaign bank account and a place where your records will be kept.

With this form in the hands hands of your municipality's clerk, you're almost ready to stand on a soap box and give a political speech. Almost.

NOMINATIONS

Between Oct. 13 and 17, ou have to provide the ciy clerk with a nomination sheet filled with the names 10 eligible voters.

Belleville City Clerk Bill Moreton suggests you provide a few more names just in case some of the names on the list aren't eligible to vote in the municipality for one reason or another

PREPARING FOR '88 MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Well, you have the support of ten voting friends and all your forms are filled out - you're ready to run.

SPENDING LIMITS

But before you rent the Goodyear blimp with "VOTE FOR JOE (or JANE)" on the side of it, you better look at the cost. There are limits to the amount you can spend on your campaign this year and that expense might stretch your budget a lit-

If you're running for mayor, you're allowed to spend $5,500 plus 50 cents for every member of the electorate. If you're an alderman, you can spend the same amount per voter but start with a base of $3,500. Based on last year, you can count on approximately 28,000 voters in Belleville or $14,000. Up-

"This is so a guy with limited means isn't at a disadvantage," said Mr.

CONTRIBUTIONS

how you get your money as well - a friend in Sicily wanting to donate $100,000 in a briefcase is definitely out.

Contribution Sources must be individuals living in Ontario, corporations that do business in Ontario and unions holding bargaining rights in On-tario. And unless you are drawing on your own funds or your spouse's, contributions are limited to $750.

But cost isn't the only restriction on your advertising blitz.

ADVERTISING

No candidate can begin advertising in the media or on outdoor commercial advertising (billboards, etc.) until 28 days before the polling day.

CITY STRIVES FOR EASY ACCESS

Belleville City Clerk Bill Moreton is now in the process of finding po places and is putting effort into finding places with access to the handicapped.

"We're doing the very best we can to have all polls accessible," he said. "But it's not always possi-As a result, he is encouraging all people who forsee needing this access to vote during advance polling at the Belleville Recreation Center.

POLL WORKERS NEEDED IN COMING ELECTION

Belleville city clerk Bill Moreton is looking for a few good men (or women) to help at the polls.

A deputy returning of-ficer and poll clerk is need-ed at each poll on election day. The pay for this job is $76 for the deputy returning officer and $60 for the poll clerk.

The only requirement is you must be 18 years old. But you can't be working for a candidate either.

Polling officials must also train for one day before the election.

billboards the day before polling day or advertise on the day itself.

But this 28 day limit applies only to this type of advertising. Old favourites such as lawn signs, buttons and pamphlets can be used any time after the campaign period.

If you want a special price on media advertising, however, you're out of luck. The media cannot give special rates to you for advertising at election time. All candidates are equal until some of them

So you've filled out all the forms, followed all the rules, dotted your "i"s and crossed your "t"s, you're ready for the election. And if the electorate is ready for you, you'll be sitting on council.

All that work for an alderman's salary $8,570.

Belleville City Clerk Bill Moreton dusts off a hallot box to be used in the upcoming municipal elections.

Starring: Michael Caine (Frank Janes), James Fox (B. Nigel Havers (Bob Jones), Felicity Dean (Cynthia Goodbourne), Sir John Guilgud (Sir Adrian Chapple)

From the beginning, it is clear that this movie will require close attention. It is about Bob Jone (Havers), an officer in a British government department that deals with national security. A Russian spy has been discovered in the department and all employees are asked to inform on any colleagues who are acting suspiciously.

This is the final straw for Jones, who is sick of the deceit and the intrigues in what he calls a "secret world". Before he can resign, a friend and fellow worker dies of what is declared a suicide.
Jones is positive that he has been murdered to keep him quiet about something, and he suspects the orders for the execution came from senior people in his own department. This disturbs him so much he decides to "blow the whistle", by giving an investigative reporter details about some of the sleazy behaviour of the government brass.

If the actions taken by the senior officials in this film are true-to-life, the world is in a sorry state. The acting is realistic enough to convince you that the events are possible. Michael Caine, as Bob's father, gives a first-rate portrayal of a jaded, but concerned busingssman. James Fox is totally unlikeable in his role as the shadowy head of security, who manipulates or destroys anyone who opposes him. The film should keep most viewers interested, despite its complexity.

Although it contains nothing that is graphically offensive, this is not a film for children.

It took only one ballot on Saturday for Prince Edward-Hastings Liberals to decide who they wanted to lead them into the next federal election - Lyle Vanclief.

Amidst the fanfare which usually accompanies such a victory, nominees Louis Desjardins and Ted Jianopoulos pledged solidarity to the new candidate in traditional speeches before the awaited acceptance speech. Nominee John Fryters, however, was notably silent as he deferred a speech of solidarity and stood apart from other candidates at the edge of the stage. Mulroney government

LOVE OF THE CITY IS WHAT MAKES HIM RUN

By John G. Smith

A candidate describing himself as having the 'firepower" needed to run has thrown his hat into the ring for the Belleville mayoralty race.

Kenzo Dozono, a local karate instructor and quality control manager at Beclawat Canada, is that firepower. And he's decided to run because of his dissatisfaction with the present council. In his opinion, the best way to fight the majority of council's policies is to be mayor.

"Three years ago we made a very big mistake," he said, pointing out the landslide that returned George Zegouras to office.

"Everybody's afraid to stand up to him," he said. 'They've lost their sense of community responsibili-

The first day of school

For the first time in three weeks, this column will not be devoted to Elvis Presley, alive or dead. In fact, over the past week, Elvis Presley has not been sighted in the Quinte area. We repeat. He has not been sighted.

THE FIRST DAY OF SCHOOL

Tuesday morning, the first day of school, and the Kid is awake bright and early. We hear him laying in bed slowly saying over and over again: "it's a rotten day. It's a rotten day. It's a rough day. It's a rough he is looking at a poster on his wall, trying to remember how the words go. The poster is of a soulful looking dog with the words "It's a ruff day."

Whew! We thought he was unhappy about his first day of kindergarten.

The kid goes downstairs and checks out his fire engine red lunchpail. Yep, it's still there. He runs wildly through the living room and back into the kitchen to check out his fire engine red thermos. Yep, it's still there. He runs out again, through the front hall, around the living room once and under the table through the dining room and back through the kitchen, hollering as he goes. He bounces around on his toes, makes faces at his dad who is filling his thermos and making his hunch. He runs sinzing at the around on its loces, inakes sizes at all so dua words mining his thermos and making his lunch. He runs singing at the top of his lungs around the living room again, back through the kitchen, grabs his lunch pail and runs with it to the door. He's like a wind up toy — he keeps running around and singing and shouting and making faces on and on and on

Is he excited about going to school? You tell me

P.S. This column is not about Elvis Presley. We aren't going to tell you about how we didn't see him in the meat section at Friendly Fred's Food Market in Picton.

Before we all get into a tizzy about that, consider this fact, however. How many presidents have those youngsters lived under? Eight year olds would have been born just before Ronald Reagan swept Jimmy Carter and 12 year olds would have been born just before Carter beat 12 year olds would have been born just before Carter beat out Gerald (Can't-Chew-Gum-And-Walk) Ford. And frankly, even people who lived through the Ford and Carter presidencies have trouble remembering them. Still, the survey gives reason to pause. What are we teaching our youngsters? Is Blue Light beer more important than Brian Mulroney? Should OV be better known that Pierre Trudeau? Okay, Joe Who was forgettable as prime minister, but should Diferbaker and Pearson be forecatten, while children can chant beer trademarks as forgotten while children can chant beer trademarks as nursery ryhmes?

We'll have to shelve that question. Shhhh, there's a beer commercial just coming on

OZONE AND SAFE SEX

We interrupt this message on ozone and sex to report that Elvis has not been sighted this week in the officer's mess at CFB Trenton. As far as we're concerned, that's a dead issue. Not Elvis, just the issue.

The ozone layer has an impact on a lot of things — the greenhouse effect, for example — but safe sex?

Yep, say medical researchers.

Apparently ozone causes holes in condoms. After 72 Apparenty ozone hours exposure to a level of ozone equivalent to a Stage 1 smog alert in Southern California, all but two of 20 unroll.

David Barbe Director of Specialty Printing Audrey Francescone Circulation

The Editor:

I would like to address some concerns raised recently in the letter from Alastair J. Berry.

Politics and love

Last week, Kenzo Dozono announced his intention to run for mayor of Belleville, the first candidate in the 1988 Belleville municipal election to officially announce his intentions as everyone continues to wonder whether George Zegouras will run again for

This editorial is not an endorsement of Mr. Dozono's candidacy, it is, however, an endorsement of his attitude.

Mr. Dozono doesn't like what is going on at city hall or how city council operates. He doesn't like the direction Belleville is taking. He feels the area's booming development is unplanned and shortsighted

You may agree or disagree with him - and many share his concerns — but the point is that Mr. Dozono is putting his money where his mouth is. He is doing something about it by running for office. He figures that if you don't like the way things are run, then run yourself - and he is doing so despite the fact that he knows he has no hope of winning, despite the fact that it could cost him his job, despite the money the campaign will inevitably cost him

And why? Because he loves Belleville and cares enough about it to want to make his concerns known, trying to influence the direction in which the city goes and grows.

That's what politics should be about. Love should lay at the root of every political campaign, not love of power or love of prestige, but love for the city or town, township or village, province or nation, that person will represent and influence and change. A politician can move mountains and earn a place in history books, but without that love, he is only a clanging cymbal, a bag of wind let loose to no particular purpose.

All life is valuable

IN YOUR OPINION

He seeks to remind us that many Canadians are non-Christian and that it is a "violation of freedom" to impose "Christian" morals on such a society. I would suggest to him that the laws of this and many countries are based on "Christian" values. If we cannot accept these basic rules and values as being for the good of all society whose morals will be judge by? Yours? Mine?

I would agree with the writer in saying that all life is sacred, yes, even a blade of grass. Since the life of a baby is without question more valuable than that of a blade of grass, should it not be saved from destruction by abortion? You seem to contradict yourself in your letter, Mr. Berry.

Think about it. Alice Dustin Carrying Place

The citizens of this nation who believe in the protection of babies from the moment of conception should be outraged because the 100,000 or more of us who wrote our prime minister and MPs have been completely ig-nored! If this were not true, a fourth option would have been included reading: "an abortion would be prohibited except in the extreme rare situation where the medical profession has done everything in their power to save the lives of both mother and child and failed, thus abortion is absolutely essential to save the life of the mother." Ed Broadbent was the only leader to have the guts to vote! Although I vehemently disagree with his pro-abortion stance, I applaud his courage to have his vote recorded. Neither Prime Minister Mulroney or Opposition Leader John Turner had the courage to be present to vote so that the people of Canada would know where they stand on this important issue of abor-

WE STAND ON GUARD

-SEPTEMBER 14-

Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner" on Sept. 14, 1814. Watching from a British ship as it shelled Fort McHenry, he must have felt like someone looking on from a neighbour's porch while the neighbor's kid beat up his own.

while the neignfor's kill ose.
His lyrics, set to an English hymn tune, became America's national anthem in 1931.
The version popular today has one small change in the last line, which now goes, "And the home of the brave. Play ball." It's a complicated tune, and even professionals flub the words. In comparison, "O Canada" is BY FRED WEBSTER more melodic, and it doesn't matter what happens to the words, since everybody sings different ones anyway.

Northrope Frye coined the phrase "the Canadian genius for compromise," which is evident in our na-tional anthem. Poet Robert Stanley Weir's English words are set to an Americanized French Canadian's music

When we officially adopted it in 1980, we changed some lines too. "From far and wide" and "God keep our land" replaced two of the original "We stand on guard" phrases. By 1980 our armed forces were such that to stand on guard three times was em-barassing enough, but five times would have been to hilarious. If anyone was to keep our land glorious and free, it had to be God.

and free, it had to be God.

Even with English words the road to acceptance was bumpy. The Kingston Whig Standard reported on Feb: 10, 1956 that Lincoln County Ontario Orangemen labelled as "subversive and unpatriotic" the singing of "O Canada" in St. Catharines' schools. God save the Orangemen, too. The evolving American flag that inspired Key had 15 stars and stripes. It's now up to 60 stars but has reverted to 13 stripes for the original Thirteen Colonies. Perhaps free trade will some day lead to our calling it "The Stars and Stripes and Maple Leaves."

Should we rate 12, a leaf for each province and territory, let's treasure them. They may soon be the only 12 left, thanks to acid rain.

ROBBER ASSAULTS COUPLE

Quinte Crime Stoppers would like public assistance in solving a robbery and assault that occurred at 106 George St., Trenton, on July 13, 1988 at 3:30 A.M.

A lone male forced the front door to the home of an elderly couple, gaining access into the house. One of the residents was sleeping on a couch in the living room. The robber, using a small flashlight to find his way in the dark, awakened the elderly gentleman and started to choke him, forcing him face down onto the floor. The victim's hands were forced behind his back and secured with white surgical tape. The robber demanded money.

The noise awakened the female resident who was sleeping in an adjacent bedroom. When she went to check, she was also ordered to lie face down on the floor. The robber remained in the immediate area, demanding money, and eventually removed a small sum from a purse in the living room. He rendered the telephones inoperable and ran out the front door.

The male victim received minor cuts and bruises from the rough handling. The female victim was unharmed. Neither victim heard a vehicle start up from the immediate area The robber is described as 5'11", thin build, short hair, dark clothing, soft, young sounding voice, no

How to feed your lawn for winter ARDENING

AND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

This is the time for late summer feeding of lawns. Or is it? For more years than I can remember, late summer feeding with a low-nitrogen fertilizer was the norm. But there is a new school of thought that says a late fall feeding with a high-nitrogen fer-says a face fail feeding with a nigh-nitrogen restilizer is a better way to go.

The philosophy behind a low-nitrogen with higher phosphorous and potash content seemed straightforward enough. Nitrogen sponsors foliar growth, and the last thing you want going into minds, is a low that is preserving with soft help winter is a lawn that is prospering with soft, lush top growth with almost certain winter kill. The point of higher phosphorous was to stimulate seeding and deep root growth. And since potash promotes cellular strength, it has been purported to gird a lawn against the rigors of winter.

But now, some experts are saying that we should wait until the first freeze-up when lawns are star-ting to go dormant and then apply a high-nitrogen fertilizer, based on the concept that it will be taken up in the grass tillers and will be available for a up in the grass tillers and will be available for a faster, earlier green-up next spring. However, there are two things that bother me about this idea.

The article that recommends this action also "stated that there was no such thing as winter kill in lawns in Southern Ontario, which as far as I am concerned, makes the whole idea suspect. And when you ask the proponents of the late high-nitrogen feeding if this dispells the need for the spring feeding of lawns, they get awfully vague. In addition, I particularly like the low-nitrogen formula if you are going to be doing and seeding, again because of the phosphorous and potash content. But in either case, the choice is yours.

But in either case, the choice is yours.

We are getting close to the final seeding date so if you have any patching to do, now is the time. If your lawn is in good shape, it is a waste of time and money to scatter seed at random. But if you have areas of kill-off or sparseness, I would suggest you get at it this weekend. And all you require is a get at it this weekend. And all you require is a soiless top dressing, a rake, a high-phosphorous fertilizer and the best quality grass seed you can buy. Many gardeners who would never consider buying a poor quality tree, shrub or evergreen, think nothing of buying the cheapest grass seed that is available and then wonder about the quality of

A good quality seed mixture should be a combina-A good quanty seed mixture should be a confining tion of three grasses - blue grass, fescue and perennial rye. The Kentucky blue grass is neither blue nor does it come from Kentucky. In fact, most varieties are discovered in a natural state such 'Banff'', a variety that was discovered on the Banff Springs golf course. Like most blue grasses, it is finely textured, spreads well and has good resistance to drought and freezing. Blue grass should make up 60 per cent of a quality grass seed

The fescues and the ryes each have a role in the composition of a good-looking, healthy lawn and we'll talk about them next week.

ather round folks, this one is sexier than life in a harem. Actually, our tale of sex intrigue and murder takes place in the unharem-like atmosphere of a tiny white bungalow in Baldwin, New York

Everett Appelgate was a 40-year-old, unimpressive man with the glandular activity of an 18 year old. Maybe even more. Ev, who made his living toiling at the Nassau County Veterans Bureau, was married to a five-foot tall lady, who tipped the Toledos at 250 pounds. Ada Appelgate sort of waddled around the bungalow. In 1934, when our tale unfolds, the Appelgates were the proud parents of 11vear-old Agnes Down at work one day, fellow employee John Creighton mentioned to Ev that he was having some trouble making ends meet. What with the rent he had to pay and the cost of raising a family, it was rough to get ahead of the game. Good-hearted Ev suggested that John, along, with his wife, Mary, and their two children. Ruth, 16 and John Jr., II, move into the little white bungalow on Bryant Place in Baldwin.

Sleeping arrangements were worked out. Ev and Adv.

Place in Baldwin.

Sleeping arrangements were worked out. Ev and Ada sleepin on bedroom, John and Mary in bedroom number two. Agnes and Ruth sleep in the attic, while John, Jr., made do with a cot on the porch.

Ev took one look at Mary Creighton and immediately realized she had all the attributes which bilimplike Ada lacked. She had a dark complexion, full, sensuous lips and a figure which would cause a Franciscan monk to consider leaving the order.

One day, Mary was ill and stayed home. Ev, sly dog that he was, figured the veterans would get along without him for a few hours. He came home from work early, It was most natural for him to look in on Mary. He did that and more. As things unfolded that day, he and did that and more. As things unfolded that day, he and Mary performed that ancient ritual made fashionable way back when Adam and Eve were traipsing around the garden wearing little more than assorted fig leaves.

Torrid affair

The affair, which can only be described as torrid, went on smooth as silk for a year. Well, not exactly like silk - there was one rough spot. Ev discovered, while reading a report of old crimes, that his lover, Mary, and her husband, John, had been charged with poisoning Mary's brother, Raymond, in Newark in 1923. When he faced Mary with this disconcerting bit of history, she didn't bat an eyelash. For starters, it was old news. Secondly, Mary and John had been acquitted, and lastly her nutly brother had not been murdered at all. He had committed suicide and made it look like murder. Ev fell much better after hearing this detailed explanation. The romance went on its merry way. On many occasions, Ev talked his wife into taking sleeping pills. As she gently socred the night away, Mary would gingerly climit to their bed to pass the night away with her lover. Ev wouldn't leave good enough alone. He couldn't help but notice that Ruth was now 17-years-old. What a difference a year can make. It dight take Mary long to each of the property of the proper had other than a relative's plassing interest in fine. What's more, Ruthie loved it. It didn't take Mary long to realize what was happening. Ev was up half the night "checking on the children in the attic", as he put it. Mary correctly figured he was doing more than checking. One day she followed her daughter and Ev behind the bungalow and caught them in the act.

Mary was furious Everyone was embarrassed. Mary took her daughter aside and had a heart to heart chat. Ruth imparted the distressing information that matters were even more serious than they appeared on the surface. She was pregnant. Mary then had a chat with Ev. He sort of shook her up with the revelation that he was madly in lowe with Ruth. He would even marry her if only he wasn't already married to mammoth Ada. Quick as a bunny, Mary had a solution. Let's murder Ada. It wouldn't be that difficult. After all, she had knocked off her brother years ago in Newark. Even her husband never knew the truth about that one.

Ev agreed. It was the only sensible thing to do.

husband never knew the truin about that one. Ev agreed. It was the only sensible thing to do. Murder Ada, marry Ruth, legitimize the baby and give up his old lover Mary, who would become his mother-in-law. Mary, who obviously had a flair for this sort of thing, picked up a supply of a handy little product called Rough on Rats. Its main ingredient - what else but assenic.

Just at this critical planning stage, a nosy neighbour read a magazine article about the old murder in Newark. She couldn't believe it. Mary and John Creighton accused of murder! The neighbor told Ada, who in turn told Ev, who feigned surprise. He ran to Mary, who had a chat with the neighbor explaining that, after Pregnant after all.

But things had gone too far. Mary and Ev decided to keep up their poisonous ways. Mary graciously agreed to look after Ada during the day. When Ev wasn't tied up with other pursuits, he looked after her at night. Both placed poison in her medicine.

On Sept. 27, 1935, Ada died in her sleep. Mary and Ev celebrated the event by having sexual intercourse, for old time's sake. They then called the doctor, who signed the death certificate, citing the cause of death as "coronary arterial occlusion."

Naturally enough, that nosy neighbor, who knew of Mary's past, thought the entire scenarios smelled to high heaven. She called police. Detectives checked out the old Newark poison case and realized they had a suspicious death on their hands.

They questioned Ev, who assured them they were mistaken in their suspicions. To use his own words, "the two women were like sisters." Detectives also questioned the doctor who had signed the death certificate. He was having second thoughts. An autopsy on Ada's body was ordered.

Meanwhile, police staked out the little white cottage on Bryant Place. When Ev rushed home to tell Mary that there was going to be an autopsy, she grabbed the quarter full box of Rough on Rats and threw it over her back fence onto a garbage heap. An alert police officer witnessed this act and retrieved the incriminating poison. Results of the autopsy confirmed what everyone knew. Ada had been poisoned.

Ruth filled in a few juicy details. Mary Creighton and Everett Appelgate were tried, convicted and sentenced to death. Both were executed in Sing Sing's electric chair.

LENNON STRUGGLED TO FIND PEACE

By David Botting

The Beatles burst on the rock scene in the early sixties to become the most popular group of all time. As John Lennon once said with characteristic bluntness, at the height of Beatlemania, they had become more popular than Jesus Christ.

With fame came pressures, the pressure to produce more hit records, the pressure of sudden and fabulous wealth, the pressure of fans who recognized members of the group everywhere.

Peter Quaife, bass guitarist of the Kinks, un-til he left in 1972, can relate to that. The Kinks often played with the Beatles and the Rolling Stones in the early sixties and at one time were rank-ed second in popularity to the Beatles.

"We (the Kinks) stayed in Muswell Hill" where the members of the group grew up, said Peter. "Yo just known as you." puts on a Muswell Hill ac-

"You walk away from the table in a restaurant and you see hordes of people descending on it to take your napkin because you wiped your lips on it. They'd steal the salt cellars because you used them." because you used them, Peter says, describing what it was like for the Beatles. "Then the owner

CORPORATE CHALLENGE A CREDIT TO ORGANIZERS

THE ARMCHAIR ATHLETE RY JOHN G. SMITH

Last Sunday, 54 teams from various corporations around the city participated in the second annual Corporate Challenge at Loyalist College.

No, they weren't playing football or entering a formal track meet. They were just out for a day of team spirit and sportsmanship. And for that, they should be congratulated.

Let's face it. Can you think of something more fun than pushing an egg with your nose, navigating with your nose, navigating an obstacle course while blindfolded or riding a scooter? And in some cases, all while wearing the costume your team design-

Donna Chambers and the organizing committee for this event deserve more credit than I can possibly give them in the space of one column. Even Mother Nature co-operated with

Now comes the real challenge Belleville — how many teams can we get out for next year.?

Guy Lafleur, former hockey great for the Montreal Canadians, is trying to come out of retirement. Why not? It seems like the thing to do these days.

It seems that Wayne
Gretzky's trade to the L.A.

Kings and the team's subsequent request for Mike Bossy to join their roster sparked his interest. But it didn't quite spark

So he did what everyone does when they want to work — he went hunting for a job, and now he may have found one.

The Rangers have of-fered him a contract if he can make the team. This is something he hasn't had to do in a while.

And he must be serious. After all, he hasn't had a cigarette in over two weeks. But I wonder if that sacrifice and his experience will help him out-skate his vounger opponents?

OLD VILLAGE Paints offer to the architect, decorator, and home owner a series of authentic colors representative of those used in colonial America. They are formulated for use either inside or outside, over a great variety of substrates. Hiding level, durability, and application properties of OLD VILLAGE Paints are of the highest order. This however, does not imply that sound painting practices can be ignored.

OLD VILLAGE is not offered as a complete collection. It is rather a representative series and is indeed supplemented by an ever growing colonial color library available for specific applications.

Once again we have taken that extra step to provide you, our clients, with the finest quality products at the most competitive prices. Drop into our New Showroom or call one of our courteous professional sales consultants.

NORTHUMBERLAND FISHING DERBY STILL UNDERWAY

For those who are willing to do a bit of searching, there's been some good walleye angling of late. Finding deep water adjacent to good structure should put one over the fish. Deep running minnow imitations such as shad raps and wally divers have been putting the fish on the stringer with late afternoon and evening as the peak periods.

THE NET RESULT

By Bruce Elliott

Aboard the Bud fishing craft last week walleye in the two to six pound range were boated in waneye in the two to six pound range were coated in the big bay area between 6 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Twelve to 14 feet of water was the most productive area, although steadily declining water temperatures may bring them to more shallow dep-ths shortly.

Two anglers trolling the Murray Canal were somewhat surpristed to lift aboard five walleye us-ing rebels off downriggers. Perhaps the fish are returning through the canal to the Bay of Quinte after residing in the cooler climes of Lake Ontario during the summer.

Some local bass fishermen are having a heyday ing smallmouths recently.

Snake Island is reported to have been excep-tionally productive. Minnow sweetened jigs have been the weapon for the successful anglers

Lake Ontario

As expected, the salmon fishing has begun to tail off as the fish return to their spawning grounds in New York State. While catches of five or more fish are still common, the bulk of those boated have been the smaller chinook in the two year old class

The rainbow action is beginning to heat up as the 'false' fall spawners head to near the stream mouths. Smaller spoons such as little cleos and alpena diamonds are very productive this time of year for offshore anglers, while fresh or preserved roe is the mainstay for those fishing the gravel beaches and streams.

Bits and Bites

If fishing the Trenton reaches of the bay or any waters of Northumberland County, don't forget to get your ticket for the Northumberland Fishing Quest, which runs through to Nov. 12. This event is Quest, which runs through to Nov. 12. This event is part of the national Budweiser series, and with their assistance, Central Lake Ontario Sport Anglers is endeavouring to raise much-needed revenue for sport fishing and conservation-related projects. Bass, walleye, trout and salmon are the quarry while the local weightin stations are at Turner's Teachle Organization and Simona Carm. Survey while the local weigh-in stations are at Turner's Tackle (Carrying Place) and Simpson Camp Supplies (Brighton). Participate!

Those who doubt the quality of fishing possessed by this region only need to look at the winner of North America's largest derby. A 41-pound-plus king salmon was wrestled from Brighton waters and picked up first place—and over $100,000 in prizes—in the Great Salmon Hunt. Lunge, bass, walleye, trout or salmon—we have it all right on our own doorsten.

22 Union St. Picton 476-4133 Dale Baker, manager of a local coffee house, presented two petitions to Belleville coucil last Monday evening.

The first petition was signed by 73 of 76 store owners asked in the downtown area to ask that council appoint another alderman to the Downtown Belleville Association.

Alderman Finkle sits on the association and Baker accuses that he's missed the majority of the meetings.

A second petition of over 1200 signatures called for public washroom facilities to be available in the new city hall.

Although no outside access washrooms will be available, people conducting business in city hell will have washroom acc...s during business hours, pointed out Mayor Zegouras

PLAZA OPENS

Bob and Jane Marcotte were proud to recently open the Meyer's Pier Market. With 10,000 square feet of space and seven tenants, the plaza is located between South Pinnacle and South Front Streets in Belleville at the former location of Denz's Bisvele.

former location of Doug's Bicycle.
Originally from this area, Mr. Marcotte was a vice president of Rollins Construction for six years before the company was sold. After living in the Markham and Scarborough areas, he and his wife moved back here a year and a half ago. Since then they have built several developments and have others in construction or on the drawing board, including another plaza on Dundas Street East and several apartment buildings on Cannifton Road and Tracey Streets.

PLANNING CALLED 'PATCH-UP JOB'

He also accused the council of revising the official plan in a "Mickey Mouse" manner. "We can't afford to have a patch-up job," he stressed.

"Progress is meaningless if we destroy our environment," he said in a call for saving waterfront land and parks in the city.

The city's high development profile is short sighted, he said. "For the future, such small minded planning will create

As the first candidate to announce his intentions, Mr. Dozono is first to criticize people waiting to see if George Zegouras will run again before they announce their intentions.

"You can't change your fundamentalism or belief if he does or doesn't run," he said. "It's irresponsible for this community ... there's no time to wait and see."

"If your little girl is attacked by a stranger, you don't wait and see," he pointed out. "You have the instinct to rescue her because of your love." And it's a love for the city that has brought Mr. Dozono into the race.

"I have no chance but I don't change my principles or believe because I have no chance" he said.

or obeles betaues the chance, he said.

"You have to be willing to sacrifice," he said. With the time required to run a campaign, he says he may lose his job but "the election is more important to weather my job."

me than my job."

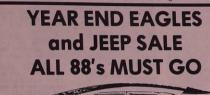

"An election is the only way we (citizens) can loud our voice" he said.

our voice," he said.

Mr. Dozono accuses many members of council of thinking of their positions as a business and not a civic responsibility.

"They're tired ... they have no enthusiasm," he said. And without these, he feels they should be "phased out."

But there is little question of the energy and enthusiasm he has. "I put whole energy into everything I do," he proudly proclaimed.

ARTHRITIS AFFECTS YOUNG AND OLD

By John G. Smith

One in seven Canadians has arthritis.

That's almost four million people - more than the total combined poulation of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, P.E.I., Newfoundland and both the Yukon and Northwest Territories. That's quite a statistic.

But despite how widespread the disease is, few people know anything about it and that's one of the reasons September is Arthritis Mon-research into this affliction and providing information to those who want to find out more about it.

Fortunately, the number disease each year, of people afflicted in this area of the country is only considered "average," said George Moir, public rela-tions coordinator for the local chapter of the society. But people are affected and that's why a local goal of Arthritis as a disease of the aged is a myth. Seven-vear-old Kenneth Aube is proof of that.

Last year, Kenneth was suffering with fevers, strep throat and swelling joints: Only after his parents took him from doctor to doctor was he diagnosed as having arthritis.

With the aid of treatments, exercises and medication Kenneth is now able to do things that he once couldn't, such as going up or down stairs and get into a bathtub on

Although he can't run as fast as the other kids, Ken-neth can ride his bike and swim for fun as well as therapy. After he runs a lot, he's sore the next day but he is progressing.

Kenneth is going into Grade 2 at Holy Rosary School this September for the same routine that any seven-year-old would follow, but in addition, he has another to follow.

EXERCISES

Each day, along with his medication, he goes through a series of exer-cises to help each joint. On Wednesdays, he's visited by a member of the society who helps him with the exercises and provides some variety to them so he doesn't get bored. On Fridays he gets a blood test and every six weeks a doctor in Toronto checks his progress.

These and other routines have brought him a long way in a year, but he still has a long way to go. He can't make a fist and it hurts to touch his toes, but the important thing is, progress is being made.

And with supported research, more progress can be made.

Leanar Wilson, 63, is afflicted with arthritis as well, and she faces similar problems to Kenneth.

Since she was 18, Mrs. Wilson has had arthritis and went through the same early symptoms of swelling joints and fever that Kenneth is going through.

CHORES

But her arthritis has progressed and daily chores can take a lot of effort. Where there's a will, there's a way," she said.

Cutting a turnip requires using a hammer to push the knife through and various tools are needed to open jars, but she

AGAINST ALL ODDS: (1984), 128 minutes Director: Taylor Hackford

LINECTOR: 103/107 HACKJOTA Starring: Rachel Ward Uessie Wylerl, Jeff Bridges (Terry Broganl, James Woods (Jake Wisel, Alex Karras (Hank Sully), Jane Greer (Mrs. Wyler), Richard Widmark (Ben Caxton)

This is a remake of the 1947 Robert Mitchum-Kirk Douglas film, Out of the Past. It is a movie that cannot, in good conscience, be recommended without qualification. This team of reviewers could reach no consensus on whether it is or is not worth understand anything about anything:

On the negative side, some of the notes are: "very obscure"..."car race - terrible"..."everyone seems bad, but why?"..."seems very long"..."did not bad, but why?' understand anything about anything!

On the positive side, typical comments are:
"stupid but hair-raising car race in L.A."..."beautiful shots of Mexican Caribean coast"..."sort of slow for a while, then gets very dramatic and complicated'

It is about a pro football player (Bridges) who is fired. Having no money but many debts, he agrees to try to locate and bring back the estranged girl friend of an unsavory acquaintance (Woods) for $30,000. He traces her to Cozumel, Mexico. After sparring around somewhat, they begin a steamy ove affair, putting off all thoughts of how they can deal with things back home

It does go on too long. The motivations and the sub-plots are complicated and often obscure, but the acting, the scenery and a sense of curiosity about the outcome should be sufficient to satisfy those people who enjoy an action film.

The director, Taylor Hackford, was also responsible for An Officer and an Gentleman, White Nights, and The Idolmaker.

This film contains all the bad things: sex, violence and extremely foul language. It is hardly suitable for children or the faint of heart.

FIRM FIGHTS LAW SOCIETY 'MONOPOLY'

By John G. Smith

Vol. 3, No. 39

Tuesday Sept. 20, 1988

In the 1937 movie Every Day's a Holiday, Mae West said, "It ain't no sin if you crack a few laws now and then, just so long as you don't break any." While the Law Society of Upper Canada has laid charges against Quinte Paralegal Services for what it sees as breaking the law, the owners of the service see themselves as simply cracking the "monopoly" created by members of the society.

Trying to crack such a "monopoly" isn't without its risks, but owners Heather Anne and Jim Lapsley are prepared to take them.

Despite a ruling which could be made against them under the Law Society Act, the couple plans to circumvent any penalties placed against them.

"I'm not going to roll over ... I have a right to earn a living," said Mrs. Lapsley, threatening to open under another name if a ruling closes their business. And responding to the possibility of a $1000 fine for each charge, $1000 fine for each charge, she plans to defy them and "go to jail first" rather than pay.

But why is the Law Society charging them?

Mrs. Lapsley claims the society was called in by a group of local lawyers "who felt we shouldn't be in business anymore" in business anymore.

she pushed her wheelchair along the entire course. Shown below is Shella Walsh, the first woman to cross the finish line with a time of 46:15. Stories conflict between both as to whether a reccomendation was given by the couple on the topic or not. Under the Law Society Act, only lawyers can dispense this advice. But she did admit to discussing different types of shares with the investigator.

Charges have been laid under the act of practicing, acting and holding themselves out as bar-risters and solicitors— something they claim they've never done.

Quinte Paralegal offers services ranging from ac-counting and bookkeeping to handling uncontested divorces, wills, highway traffic offences and incorporations with single parties or couples. They feel they have the right to operate all of these services, but the Law Society

LAW SOCIETY ADVOCATES LEGAL TRAINING

The main issue of the case is whether or not they have a right to offer these

"We're concerned about any organization offering legal services without the proper training," said Patrick Ballantyne, prosecuting attorney for the case, which will be tried Nov. 14. "There's no guarantee of competence ... there has to be some pro-tection for the public," he said, noting that the Law Society monitors lawyers.

And Quinte Paralegal isn't the only operation of-fering this type of service. Last year, Mr. Ballantyne prosecuted 12 similar cases and had 12 successful convictions — only making a dent in the 220 active files now being looked at, 39 of which are under active in-

"We've increased the number of investigations and the number of prosecutions," he said.

Although the Law Socie-Act doesn't actually define what a harrister or solicitor is, case law has stipulated that it's soone who's passed the bar examination

Except for readings on the subject, the Lapsleys don't have this training. Jim Lapsley worked ten years at Revenue Canada where his wife also worked for under two years

But the couple doesn't claim to be lawyers. "We don't interpret the law," she said. "We just fill out the forms."

They started the business because "lawyers are charging too much." Ironically, it'll be a member of this society they're paying which will influence how the gavel falls in Trenton Provincial

Affordable law

escone Circulation

Charges laid against Quinte Paralegal Services by the Law Society of Upper Canada raise a number of questions about paralegal organizations.

Do they have the right to dispense legal advice without training? Should the Law Society of Upper Canada be able to hold a monopoly on this advice?

The biggest complaint about these organizations is that the operators don't require formal training in the law they're dealing with. At best, the legal system is a complicated one and people without training in it couldn't possibly understand it as well as a lawyer.

Even though they work with undisputed cases and simply "fill out the forms," cases can always become complicated. Nothing in the law is ever black and white.

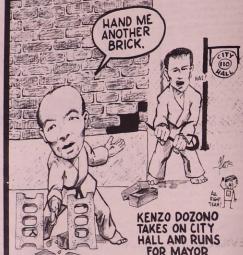

If the advice a customer is given is wrong or a form is filled out without a crucial component, they have no method of legal recourse other than small claims court.

The Law Society of Upper Canada, at least, provides a system to monitor the practice of its members — members who have been trained as

A problem lies, however, with the fees lawyers charge. Not everybody can afford them for day-today legal matters.

A solution to this problem would be to adopt a notary system where people can be trained for certain aspects of the law such as wills, undisputed divorces, incorporations and traffic offences. They may simply fill out the paperwork but they'd be trained to understand what it means.

This system would return day-to-day legal matters into everybody's hands - not just to those who

Reader poses moral question

Dear Sir:

May I reply to Alice Justin's criticism of my let. ter? Christian moral values versus other ethical values reduces to a series of opi-nions, and I accept that Alice Justin's opinion has as much weight as mine.

The question of the value of an unborn human fetus versus that of a blade of grass is much more controversial. Surely, it is obvious that mankind cannon survive on the face of the earth without grass, yet grass can survive very well without mankind.

Please explain this paradox, Alice. A study of the Book of Proverbs might help your deliberations.

people of our land who are in the midst of great turmoil in their church over the ordination of homosex uals and lesbians to the CHEERS - To Quinte residents who are ministry. The very fact that such a thing would be even considered must break the hearts of our Christian brothers and sisters.

How can a person living this lifestyle hope to give the kind of spiritual leadership that a pastor must give to people in his parish? A pastor, more than anyone in the com munity, must be a man of deep conviction and faith

Say 'no' to homosexual lifestyles in Christ. He should set an example in the things he and does for his parishioners to follow.

In the Bible, 1 Timothy 3:2-3, states that the "pastor must be above reproach, the husband of but one wife, temperate, self-controlled, respectable, hospitable, able to teach, not given to much wine, not violent but gentle, not quarrelsome and not a lover of money."

The three original political parties are working hand in glove with the homosexual community in giving them special rights and privileges that should not be granted to those living this kind of immoral lifestyle. If the federal government ever amends the Charter of Rights to prohibit discrimination against anyone on the basis of sexual orientation. then the government could force all churches to hire homosexuals and lesbians to be ministers or fill any other position in the church whether we approve or not.

The Christian Heritage Party is the only party to take a firm stand on the homosexual issue. "The Christian Heritage Party affirms that the family has been instituted by God as the basis of society. We also acknowledge that a faithful marriage relationship between one man and woman has been established by God as the basis of the family. Any other form of union is pro-hibited by the Bible because widespread violation on these principles would destroy the physical health and moral strength of any society. Legislative and administrative bodies should not grant special rights to sexually aberrant individuals or groups. We advocate the repeal of all such laws and regula-

And while crisscrossing the country searching for signatures on his "pets for seniors" campaign, he is also searching for candidates for the next federal election campaign.

Although he hasn't found many candidates yet, he says support is running high

"I haven't talked to a senior citizen anywhere who hasn't wished me luck," he said. "Seniors are tired of politicians saying 'vote for me and I will take care of you in Ottawa, and when they get to Ottawa, they forget seniors and break their promises."

He says it is time the country got "back on track with political honesty." His party platform is simple: put the needs of seniors foremost. He lays the stress on home and general health care and on finances, including a pro-posal to start a senior

He also expects the be the only politician in Canada to campaign with a dog. ## ARDENING AND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

New Varieties of Grass for Your Lawn

new lawn of simply patching the product of this summer's drought, buy a top-quality grass seed containing about 60 percent blue grass, 20 percent fescue and 20 percent perennial rye grass. We talked about the function of the blue grasses. This week we'll describe the role of the fescues and the ryes

In the last few years there have been outstanding varieties of fescues developed. Medium green, heat and drought tolerant and they are a little coarser in texture, more vigorous in growth, more disease resistant and grow better than blue grass in shade conditions-which raises a point Although no grasses will prosper in a heavily shaded area, if you are seeding an area of light or mottled shade, look for a mixture where the blue grasses and the fescues are on even terms such as 40-40.

Becoming more and more popular are the so-alled "fast-grasses" that germinate in about ten days. Those are the perennial ryes. Not too many years ago they were a distant third in the grass seed sweepstakes, but not anymore. Newly discovered varieties are becoming known not only for their fast germination but for their turf quality. Short-growing and with good heat resistance, they are becoming an important companion to the blue grasses and the fescues

You can buy each of the seeds - blue grass, fescue and perennial rye — seperately, but for general use tent depending on whether you are seeding in full sun or partial shade. But, of course, before you do any seeding, you have to prepare the seed bed. The ideal seed bed provides a covering for the seed, the moisture necessary for germination and a porosity that will give tender roots an easy passageway. It can be achieved quite easily.

All kinds of top-dressing materials are available at your nursery - peat moss, vermiculite or the soiless mixes (usually a combination of peat moss, vermiculite and perlite). Stay away from top soil or the sterilized, bagged manures.

You have no idea where the top soil originated and the chances are good that your nurseryman doesn't either. If it came from pastureland being scoured by developers, the chances are good that the land has been manured for dozens of years and will undoubtedly contain a spectrum of weeds that you will be battling for years. Or, if it came from what used to be corn field, the chances are excellent that it contains Atrazine, a herbicide that knocks off everything but corn, and your grass seed won't stand a chance. Besides, top soil tends to cake and smother the crowns of whatever grass plants that While the bagged sterilized manures are free of isease organisms, their fine texture weed seed and d weed seed and unsease of same makes it of little use as a top-dressing material. Rather than providing a porous seed bed, they cake and tend to smother and in heavy rains tend to float and wash away. Instead, go with a combination of peat and vermiculite in a three to one basis, or if the areas to be patched are small, with a soiless mix They are a little more expensive but are pre-mixed (peat, vermiculite and perlite) and ready to use.

Rake the area to be seeded to your heart's con-tent, roughing it up and removing dead grass. Add just enough top-dressing material to cover, seed ac-cording to directions, then spread about a quarter of an inch. If you have a couple of pieces of plywoor, of an inch. If you have a couple of pieces of plywoor, use them as stepping stones to compress the newly-seeded area and put the seed in good contact with the medium. Otherwise, a gently but thorough watering will do just fine. Finally, apply a fall formulation fortilizer and except for watering daily, that's it. Your new grass should be well developed

UNITED WAY SETS $332,000 GOAL

By John G. Smith October is United Way

But what does this nean? What's the United

The United Way isn't only one community organization. It's a pillar of support for 23 community organizations in the Belleville area.

The funded organizations provide services as diverse as providing a needed blood transusion, help and encouragement to the handicapped, a visiting nurse. Meals on Wheels and character building for a disadvantaged youth

But to keep these services running, they need funds - $332,000 worth. But how do they plan to do it?

Kicking off their fundraising efforts for the 11th year in a row will be the Annual Hobo Luncheon and Auction on Friday, Sept. 30. The event held at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club at 11:30 a.m. is sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce with its members donating items to be auctioned.

And what's a Hobo Luncheon without hobo food? Thompson Catering will be providing the beans and preparing the hot dogs pro-vided by Quinte Meats, Weston Bakery, Buns Master, A&P and Belleville Food City.

With the auction items set up and the food on the plates, there's only one missing ingredient where's the hobo?

This last ingredient is John Babiak, the Belleville

Theater Guild's friendly hobo who will be greeting at the door.

Many people might con-sider this act a hard one to follow but United Way is giving it their best shot.

"festivals of India" concert will take place on Oct. 1 at 7 p.m. at Centennial Secondary School. The event will feature folk and classical dances from various parts of India and is presented by Hindu Solidarity Mission Abroad and The India Canada Association.

Admission to this event is free but donations will be solicited for the United

On Oct. 17 and 18, residents will have a chance to give donations through a door-to-door blitz of area homes Other events will include fund raising dinner for $50 a plate at the Ramada Inn, a variety show on Nov. 4 and 5 at BCI with a $5 admission, and other draws and sales through Everybody has a chance to make a contributi through one of these fundraising efforts.

The United Way needs your help today, but some day, you may need theirs.

REMATA'S RECIPES

Hi, fall is a wonderful time. I still remember Hi, fall is a wonderful time. I still remember the beautiful smell in my mother's kitchen when she was preserving or pickling. A favourite of mine and my children is Green Tomato Chutney. It is not only ideal with hamburgers but adds a nice touch to cold "case".

Green Tomato Chutney

10 - 12 medium green tomatoes quartered 4 medium red apples cored and quartered 3 medium red peppers seeded and sliced 4 onions peeled and quartered

In food processor chop all the vegetables and then place in large roasting pan.

11/2 tbsp salt

11/2 tsp pepper

11/2 tsp ground cinnamon

3/4 tsp ground cloves

2 cups sugar

2 cups malt vinegar

Add to vegetables and sir with wooden spoon. Bring slowly to a boil, stirring frequently to prevent burning. Simmer 45 minutes stirring.

Pour into six pint jars which have been sterilized. Top and seal at once and let cool before storing.

Enjoy!

BEATLES MADE IT LOOK EASY

By David Botting

When Linda came into Paul McCartney's life and Yoko into John Lennon's, the Beatles started to come apart. In what may have been one of the most unlikely partnerships in rock music, Paul McCartney and John Lennon collaborated on most of the songs recorded by the Beatles. Totally different individuals, together they created a new sound around Paul's melody lines and John's hard, bluesy music.

The partnership worked through the Sgt. Pepper album in 1967, but then the egos began to clash ir-revocably.

"George Harrison and Ringo Starr had very powerful personalities, but they were soap suds com-pared to those two," recalls Peter Quaife, bass guitarist for the Kinks in

And Yoko's involvement in John Lennon's life drove further wedge between them. She was quiet, but just as determined and committed as Lennon could be to what she thought was right.

"Paul McCartney suddenly saw two John Lennons there," Peter said.
"It's bad enough taking on one, but taking on two!'

Nor was Lennon satisfied anymore with writing the kind of songs he and McCartney had to write for the record com-

In 1961 and 1962, musicians were scrambling to find new sounds for the new decade. "Everybody imitated Cliff Richard and the Shadows at some point. Everybody had to go through that phase," Peter said. But it wasn't enough. Everyone was hunting

Peter Quaife, better known to our readers as Peter Kinnes, the artist behind the Quintessence cartoon on our editorial page, was bass guitarist for the British rock band the Kinks in the early six-ties. After publication of Albert Goldman's con-troversial book about John Lennon, Peter recalls his own memories of the Beatle. This is the final installment.

through stores for obscure music to play. They were looking for basic but rythmic music, tunes that rythmic music, tunes that were catchy enough to go over. They learned to harmonize from Buddy Holly and the Everly Brothers, Peter said. And they learned from Frank Sinatra what they didn't want to work at the new sounds.

"We thought: 'How do they do it? I could have

The Beatles were the leaders. They had no pro-blem with songs where other groups had to fight to get it right.

'We had to rehearse our we had to renearse our harmony parts and count where to bring in our 'ooby dooby doos'," Peter says. "They didn't. They just played and it sounded right"

That was the real John Lennon - his music.

IT'S A BULLS MARKET

Scott Cumming of the Oshawa 67's watches two goals for the Belleville Bulls slip by him in exhibition play on Sunday. The Bulls played two games this weekend, routing the North Bay Centenuials 6-3 and the Ottawa 67's 6-2. The games send the Bulls into the regular season with a six win, two loss record. ## BULLS SCORING: BETTER LATE THAN NEVER THE ARMCHAIR ATHLETE

By John G. Smith

The Belleville Bulls are looking ahead to a suc-cessful regular season with a six win, two loss record not bad!

There is, however, one thing they have to watch. It's called the first period.

In their last two exhibit tion games (one against North Bay and the other against Ottawa), the Bulls have played a miserable offensive game until the lat-ter half.

In these later periods, they've been able to pull themselves well above their opponents in 6-3 and 6-2 wins respectively. But when playing against teams with a more organized defence, they may face a few problems.

If a team is able to hold off the Bulls strong offence in the latter part of the game, they might very well win.

With their present defence, composed largely of rookie players, the Bulls need more experience to be able to deter a more ex-

But keep in there Bulls, we're rooting for ya!

The sports quote I've picked this week comes from a player on the Belleville Bobcats, Randy Horton

With with a sense of patriotism in his heart, he found access to the P.A. system announcing "would you please rise and hum the national anthem" before Friday's game.
On cue, all of the spectators stood at attention waiting for the national anthem to start only to hear "I was only kidding," from Horton.

Nice thought, though, Randy.

This week's sportsperson is Yvonne Lem.
Like many participants, she ran the first Terry Fox Run but a stroke in 1983 kept her from running another.

This year she pushed her wheelchair over the course to raise $703 in pledges for the worthwhile ca solutely nowhere, is this euphoent than in France. Like their known for superior lovemaking.

Prench are known for superior rovernating: the 12 that 12 mour sometimes explodes into bloody murd that 12 mas never fazed the French.

Chevallier came from one of the oldest, most esteem in Orleans. In 1935, handsome Pierre was a practising me or with a promising future. That's when he met Yvonne. Not once had an array of assets as well as annoying liabilities.

On the plus side of the balance sheet, she was a beautiful young woman with a figure to match. Unfortunately, she came from peasant stock, wan't that intelligent and had none of Pierre's class.

But Jove overcomes all. Who cares about conjugating a verb in bed? Yvonne left her village and moved into Pierre's Class in Orleane.

Pierre's flat in Orleans

All went well for a while. When war broke out, Pierre All went wen for a wine. When war burde out, Freir ojined the army. On his very first leave home, he married Yvonne and, as they used to say, made an honest woman of her. The Chevalliers had two sons, Thugal, born in 1940 and Mathieu, born in 1945.

Let's face it, Pierre was an achiever. Just before France surrendered to Germany, he was presented with the Legion d'Honneur for ministering to wounded troops under extremely dangerous conditions. Once back in Orleans he became a leading force in the Resistance movement. As the tide of the war turned against Germany, it was Pierre's group which openly attacked the retreating Germans and cleared the city before Allied armies arrived.

Now a bona fide hero, Pierre was elected the city's first post-war mayor. To this day, Pierre is credited with reconstructing the city to its present state as one of the most beautiful in all France. Life became a constant round of receptions, meetings and trips. Pierre loved the lifestyle. He dropped his medical practice and devoted himself full time to politics. The loving, caring doctor Younne had married was not the aggressive political animal with whom she now lived. But still she loved him dearly. dearly

Who knows how such things begin? A word, a gesture, an argument, the one more bitter than the last, then open hostility. In Yvonne and Pierre's case, the turmoil which surrounded their marriage probably had its roots in the backgrounds of its principals. Yvonne intensely disliked the receptions she was forced to attend. She found it difficult to cater to people she didn't know, let alone remember their names, as any good politician's wife should.

h, Yvonne tried. She had her hair done at the latest "in" salon. She read magazines on art and literature, but never did understand or enjoy the topics. Yvonne purchased expensive clothing, but somehow never looked right in them.

Yvonne committed the unforgiveable sin of complaining about her own shortcomings to Pierre. At first he was too busy for such woman talk. Yvonne persisted. Piere agreed. Yes, she was a poor dresser, yes, she was a poor botses. The fact is she was an encumbrance and a bore. It was out in the open at last. Yvonne was losing the love of her husband. She was heartbroken.

When son Mathieu became ill, Yvonne moved him into the master bedroom so she could be close to him during the night. Pierre volunteered to put a cot in his study and sleep there. When Mathieu recovered, Pierre chose not to return to Yvonne's side. This was the cruellest cut of all.

Hubby didn't care for her physically. It was tough to accept. Yvonne didn't take it well. She took veronal to help her through the night; then maxiton in the morning to get rid of the effects of the veronal. In between drugs, she chain-smoked and drank gallons of black coffee.

ow that the physical bond had been severed, Yvonne, in her drug hazed state, became suspicious of her hus-band. Surely a healthy virile specimen like Pierre must be seeing another woman. Yvonne searched her hus-band's pockets for some incriminating piece of evidence. Volla, she found a love letter to her husband signed Jeannette.

This was no one night stand. Jeannette and Leon Perreau were the Chevalliers' best friends. Yvonne took the aggressive approach. She spoke to Leon and was sur-prised when he indicated he simply didn't give a damn. Next came Jeannette. She swore that Yvonne was wrong; there was no hanky panky going on between her and Monsieur le Maire.

Yvonne then took the bull by the horns and approached her husband, who devastated her by openly admitting that it was true. Jeannette was his mistress.

The geometric form known in the romance business as The geometric form known in the formatic Washington a triangle was shaping up nicely. Pierre told Yvonne that he and Jeannette were planning to marry. They had already told Leon Perreau and while they didn't quite have his blessing, they did have his consent. They were about to face Yvonne with her little secret when she found the letter and forced their hand.

Youne broke down. She pleaded, "I'll do anything. I promise you I'll change. I'll be worthy of you."
"I don't want you. I want a divorce," Pierre replied.
"Never," Yvonne cried.

"All right. If you won't have a divorce, I'll put the children in a boarding school and you'll only see me every six months. Oh, for God's sake, stop blubbering."

Youne responded, "I could never love any other man but you."

Yvonne went to the seaside with her two sons, vying for vonne had other ideas. With singleness of purpose, she went upstairs to her linen closet, retrieved the Mabautomatic and pumped four slugs into her husband. To be specific, one in the thigh, the chin, chest and forehead.

Yoonne went downstairs and told a surfact to the bedroom and once again, displaying er impeccable accuracy, shot her already dead husband the back.

At Yonne's trial for ventilating Pierre, her lawyer had great deal of difficulty in explaining away the fifth shot, out all turned out well in the end. During the trial it was veraled that in the course of their last argument, Pierre ad made an obscene gesture with accompanying obscene emarks to Yonne. The court was cleared when this testimory was given, so we will never know the nature of he obscentites, but we do know that the testimony had great effect on the jury.

Yonne Chevallier was acquitted. She left the courtroom free woman, the cheers of the crowd ringing in her ars. The same crowd jeered and hissed as Jeannette Perreau made her exit.

Baseball sets new recor

Apparently someone around the office has said that if I write about Elvis one more time he'll scream. Sorry, but I

I had a second phone call last week from the president of the Elvis Presley Fan Club. Seems she and the other Elvis fans aren't any too happy with me, and to get her point across, she asked me to listen to a song: The King himself singing "my temperature's rising".

Yeh, I get your point.

The fan club president discussed at some length that she has many reasons for thinking Elvis is still alive, reasons that I balk at but that convince her. What do you reasons the should we do an interview with her about Elvis Presley and the reasons she and other Elvis fans have for thinking he is alive? Take a slip of paper and vote "yes" or 'no' and send it or bring it to: Elvis is Alive, c/o Quinte Weekly News, 51 Pinnacle St. S., Belleville, Ont., K8N 3A1. We'll let the poll run for one week (until Sept. 27). You decide. If you want the full story, we'll do it.

DUBIOUS BASEBALL STATS

Baseball is a game of inches, someone once said. And it's a game of statistics.

Statistics and records have been a part of the game since the very beginning. I recall growing up as a Detroit Tiger fan, memorizing Al Kaline's batting average and how many grand slams Jim Northrup hit in the team's Cinderella year of 1968, when they set records for coming from behind and Denny McLain won more than 30 games the first pitcher in 30 or 40 years to have achieved that, going on to win a thrilling World Series with St. Louis.

But today, fans of the game seem to have become obsessed with statistics. New statistics abound in an attempt to quantify what makes one player more productive, and thus more valuable to a team, than another. Sports pages abound with facts such as Ozzie Smith tying a league record for consecutive game winning runs batted in (his cgwrbi is four) or that Pat Tabler's two-run single with the bases loaded is his eighth hit in nine at bats with the bases loaded this season. Career-wise (we might as well use the proper technical term), he is 37 for 64 with the bases loaded. What do they call that — b.l.a. (bases loaded average)?

Come on, this passion for stats is getting ridiculous!

MORE DUBIOUS BASEBALL STATS

We bring you a baseball game in progress. Vin Scully and Joe Garagiola are chatting it up.

"Well, folks, Don Spittle is coming into the ninth inning with a chance to match or beat Dizzy Halibut's 1937 record for most times to the rosin bag.'

"That's right, Joe. Dizzy set the record of 73 times back with the St. Louis Browns for a rosin bag average of 8.11. Right now. Spittle is closing in on the record, going to the rosin bag 69 times in the first eight innings. That's an rba of 8.63. At that rate, he should beat Dizzy's record before the second out.

The crowd cheers as Spittle picks up the rosin bag for

'Say, Vin, I'd like to point out to our fans that we're talking about the complete game mark. Boko Newfie, a lefty for the Yanks in 1952, set a modern day record rba of 14.72. He went to the rosin bag 53 times in three and of 14.72. He went to the rosin bag 53 times in three and two thirds innings before being thrown out for delay of game. He was getting hammered 15-3 and Stengel, his manager, decided to let him hang out to dry that day."

The crowd roars again, sensing a record in the making, as Spittle goes for the rosin bag for the 71st time. It's a tense moment as the batter fouls back another ball and Spittle goes for the rosin bag for the 72nd time.

We're on the verge of a major league record here. where on the verge of a major league record here, folks. The tenion is mounting as shortstop 'Boot Hill singles to left, snapping his bat off at the handle. Will Spittle's manager vank him now or let him go for the record? And he does it! He goes for the rosin bag for the 73rd time to tie Dizzy Halibut's major league record! And the crowd is loving it! They're really roaring for one of the game's all time greats!

Joe Garagiola leaps in.

"I'd like to point out that Boot Hill's broken bat single ties the American League mark for most broken bat single ties the American League mark for most broken bat singles in a season. The record of 21 was set by Boomer Baker in 1921. Of course, that was a 154 game season, but Boomer only played 132 before breaking his leg at a

"It's a night for records, isn't it Joe? And now is the moment of truth for Spittle. He's tied the record, but can he break it? He is set to pitch now.

The crowd begins to roar as Spittle makes a motion for the rosin bag. He hesitates and goes back to the rubber as the crowd groans

He looks in for the sign, checks the runner. Now he steps off the rubber again to polish the ball.

"Will he go for the rosin bag? No, he disappoints this record home crowd again as he just rubs up the ball. He has a very deceptive move to the rosin bag, one of the best in baseball, Joe, as you can see in this slow motion

Spittle chews and spits to the right side and Vin Scully leaps in again with another interesting baseball tidbit. "You know, Joe, people sometimes forget that Spittle is also one of the game's great switch spitters. Reminds me of Joe Jazz of the old Brooklyn Dodgers. He can spit from both the right and left side with good power and for distance just like Jazz."

As Vin Scully rambles on, Spittle steps off the rubber and picks up the rosin bag. The crowd roars with tumultuous applause, a standing ovation from every seat in the packed stadium.

And it's a record, Joe! We have a major league record! And he knows it — just look at that grin as the crowd roars! What a moment to remember!"

After the game, the rosin bag is shipped to Cooperstown for display in the Baseball Hall of Fame next to Dizzy Halibut's rosin bag and the rosin bag No Legs Jackson used in the dead ball era to set the National League rba record of 62.

ROSE IS ROSE . by Pat Brady

"If you want to plead insanity, Mr. Farwell, the penguin has to agree."

THE RATINGS GAME: 1984, (102 minutes) Director: Danny DeVito

Director: Danny DeVito (Vic De Salvo) Rhea Starring: Danny DeVito (Vic De Salvo) Rhea Perlman (Francine), Louis Giambalvo (Goodie), perman Francisco, Louis Guntoulo (Goodie), Kevin McCarthy (President of Computron), George Wendt (Mr. Sweeney), Vincent Schievelli (Skip) Vic De Salvo (De Vito) has made a fortune in the

Vic De Salvo De Victorias inade a fortune in the rucking business. He is now obsessed with the idea of becoming a big name television producer. His scripts are terrible and he is thrown out of all the major TV networks. He finally bluffs his way into a major TV network and is given the O.K. to produce a pilot for a situation comedy. This O.K. is given by a vice president who is totally convinced that the series will be a flop.

The movie's title is based on the well-known fact that commercial programs must have large au-diences or they will be cancelled. Vic is determined to get top ratings at any cost. Several well-known TV personalities appear, in-cluding George Wendt (Norm on Cheers), Rhea Perlman (Carla on Cheers), Steve Allen and DeVito Perima (Gai. a) on Cheer's, Steve Hair and Devito (Louis on Taxi). Although all the actors play their roles well, it is DeVito's film. If you like him, this movie is a must, but if you don't like him, it would he wise to look for something more to your taste. The most well-known other film he has directed and starred in is Throw Mama from the Train.

The concept, writing and production are in-genious and farfetched. If is often very funny. The shows produced by Vic are terrible, but are no worse than many of the shows we are already subjected to on television. One strong point about this movie is that no matter how ridiculous it may get, it is not totally unbelievable.

There is some profanity. The story might be difficult for younger children to understand, but it would likely amuse them without marring them for

Jewellery Stolen

Quinte Crime Stoppers would like your assistance in solving the theft of jewellery and coins from 346 Victoria Ave., Belleville.

Sometime between Monday morning, July 11th, 1988, and the late afternoon of Wednesday, July 13th, 1988, thieves removed the following items from the residence:

Four ladies rings (one gold cameo, one silver cameo, one gold ring with two pearls and three leaves around the pearls, one egyptian puzzle ring

One man's black onyx ring, size 10 1/2.

Two ladies watches, one gold and one silver with three diamond studs around it.

Five silver neclaces

Three gold necklaces.
Also taken were several coins, two of which depict 'Greatest Old Timer Hockey Player', and two Swiss army jack-knives.

Crime Stoppers offers a cash reward up to $1,000 for information leading to an arrest in this crime or any other unsolved case. If you have any information call Crime Stoppers at 969-8477 or 1-800-267. Callers will not be required to reveal their identity nor testify in court.

DISTRESS CALLS JUMP 40 PER CENT

By David Botting

When the airplane came down through the trees, there was a rending crash as the wings ripped loose, but now all is silent. No one has heard the crash - how could they, the nearest person is a hundred of miles away across the Northern Ontario forest.

But someone did hear. Eight hundred kilometres above the earth's surface, a Soviet satellite orbitting past has registered the signal of an emergency beacon. Seconds later, an officer at the Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Trenton knows that he has a plane down. A few phone calls later, a search and rescue operation is ready to be launched.

satellite, the rescue co-ordinator knows where the crash is located to within 20 kilometres in the 2.2 million square kilmetres for which he is responsible. Within ten minutes, a Buf-falo and Labrador helicopter with equipment and search and rescue experts are on the way to the crash scene. By time they reach it, they may already find members of the volunteer Canadian Air Search and Rescue

QUINTE NEWS DAVID BOTTING

Alien

Did you know that when summer changed to fall last week Wednesday and Thursday, you could balance an egg on end and it wouldn't fall over? It's the strangest sight you've ever seen — imagine a desk top full of eggs all standing upright and stock still somewhat like the black monoliths in the opening scenes from 2001 Space Odessey. I kept expecting them to start humming Thus Spake Zarathustra.

Which brings be to my theory about eggs. They're aliens here, and at each spring and fall equinox, they manipulate humans to turn them on end, pointing toward their far away home off on the edge of the universe, and start transmitting.

What messages are they sending back? What information are they beaming back across the light years to their home galaxy?

"Have Eggs Instead ... Get Cracking! ... Have Breakfast for Dinner." "Help! S.O.S. We are trapped on a planet that eats alien life forms for breakfast, lunch and dinner and even has a special agency to promote it. Send help quickly before it's too late!"

And billions of light years away on a planet in another galaxy, the desperate message is faintly heard. A team of top scientists track the message to a planet in an obscure galaxy in one of the backwaters of the universe. After a council of war, heavily armed spaceships are despatched. Don't be surprised when egg-shaped spaceships blast down from the clouds to set their people free.

Remember, you read it here first. "Beam me up, Scottie. There's no intelligent life here."

REAL NEWS How come we never get the really juicy news stories here, the kind that blare out at you in headlines whenever you stand in line at the grocery store? You know the ones I mean: Two-headed Space Alien Born to New Jersey

PLACE

Woman, Girl. 7. Gives Birth to Twins, Burt Reynolds Wants to Carry Wayne Gretzky's Baby, WWII Plane Found Crashed on Moon, Adam and Eve Discovered in Central Asia Tending Apple Orchard, and so forth. We never get those kind of stories here. In fact, those kind of stories never seem to happen except in wild, inaccessible places such as Central Asia, the Amazon river basin, Hollywood and Newark, New Jersey.

But last week, I found a story I recognized. Man Makes Fortune on Cow Gallstones.

I remember that. I got a press release once from a man in Hong Kong who wanted to buy cow gallstones. "Make Your Fortune Selling Cow Gallstones," he advertised. I forget precisely why the gallstones were so valuable, perhaps as an aphrodisiac. They're into some strange things in Southeast Asia.

But no, I was disappointed when turning to the story. Seems there is a Spanish cattle rancher whose cows have lots of gallstones, and whenever the gallstones turn up, he has phenomenally good luck with something else. So it wasn't the same story at all.

I'm still waiting. Something is bound to turn up: Dolly Parton Nests Down With 95-Year-Old Quinte Resident, Belleville Mayor Denies He's Kris Kristopherson's Double, Carrots Cure Cancer Claims Hospital Administrator, Space Aliens Kidnap County Council, Ancient Roman Galley Remains Found at Point Petre. The possibilities are endless, so, sooner or later

WHO'S WHO?

Liberal leader John Turner accused Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of spending like a drunken Liberal ... er ... sailor in a $12-billion pre-election splurge. But in a matter of days, ol' Blue Eyes was himself pledging something like $5 billion for resurrecting Canada's cities.

So, let me see if I have this straight. Turner is a capital 'L' Liberal who is actually a small 'c' fiscal conservative but wants to spend money as though he were a small 'l' liberal. Meanwhile, Mulroney is a capital 'C' Conservative who is actually a small 'l' liberal but wants to spend money as though he were a capital 'L' Liberal.

Oh, and let's not forget Ed Broadbent, who would like to spend like a capital 'S' Socialist but talk small 'f' fiscal responsibility so he can win votes from small 's' small

You need a scorecard to keep the players straight.

Maybe it's time to kick all of the small 'r' rascals out.

TAKING A JUMP

Given the confusion over who stands for what - if anything - it's no wonder some prominent former Liberals and Conservatives are jumping to new parties. Former Liberal MP Bill Andres of Niagara Falls has switched to the Christian Heritage Party and will be running as their nominee in that area. And we understand that former Tory MP John Gamble has switched to the COR (Confederation of Regions) party, although he apparently hasn't decided to run for them yet.

Maybe it's time to start a new party, one which stands for everything and nothing at the same time. Where do we stand on abortion? Well, we're for it when it's necessary and against it when it's not. Capital punishment? We prefer to leave that up to the individu science of the judge. If he wants to hang them and feels in all good conscience that he ought to, then who are we to stand in his way. And if he doesn't, well, so be it. We're a beral, multi-cultural society.

Garbage dumps? We need them, no doubt about that, but not in my backyard. And we won't put it in your backyard. We may have to leave it on your front curb because we can't find a backyard to put it in, but no, we're not going to put it in your backyard. As soon as we can find somewhere that isn't someone else's backyard, we'll build a whole slew of garbage dumps, just see if we

Free trade? Well, we could be for it or we could be against it. We're not sure. You say you're an auto worker? Hey, we're against it. You say you export screwdrivers? Say, we're all for it. Okay, so there's a few inconsistencies in our stance, but so what. Consistency is the hobgoblin of small minds. Besides, we think a Royal Commission should study it again and by time it's done everyone will have forgotten the issue anyway

But our new party is definitely and outspokenly (in favour of free rides and trips to foreign countries. We need more fact-finding missions, especially to places that are sunny and warm in the winter. We've got our eye on Barbados this year and somewhere in the Mediterranean next year. Oh, yes, we're definitely in favour of fact-finding missions. We're going to take a courageous and unequivocal stance on that important issue. That's what

RIDE works

It is night and the policeman who waves us over with a flashlight is wearing a fluorescent orange vest for increased visibility against the car's headlights. After checking the licence plate, the policeman comes to the driver's window to politely inform him that this is part of the RIDE program to cut drinking and driving. Have you had anything to drink this evening/ Yes, a single beer earlier. No problem then, the policeman says. A few courteous words later the driver heads off again on his way, but as they pull out he notices another car pulled up behind the second cruiser, its driver sitting with his head in his hands. Someone has been caught, though whether for an impairment charge or another charge is uncertain

RIDE began a few years ago as a tool for fighting drunken driving at Christmas and New Year's, the time of year when parties are traditional and drunken driving more common. The concept proved so successful at reducing impaired driving that it was extended to other holiday times of year and now to the entire year.

Some complain that the RIDE program is an unwarranted intrusion into their rights. Others don't like the nuisance of having to stop, and everyone, even if they know they aren't impaired, will find their heart beating a little faster just because it's the police.

We say the RIDE program is worth the nuisance and the nervousness. The vast majority of fatal car accidents are alcohol related. If RIDE stops one drunk driver, if RIDE prevents one fatal alcoholrelated accident, then the program is worth it.

The scene described above is true - and it could happen to you at any time of the year. Which driver would you be, though? The one who was careful or the one who was not?

Think about it.

Cheers to Dozono

Dear Sirs:

I am writing about the article in Tuesday's paper, Sept. 13: "Love of the city is what makes him run about Kenzo Dozono.

Our honest opinion of this issue and Mr. Dozono is that he is 100 per cent right. My husband and I fully agree with what he has said. It's about time people started smelling the daisies and opening their eyes to what exactly is going on. We are also saying: "wake up, people!" Belleville is going under, folks. It's time someone like Dozono gets in. The man is being honest. A person does not put everything he's got and worked hard for on the line if he is not true. Think about it.

Reader wants more for singles

In response to your questionnaire I have felt the need to further expand on your survey.

Question number 7. Is there a particular story you would like to see you would like to see covered? Do you have a story idea for Quinte Weekly News?

I think a story on Serenity House at 142 Foster Ave. which is a treatment facility for alcoholics and drug dependent individuals would be a fascinating as well as informative story. It is such a misunderstood and stigmatized disease that I think the public might well benefit from such a feature story. Having successfully completed a stay of three months myself at Serenity House in February of this year, I am now on the path to recovery and again contributing in a constructive manner to society. Serenity House literally saved my life, as today I am enrolled in Loyalist College and continuing my educa-

Society, as I've mention-ed before, would greatly benefit from knowing and being aware of what help is available in Belleville for those with drug or alcohol problems.

As far as your newspaper goes, I would like to see some kind of singles col-

I would also like to see an expanded personals col-umn. Maybe let the public aware that you have a personals or matchmaking column

Being single in Belleville

I guess being single anywhere, is, right?

I would also like to see more sports coverage. Being from Cornwall, I am interested in the Cornwall Royals of the OHA (Jr "A" hockey league). I never hear of anything but the Belleville Bulls in the Intelligencer.

In closing I would like to congratulate your staff for a fine newspaper and your interest in your readers' opinions.

Thank you

Association (CASARA) on the scene to start the search for the missing

This incident is imaginary but incidents like it happen every day of the an average of almost eight per day across the 2.2 million square kilometres of Ontario and Quebec from Southern Ontario to the northern tip of Hudson's Bay. The Rescue Co-ordination Centre is manned 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and search and rescue crews are 30 minute standby five days of the week and two hour standby on weekends.

In a simulated marine search and rescue operation last week off Baker's Island, involving the com-bined efforts of CFB Trenton's 424 Squadron, the coast guard, RCMP and OPP officers and the Canadian Marine Rescue Auxiliary, the Rescue Coordination Centre showed media how the job is done.

After several passes to check the wind, a Buffalo dropped flares and equip-ment, including a pump for the boat and life rafts. The Buffalo then dropped two SAR technicians by parachute. After a simulated explosion, rescue boats of the coast guard and RCMP moved in and plucked the men from the water and a life raft, moving them to the 70-foot Coast Guard cutter Spin-Labrador helicopter then airlifted one man off the Spindrift for medical attention

According to Maj. Leif Schonberg, commander of the CFB Trenton Rescue Co-ordination Centre Trenton is one of the busiest of the four SAR regions in Canada. British Columbia is the smallest and the busiest region, he said, thanks to its mountains and year-round boating season.

The Trenton region, which includes major parts of Ontario and Quebec north to the tip of Hudson's Bay, runs a close se cond, however, and is the single busiest region in the country during the sum-mer sailing months. Last year, CFB Trenton handled 2,859 cases of which 2,299 were marine. Another 417 involved aircraft, 125 were humanitarian (such as searches for missing hunters) and 18 involved Officers in an OPP boat civil disasters.

The 2,859 cases were a dramatic increase of 40 per cent over 1986, and Maj. Schonberg said that the 1988 figure will probably hit 3,200, a 15 per cent increase. And 10 per cent of the cries for distress will involve the loss of a life or the potential for loss of life. The first three, four or five hours in a disaster are critical, he said. "We tend to overreact" in response to emergencies, he said,

"but we want to get the man out alive.

And as his superior, Brig.-Gen. Marc Terreau, wryly remarks: "No one ever seems to get in difficulties on a bright sunny day. Invariably, you go out on a dark and windy night."

The cost of such ed until the wreckage is response is high. The eventually found. He ofsearch and rescue portion of the military and coast guard budgets was $185 the spring just before a million last year and close to $200 million this year. A Buffalo aircraft and crew alone cost $4,100 an hour to operate while a training exercise was Labrador helicopter and scheduled for the area after crew cost $4,500 an hour.

But there is no charge to no matter how stupid the incident, no matter how many times a person needs rescuing.

And they will keep sear-ching until all hope is lost for the survival of the person's involved. The decision to halt a search isn't made lightly the minister of defence must himself sign the order.

Brig.-Gen. Terreau said that no search is ever closfered an example of a plane that crashed in the bush in snowstorm The search was called off when it became apparent no one could have survived, but a training exercise was the snow melted and before the leaves came on the the person being rescued, trees. The plane was found, and as expected there had been no survivors.

Preparing your roses for winter

As far as the calendar goes, summer officially ended Wednesday, Sept. 21st - but don't tell the ended Wednesday, Sept. 218t - Dit don't tell the rose. With a warm, sunny fall, it will bliesfully go on blooming well into October, even November. And there are steps you can take to encourage that ex-tension although feeding is not one of them.

ARDENING AND GROWING

An objective that is more important than prolonging bloom is preparing roses for winter by developing in them a state of hardy good health, robust and free of disease. Feeding will have the opposite effect, producing soft, new tissue that will be devastated by the deep freeze ahead. More impor-tant is keeping your rose shrubs free of disease. You don't have to worry too much about the rou don't have to worry too much about the creepie crawlies, most are past the feeding cycle and are concerned with other things such as egg laying or pupation, but diseases are a different matter. The warm days, cool nights and ample rains of fall provide Shangli La conditions for fungi such as powdery mildew and black spot. Both, particularly black spot, can greatly weaken a rose and lessen its chance of survival. Both are subtle in their approach and require close inspection if they are to be spotted when they can best be controlled, in their early stages

Look for leaves or buds that have an unnatural shape, that are wavy twisted or curled. That is usually a sign of powdery mildew in the early stages. When it is more advanced, it shows up as a white dusting most noticeable on the leaves. And if powdery middew is present the chances are good, so is black spot.

It requires a nose-to-nose inspection, beginning at the base of the shrub. It is a soil-borne fungus that first hits the bottom leaves and quietly works its way up the shrub and if left unchecked can result in total defoliation. In fact, it is not unusual to see a rose bush that has been heavily infected with roses in bloom on stems that are totally devoid of leaves.

What you are looking for on your inspection is leaves with a dusky black spot or, worse still, with the spot surrounded by a bright yellow ring. Leaves the spot surrounded by a bright yellow ring. Leaves with small black spots can probably be saved but once the yellow ring appears, the leaf should be removed and disposed of in the garbage. And the same applies to any leaves that have fallen, because they will harbour the disease into the next season.

If there is no sign of powdery mildew or black spot - congratulations! That means you have been spraying regularly or have the luck of the Irish, but in either case, don't get complacent. Using a fungicide now and every week as long as the weather stays warm, and expecially if we start getting regular rains, is the only way to prevent it or slow it down.

As with all perennial plants in the garden, subtle, unseen changes are taking place right now. Roots are extending and gathering nutrients for processing by the leaf structure and storage in the roots for next spring's awakening. And while it's too late to feed, you can help the process by making sure your roses get plenty of water.

The safest and surest method is to loosen the soil at the base of each shrub and let the hose dribble for about ten minutes. If the extent of your rose garden makes this too much of a chore, then water in the conventional way but make it as early in the morning as possible so foliage will dry before night.

Fungus likes to germinate in the dark (e.g. mushrooms), and wet foliage makes an ideal spawning ground.

By the way, if you are concerned about using By the way, it you are concerned about using systemic fungicides, I have a suggestion for you. I tested a natural garden fungicide this spring collodial sulphur and had excellent results. It's called 'Natural Garden Fungicide' and is made by the

DENTAL PLAN MAX HAINES

It was summertime and the living was easy. Grace Hunt's pa was rich and her ma was good lookin'. Daddy Hunt, a native of Los Angeles, was a finan-cier who had hit the jackpot so many times it had become downright embarrassing. The apple of daddy's eye was his only daughter, Grace. Grace went to the best schools. She associated only with the best people. It was Grace this and Grace that as far as daddy was concerned.

As luck would have it. Grace grew up to be a voluptious young woman — a veritable 10. Daddy was protective of his beautiful daughter, being well aware of the many gold diggers prowling the state of California just looking to strike it rich with a well heeled morsel such as his Grace.

Charles P. Grogan was invited to dine at an exclusive club with Frank Hunt and his daughter. Old Charlie hardly looked at his shrimp. He had eyes only for raven haired Grace. Daddy was ecstatic. So what if Charlie was old enough to be Grace's father. He was known along the coast as the "California Olive King." Why, he was even Daddy whispered in Grace's ear that here was the gentleman who could make her happy. Grace resisted, pointing out the obvious, namely that the olive king had a discernible paunch, was not at all attractive and was so very, very old. Not to worry, assured Daddy, in a few short years the olive king would no doubt depart this world, leaving Grace with his entire fortune. Grace went along. Within three months she became the queen of olives.

Frank Hunt must have had a bit of Nostradumus' blood flowing in his veins. Everything worked out just as he predicted. Oh, sure, Charlie hung around somewhat longer than expected, but eventually died, leaving his entire fortune to 33-year-old Grace.

Money isn't everything, or so people with a great deal of it would have us believe. Grace was one of those. She had the loot, but was just aching for a replacement hubby when she walked into Dr. Thomas Young's office to have a tooth filled Now, Dr. Tom was not your average dentist. True, he had a flourishing practice, but the handsome extractor was known to have his way with the ladies. Would you believe it, sometimes right on that ominous reclining chair.

Grace took an immediate liking to Dr. Tom. The feeling was mutual. Grace and Tom became an item. Daddy was furious. Grace explained that Tom was not exactly on skid row, but Daddy didn't care. He wasn't rich enough. Nothing more than a gold digger. Grace took matters into her own hands. She married the roving driller.

Three years later, on Feb. 21, 1925, to be exact, Grace Young disappeared. Well, not exactly. Police first learned of Grace's absence on April 14, when Dr. Tom reported his wife missing. According to Dr. Tom, he and Grace had quarrelled on Feb. 21 just before going out to dinner. They argued all the way to the Plantation Club, where Grace didn't touch her Exasperated, she claimed she needed a change of Exasperated, see claimed she needed a change or scenery and was leaving that very night for New York. Dr. Tom tried to talk her out of such a madcap scheme, but his wife insisted on going. They went home. Grace packed a bag and, just to keep the wolf from the door, threw in $150,000 worth

And why, the cops wanted to know, had the good doctor waited almost two months before reporting his wife missing? Dr. Tom told them he had received several letters from Grace from New York. She appeared to be having a good time. In fact, he believed that they had straightened out their differences by mail. You know, absence makes the heart grow fonder, chortled Dr. Tom. He turned over the letters to the police. The handwriting proved to be that of Grace Young. The doctor hadn't saved the envelopes, but the letters were written on stationery from the Astor Hotel, Times Square, New York City.

Frank Hunt called on police. He told them not to believe Dr. Tom for a minute. According to Daddy, the vile dentist, whom he had always mistrusted, was attempting to orchestrate a scenario which would point to Grace running away with a stranger, lugging a measly $150,000, which to Daddy was mere chicken feed. Daddy figured Dr. Tom wanted Grace out of the way so he could play the field after inheriting her sizeable fortune.

He had put a private detective on Dr. Tom's tail, confirming that he was not only a Tom but was also a tom cat. That man had more starlets in and out of his dentist chair than MoM had down at their studio. Daddy's detective was okay at digging up dirt, but he had failed to come up with the missing Grace.

Police thought it was strange that Dr. Tom employed only one servant in his spacious home. The ione servant told them that there had once been several others, but they had all been fired in February, shortly before he was told that Grace had taken a trip to New York. Detectives wanted to know every single detail of that day in February when Grace had taken her fateful trip.

The servant went through a list of mundane activities. He remembered that day because it was the day before Washington's birthday. The holiday had passed uneventfully. He mentioned one thing which caused the detectives to sit up and take notice. The day after Washington's birthday. Dr. Tom had emphatically told him to wash his car extremely well. The doctor had travelled to his hunting cottage in Beverly Glen, where he was having some repair work done. Dr. Tom had gone to the cottage over the holiday to inspect some freshly poured cement.

To get the ball rolling, detectives did one last check to see if Grace had withdrawn any funds from her various bank accounts or had contacted anyone since Feb. 21. When they came up with absolutely nothing, they realized that the New York letters were the only evidence that Grace was alive after Feb. 21. They decided to visit the cottage in

You guessed it. There, under the floorboards in the cellar, detectives discovered an old cistern half filled with freshly poured cement. Buried under the cement was the body of Grace Young. When the detectives threatened to take Dr. Tom to the scene, he broke down and confessed, rather than face the sight of his wife's body. He had used an inhaler and gas to render his wife unconscious. He then strangled her and lugged the body to the cistern in the basement of his cottage.

But how could his wife have written those letters from New York if she was already dead? Simple, pointed out Dr. Tom. The letters were dated with the month and day, but not the year. Two years earlier, Grace had been in New York and had written him several letters, which he had kept. It was these letters he had given to the police, telling them he had received them in late February and March of 1925. He destroyed the envelopes with the incriminating postal date stamp.

On Aug. 17, 1925, Dr. Thomas Young stood trial for the murder of his wife. On the morning of the ninth day of the trial, he was found dead in his cell. He had managed to strangle himself with a length of electrical cord taken from his radio. On the floor beside his cot, scrawled in dust, he had written, "This is better than the gas chamber."

HOUSING GROUP ELECTS HEAD

George Thompson has been elected chairman of the Belleville Non-Profit the Belleville Non-Front Housing Corporation to replace Margaret Wagner, who recently resigned from the corporation's board.

The corporation was established in 1986 to construct and operate non-profit housing for the city of Belleville through fun-ding obtained from federal and provincial programs.

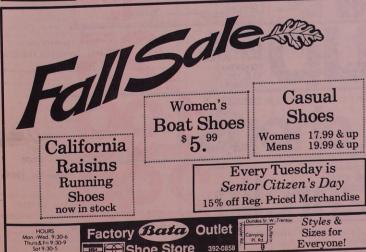

Directors of the board are approved by city council.

Brian Smith also resigned recently and Donald Leslie and Christopher Spear have been appointed the board to the board as replacemements for Mr. Smith and Ms Wagner.

The board was recently given approval for 50 units of rental town house development and is in the process of acquiring land with construction expected to start in 1989. As well, the board is seeking land for another 75 units also to be started in 1989.

According to a press release of the organization, vacancies to the board are vacancies to the board are filled from a list of volunteers, which has been depleted by the two resignations. More volunteers for the list would be appreciated.

A STREET CAR NAMED DESIRE

- SEPTEMBER 28-

Good news and bad reached the Swedish arctic village of Pajala on Sept. 28, 1987. The good news was the arrival of respondents to ads throughout. Europe for female companions. They came from Europe for female companions. They came from Stockholm on a bus dubbed "Streetcar Named Desire. RVARY

The bad news for what The Toronto Star called "sex-starved bachelors was that there were only 23 companions aboard. Sex is not always good for one. It's O.K. for two, but not for one.

The ladies came to help celebrate "Romppaviiko (Romp Week), traditional- DATES 'N DARTS ly a post-harvest festival BY FRED WEBSTER of dancing and mating.

Perhaps there would have been more had the ads not been so selective, appealing for just two kinds of women: domestic or imported.

Henry Miller, auther of the once banned Tropic of Cancer, claimed sex was one of the nine reasons for reincarnation. The other eight were unimportant.

Probably it's the most fun you can have without smiling, and it's not dirty unless it's done right. That should make it harmless to teenagers. It's best just before a Craven "A". Finally, it's still not taxed, though it can be taxing.

The sex drive is a physical urge that begins in adolescence and ends in marriage. Sex appeal, meanwhile, is something we all have. There's nobody who doesn't turn another person on, somewhere. The trouble is finding that person and feeling mutual.

Everyone's sex life is a disaster area. That's why children should never discuss the birds and bees in front of their parents. Glenda Jackson once gave her secret to good acting: an ability to laugh or cry on demand. "When I have to cry, I think of my sex life. When I have to laugh I think of my sex life."

Many men think sex is the fruit of marriage. Pro-bably as many women think it's the price. But anyone of either sex who eats three meals a day knows why cookbooks outsell sex books by about the same margin bachelors in Pajala outnumbered their respondents.

CITY HALL NAMES RECALL CITY'S PAST

While Belleville's city hall is being renovated to update the structure, many aspects of the building's history are being retained and stressed — most recently of which, the naming of public rooms.

Initial requests to adopt certain names from the official opening committee were tabled in August until the building's official open-ing scheduled for mid-October. A subsequent request, however, convinced city council to make a decision before the opening.

The names for the rooms were chosen to "reflect the history of the city hall building.

Room 304 will be dedicated as the Billa Flint Room, after the first president of the board of police of the police village of Belleville in 1836. He was appointed to the position by the four elected council members at the time.

Room 316 will be called the Market Room. Although the historical significance of this name may not be immediately noticed, the history of the building shows city hall was built as a market building in 1873. This room also looks over the present day market square.

Room 305 will be dedicated to the name of the only Belleville citizen to carry the title of right honorable - Prime MacKenzie Minister Bowell.

Room 321 will be named after the well-known area founder, Captain John Walden Meyers. Mr. Meyers was the first chairman of Sidney Township in 1790, one of the first townships to hold town meetings with elected officials in Ontario. At the inclais in Ontario. At the time, Belleville was within the township boundaries. Room 404 will bear the name of Mayor Thomas Holden, Mr. Holden was the mayor of Belleville in 1871 when the initial vote to build city hall was made, and in 1873, when the market building and town hall was completed.

Rooms 424 and 425 will be dedicated to the ar-chitect and builder of the initial structure — John D. Evans and John Forin.

Last but not least is room 502. This room isn't named to reflect the for where it is. The tower room was referred to as such by most of the people who viewed it, sinply because it's positioned in the building's prominent clock tower. Before the vote on the names was taken, Alder-man Meeks reiterated his request for one of the rooms to be named as "the armed forces room" and Alderman Finkle asked for the naming of the rooms to recognize people alive totegrates both hearing and hearing impaired children. The pre-school is unique in the Quinte area — other pre-schools such as First Adventure in Belleville and Little Learners in Picton integrate disabled children into their programs, but Omni is the only one to specialize in hearing im-paired children.

According to Donna Bateman, program supervisor and teacher, Omni works closely with Sir Whitney's home James visiting program, which monitors hearing impaired children in their homes and offers resources to their parents. The pre-school will take up to two hearing impaired children in each of its 16-child classes on recommendation by the home visiting program.

The Omni program is also backed up by all of Sir James Whitney's educa-tional resources. The classes use facilities at the school such as the gym and swimming pool, and the resources of the school's audiological department are made available to the hearing impaired children.

The program is good for hearing impaired children, says Donna, introducing them early to a hearing world. Pre-school age children are more accepting of their difficulties, she says, and hearing impaired children are more likely to initiate language in a play setting than in a structured setting.

"They can play equally,

All of the classes use simultaneous communication - sign language with the spoken language. All of the kids pick it up quickly through songs and games, Donna says.

The room has also been designed to fit the needs of hearing impaired children. Acoustic tiles, carpeting, felt table coverings, hanging mobiles, corrugated paper on the bulletin boards and pleated drapes all cut down on reverberations in the classroom.

According to Donna every hearing impaired child can hear something. Mildly impaired can hear conversational speech, though they may miss

The film gets off to a strong, fast and funny start, which rarely lets up. Michael (Coyote), a sensitive-appearing school teacher, suddenly enters Lauren's life and they start carrying on together. Unknown to Lauren, Michael is having an equally torrid affair with Sandy. The two women only learn about this when Michael is apparently killed by a terrorist bomb blast.

When they meet at the morgue to identify the body, they are both convinced that it is not Michael. They set out on a quest to find him, which gets them involved with the CIA, Russian intelligence and a drunken, phoney Indian (Carlin). The plot gets into many silly and apparently irrelevant situations that finally turn out to perfectly logical.

The real attraction of this film is the interaction between Long and Midler, especially during the earlier scenes. Although it loses some of its spark during the last half, it never drags.

Co-op beats high cost of

By David Botting

You're looking at a two-bedroom townhouse. No down payment. Stable monthly payments at or below market rates. Sound like a miracle? It's co-operative housing.

Co-operative housing offers an alternative in between the two extremes of renting or buying, say Jim Nazar and Archie Huber of the newlyformed Trent-Moira Estates Co-operative.

Mr. Huber, who lived in a housing co-op in British Columbia four years ago before moving to Trenton, says simply "they're marvellous."

With house prices conti-nuing to rise and rental vacancies remaining tight, the two men feel the time is ripe for co-operative housing in Belleville. They see a co-op as an economical way of buying housing.

"It's for people who really want a place of their own for minimum dollars," Mr. Huber says.
The individuals don't own the housing, however. The co-op does. However, members of the co-op share the ownership and upkeep costs and control regulations on how it is run. Because rents are tied to paying off the mortgage and not to making a profit for a landlord, the rents will stay stable and eventually will drop substantially when the mortgage is paid off. Rent for the first year is set at market levels. Annual increases are generally lower, though, than the increases permitted by the rent control board in ordinary rentals. The two men cite a townhouse co-op in Kingston as an example where rents rose by a total of three per cent over a three year period. People there are paying only about $400 per month for townhouses, well below the present market rental for similar housing

'It's especially good for people such as seniors on a fixed income," Mr. Nazar

And they expect housing co-ops to look even more attractive if rent controls are lifted. "There's a shortage of rentals," Mr. Nazar said, citing a vacancy rate in the area of about one per cent. And the number of apartments being built isn't keeping pace with population growth — See CO-OP Page 15

Gleaners: Say 'thanks' with food for needy

By David Botting

Anne Doef, co-ordinator for the Gleaners Food Bank, is hoping that local residents will prove this Thanksgiving that Belleville really is "The Friendly City".

"We're asking people to give from their wealth to the less fortunate," Mrs. Doef said in an interview last week before the food bank's annual food drive. The drive Oct. 4-8 was deliberately timed for just before Thanksgiving, she said, because food bank volunteers are asking donors to "give out of the thankfulness of their hearts."

The food drive will kick off today at 1 p.m. at the S & R department store downtown with the assistance of Mayor George Zegouras. A total of 19,500 bags are being distributed across Belleville and donors can

So goes a phrase I have heard with increasing frequency lately. But where does the phrase come from? Who is the fat lady and where does she sing? No one seems to

One theory is that it refers to the usually fat soprano who sings the final aria in an opera. The curtain doesn't fall til the fat lady sings. Possibly. Someone else has a notion it refers to the late Kate Smith, who sang for the Philadelphia Flyers — but he's not sure why he thinks so.

Social planning forum should lead to action

Terry Cassidy hopes that a social planning forum Oct. 22 will spark action rather than just more talk about social services in the Quinte

"Unless key people come out and are prepared to act, not much will happen," he predicted in an interview last week.

Mr. Cassidy, formerly director of social services for Hastings County and now in business on his own, is working as a consultant for United Community Services, putting together the social planning forum.

He sees the forum as a crucial initial step towards comprehensive social plang for the area. Although individual groups have done planning, there is no overall, comprehensive planning of social services in the area, he said.

A survey completed this summer for United Community Services confirmed the impression that, on the one hand, some services overlap each other, while on the other hand, other needed services aren't available. The result is chaotic for those in need.

Too often, he said, people receiving social services have no idea what is available or what rules have to be followed.

"There are horrendous stories of people going round from pillar to post before finally getting help," he said.

'Quality of Life: We're
All in it Together' will be the theme of what Mr. Cassidy hopes will become an annual social planning forum. The event is expected to bring together about 100 people, including professionals and service organizations.
Municipal officials will also be invited. volunteers in various social

Thanksgiving, celebrated next week Monday, is a Canadian harvest-time tradition. It is also a good time for the Gleaners Food Bank to hold a food drive, and not just because food will be needed in the coming winter months.

The name Gleaners comes from the biblical gleaning laws. At harvest-time, farmers were not allowed strip a field clean. The poor and the hungry were allowed to follow the harvesters and glean the grain that they missed. And if you owned a grain field, you were to leave grain behind for the poor and the hungry to glean. If you owned a vineyard, you were not allowed to pick every grape, but were to leave some behind to be gleaned. The gleanings belonged to the poor and hungry as their right, as a sort of tithe from the harvest. And in that way, the more fortunate gave out of their blessings to those less fortunate.

We are no longer an agricultural society and a law of gleaning doesn't mean much anymore. The principle is worth remembering, however: everyone has a right to eat. No one should have to go hungry.

What the Gleaners Food Bank is asking for during its food drive this Thanksgiving is simply a tithe of the food we take for granted, a gleaning of the food we take home from the supermarket every week. As Thanksgiving comes closer, let's "count our blessings" — and then give as a way of saying 'thanks'

Dear Editor, The Last Temptation of Christ is now playing in one of our movie theatres. From what I've read, it's a disgusting and revolting movie full of half-truths and complete falsehoods. Some people will say that until I've seen this movie, I shouldn't give an opinion. Wrong! I have no intention of seeing this movie. Just because I've never seen a drunk driver hit and kill an innocent pedestrian, doesn't mean I can't have a strong opinion regarding drinking and driving!

The movie depicts Jesus Christ as weak, indecisive and fearful. I can't think of one instance in the Bible where Jesus is depicted in this way.

Actually, the opposite is true. Again and again Jesus comes across as courageous.

Take Mathew 8:23-27. where Jesus calms the storm. In verse 24 it states "Without warning a furious storm came up on the lake, so that the waves swept over the boat. What was Jesus doing during all this time? He was ep! Hardly the picture of a fearful individual. The disciples, who were anything but wimps since several of them were fishermen and had weathered many storms, said to Jesus, "Lord save us! We're going to drown." In verse 26 Jesus says, "You of little faith, why are you so afraid?" Then he got up and rebuked the winds and the waves, and it was completely calm. In John 2:13-16 it says, When it was almost time for the Jewish Passover, Jesus went up to Jerusalem. In the temple courts he found men selling cattle, sheep and doves, and others sitting at tables exchanging money. So he made a whip out of cords, and drove all from the temple area, both sheep and cattle; he scattered the coins of the money changers and overturned their tables. To those who sold doves he said 'Get out of here! How dare you turn my Father's house into a market!" Hardly the picture of a weak, indecisive

In one scene in the movie Judas asks Jesus: 'How will you ever pay for your sins?" Jesus answers, 'With my life." But many passages in the Holy Bible (the inerrant Word of God) teach us that Christ was sinless! Hebrews 4:15 states '...and that He offered his life as a sacrifice to atone for the sins of others." (Also read Isaiah 53:4-12 and I Peter 1:18-21) I don't believe for a se cond that Christ would allow his mind to fantasize sexual encounters with Mary Magdalene and Mary the sister of Martha, Jesus said in Mathew 5:27-28, "The laws of Moses said, 'You shall not commit adultery!' But I say: Anyone who even looks at a woman with lust in his eye has already committed adultery with her in his heart." If he allowed himself to think these kinds of thoughts then in his own he words he would be guilty of adultery.

I think that those people who believe themselves to be Christians and watch this film are coming very close to blaspheming the name and purity of our Lord and Saviour. What would we say if we were at this movie and Jesus came up to us, looked us in the eye, and said, "son/daughter", what are you doing here?" Dave Switzer

IN SEARCH OF THE HUMAN CONDITION

Slinging an M2, Leica camera over your shoulder and heading into war-torn Nicaragua to some people isn't the ideal way to spend a summer vacation. But local photographer and Loyalist College photojournalism teacher Doug Wicken saw it as the perfect opportunity to capture "the human condition" on film.

Why Nicaragua?

Why Nicaragua?

Mr. Wicken made the journey to the Central American country to "de-stereotype" images of Nicaragua commonly shown in the media — images in his mind that show a place that's been violent for so long that the people are violent. Through the lens of his camera, however, he hopes to communicate what Nicaragua is really like.

In two one-month trips (one last year and one this summer), Mr. Wicken has yet to see any violence. "The population of the country is probably the most humble, generous and friendly people I've ever encountered," he

But one particular thing he encountered was a society of profoundly poor people — a society whose defence budget absorbs almost 55 per cent of the country's gross

He also doesn't downplay the role revolution has taken in this society. "Now (during the cease-fire on his second trip) they're dealing with the question of peace," he said. "Real people are being killed."

Despite these hardships, Mr. Wicken is amazed that their wills haven't been broken. "There's a lot of smiling respite."

people," he said.

With the pictures he's already taken and one more trip planned, he hopes to put a book together — his second. The first was based on an Indian reserve on Manitoulin Island in Northern Ontario

But what is it about photography that commits him to these projects? Before he was a photojournalist, Mr. Wicken worked at such diverse jobs as paint and wallpaper salesman, pro-duction supervisor at a baby pants factory and musician. With money earned with the latter skill as a bass player and his wife Audrey, he was able to pay for his training as

Like artists who work with many mediums, he enjoys and learns from the work of others, most notably Eugene Smith and photographers with the Farm Security Administration in the United States. During the Great Depression, this group travelled the country photographing all aspects of life in those economic conditions.

Documenting life with photography is one thing in particular that he's drawn from the Farm Security Administration Work. "I guess you can say I'm more a documentary photographer than a photojournalist," he said, adding that news photographers only have the chance to record peaks in activity.

"I like to have a little bit of sensitivity towards my subjects," he said. "Maybe that's why I haven't run into any obstacles.

With this attitude and a camera lens, he tries to show the differences and similarities between the human condition the viewer lives in and the one they see through his

Fall work makes spring gardening easier

One gardening philosophy I have developed over the years is to never put off to the spring what can be done in the fall. Spring is the frantic time with seeding, weeding, feeding, cutting, pruning, transplanting and garden preparation. Transfer garden preparation to the fall, and not only will you garden preparation to the fall, and not only will you lighten the spring load, but you will likely get better results next spring and summer. The soil and the added ingredients, including nutrients, have a chance to "cook" or assimilate over the late fall and early spring. Then all that is required in the spring is a light cultivation.

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

What is termed as soil in your garden is really growing medium that has two functions: to hold the plant up and provide nutrients. So a good place to begin is to forget about such terms as "top soil" and "sub soil" and think in terms of a growing medium, good, bad or indifferent

An ideal growing medium has four components, roughly divided as follows: mineral content - 44 per cent, organic material - 6 per cent, water and air - 25 per cent each. The mineral content is usually a mixture of fine gravel, sand, silt and clay. The organic content, the decomposed remains of plant vegeta-tion, leaves, stems and roots. Don't be discouraged.

Such an ideal medium rarely exists in nature and never comes off the back of the truck. We've all gone that route. We order top soil from a local supplier, envisioning a load of rich, black loam being cascaded on our lawn, but it rarely turns out that way: our idea of top soil and someone else's idea of topsoil turns out to be two different things. But the supplier delivered what he promised - soil but the suppuer delivered what he promised - son from the top of the ground, good, bad or indifferent and probably loaded with weed seed.

If you have problem soils in your garden, it is usually the result of high-mineral content (sand or clay) and not enough organic content. The mineral content is absolutely necessary as the main source of nutrients, but if the sand content is too high, the soil will be too porous with water and nutrients draining too quickly from the root zone. If the clay content is excessive, then neither water, air, nutrients nor roots can penetrate. In both cases, the answer is organic material.

Peat moss is the obvious answer. How much depends on how bad your growing medium is, but be generous. And while you're at it, this is the time to add a garden fertilizer with a formula such as 4-8-12. Spreak a thick layer, rough dig, spread a sec layer and rough dig again. Do not rake. Let the winter frost weather and erode the lumps and bumps. Save raking until the light spring cultiva-

There is one other activity you can undertake this fall that will forever eliminate the buying of soil conditioners and help you convert even the worst soil into a rich growing medium. And all you have to do is take advantage of the fall harvest.

The harvest I'm referring to is the wealth of plant material soon to be discarded by your trees, shrubs and gardens in the form of leaves, stems and roots plant material that can be so easily converted to paint material that can be so easily converted to that magic soil ingredient, organic material. And the way to that conversion is through composting. No matter how small your garden, you should allow room for composting, whether you build your allow room for composting, whether you duil your own bin or use one of the commercial composters on the market. Because compost and the wealth of organic material that it contains, is the answer to most soil problems. If your soil is too clayey, compost will help break up the soil particles, allow water and air to penetrate. If your soil is too sandy, compost will provide the means for the soil to retain the property of the pr water and nutrients. And composting can be done without a lot of work.

REMATA'S RECOPES

Hi, Fall and the cooler days are definitely upon us and with it a desire for more substantial food. My mother-in-law often had a huge pot of cabbage borsch on the stove when she expected to babysit the grand children, and my own kids often ask for this now when they come home. So, here is an unusual recipe for cabbage, very reasonable

Cabbage Borscht

2 lbs. plate brisket

1 marrow bone In 11/2 quarts of water bring to a quick boil. 1 diced onion cup stewed tomato

Add to the above and bring to a boil, then simner until meat is tender - about 11/2 hours

1 small head of cabbage

Shred and sprinkle with 2 tablespoons of salt. Let it stand while meat is cooking. Drench with hot water and drain.

Add to soup and cabbage too. Cover and simmer until cabbage is tender.

1/4 cup brown sugar Add to soup and simmer

2 teasp salt pepper to taste

For another 10 minutes. Serve hot with crusty french bread or boiled potatoes in their jackets. This serves 8, or it also freezes well.

ou could say James and Pauline Mitchell were the perfect couple. James, in his early fifties, was a big handsome man who owned a large chain of garages. Pauline, a beautiful woman, was 20 years her husband's junior. The Mitchells lived in a fine home in Sydney, Australia

Australia.

The attractive couple met when Pauline, who hailed from the small town of Ravely, was employed as a waitress at an expensive Sydney restaurant. James regularly dined there. He became infatuated with Pauline and, in May 1976, the same year they met, they married. Pauline's life was altered abruptly. Overnight she was transformed from a girl who waited on tables to the wife of an extremely wealthy entrepreneur. Pauline often visited her mother, father and younger stater, naroara, 34, and the Raveyears passed. Anyone who knew the Five years passed. Anyone who knew the Mitchells of Clarke Ave. would assume that the couple had all the material comforts of life, as well as love and affection. Nothing could be further from the truth. The illusion of tranquility crumbed to dust at precisely 6:25 a.m. on May 27, 1981. That was the day Pauline woke with a start. She instinctively eached for her husband. Her hand found only bedelothes, Pauline sat up and was dumbfounded to see James lying on the floor with blood pouring out of his mouth. Initially, she thought he had met with a terrible accident while getting out of bed and attempted to assist him. James Mitchell would wake no more. He was very dead.

getting out of bed and attempted to assist included to assist whichell would wake no more. He was very dead.

Pauline ran across the street and pounded on Pauline ran across the street and pounded on Christine Lane's door. Upon opening her door, Christine was greeted by her neighbor, who butted, "It's Jimmy! There's something the matter with him. He's lying on the floor by the bed and there's blood coming out of his mouth." Christine conforted Pauline, dashed across the Irreet, conforted vital signs and ladled police. James Mitchell was indeed the police very little other than the police wery little other than the barden with the police were little other than the barden with the police were several circumstances which did not bear out her theory. A search of the house revealed large quantities of untouched cash and jewelry. No burglar worth his salt would leave such booty behind. Besides, burglars rarely kill sleeping victims. They attack only to prevent their own capture.

An autopsy indicated that James had been sleeping on his back and had been stabbed once in the heart with a knife. It was estimated that he died instantly. The force of the blow and reflexive movement rolled him off the edge of the bed.

In their own nosy way, Aussie detectives checked out James Mitchell's past. They found that James had been a devoted, loving husb killer because the autopsy report indicated that James had died within five minutes of Christine Lane's appearance on the scene. Pauline would not have been able to get rid of the murder weapon and run across the street to wake up Christine in such a short time span.

Investigators focused their efforts on employees and former employees who might have had a grudge against the garage owner. That one worked for Mitchell. Cox had taken car without authorization and harder with an accident. As a result, he had been the substantial to the subst

The hunt was on for Cox. After all, he was a convicted thief with a hair trigger temper, who had a score to settle with the victim. There was just one a score to settle with the victim. There was just one thing wrong with the police theory. James Cox had absolutely nothing to do with his former employer's murder. Police fell into the trap of dismissing other avenues of investigation due to their concentration on Cox as a suspect. Detectives working on the case had their attention abruptly diverted when they received a most unusual letter signed by a Mrs. Peter Headley. She claimed that her husband had worked at one of James Mitchell's garages. Fifteen years before, her husband had had an affair with Pauline. As a result of the affair, Pauline had given birth to an illegitimate daugther, Barbara, who was being raised as illegitimate daugther, Barbara, who was being raised as Pauline's sister. What's more, Mrs. Headley went on, she was certain her husband had taken up with Pauline again and now, after 15 years, was once more having an affair with her. All in all, it was quite a letter.

Police took the missive seriously. They found that there really was a Peter Headley who had worked for years at one of James Mitchell's garages. Joan Headley was interviewed. She was what she appeared to be — a woman scorned. She told police she thought her husband and Pauline had planned the murder to get rid of James, inherit his money and be one step closer to being together forever. Police travelled to Ravely to interview Pauline's parents' family doctor. The doctor knew for a fact that the elderly Mrs. Hewitt, Pauline's mother, could not be the mother of Barbara, who was born on May 4, 1966. He had performed a complete hysterectomy on her on March 10, 1966. The doctor had always assumed Barbara was adopted.

telt it was time to bring Peter and Fauline in for questioning. Pauline denied knowing or even meeting Headley. He, in turn, admitted to having seen his employer's wife when she dropped into the garage where he worked.

However, when investigators informed Pauline that they knew her mother was not the mother of Barbara, they struck a nerve. Pauline confessed that Barbara was her daughter. Yes, she had had an affair with Headley when she was only 16 years old. He had abandoned her when she became pregnant. Her parents had brought Barbara up as her sister. Barbara had never been told the circumstances of her birth. Now that Pauline had cracked, detectives took another turn at Peter Headley. They told him what they knew. Peter retaliated by revealing that he had met Pauline by chance in a grocery store after not seeing her for 15 years. They had resumed their affair.

Pauline admitted to sexual dalliances with Peter, but her version of the details was much different. She had not wanted to resume the affair, but Headley had threatened to tell her husband of their illegitimate child. Under this threat, she had consented to sex, but that wasn't enough. Headley wanted to divorce his wife and marry her. This could only be accomplished if her husband was out of the way.

MEMORIAL ARENA IN DOWNTOWN BELLEVILLE

The 1988 Buick Regal is probably one of the most significant cars to come from General Motors this

It's the car that will be the basis for a whole new breed of cars coming from GM in the future.

The development of the GM 10 cars has resulted in one of the most important and expensive projects to be instituted by GM in years, with a cost of $5 to $6 billion

The Regal and its counterparts on the GM 10 platform are all set to replace the Olds Cutlass Supreme and the Pontiac Grand Prix.

My long-term test car was the two-door Regal Limited. This good-looking of the most slippery Buicks to come along in years, with a drag coefficient of 305, one of the best in the business All of the body parts on my test car fit perfectly, with all seams straight and parallel. And to me, that is quite something for an early production car. One of the most striking features noticed upon entering the interior of the Buick is its very modern, if not high-tech dashboard.

You could almost call it a two-level affair that seems to step out on an angle. I would have to say that this dash does take some getting used to, but it seems to go along with the looks of the Regal.

As for the rest of the interior, it is fairly con-servative but of very high quality, with cloth-covered and nice thick seats carpeting sweeping up onto the lower part of the

The 50/50 split bench front seats are good, giving plenty of lateral support but lacking in lower back

Quinte Weekly News elcomes Konorowski, an Oshawaarea car writer, to the newspaper as a regular feature in our new Auto Mart section. Car buffs and people planning to buy a car will want to turn to Glen Konorowski and our Auto Mart support. As for the rear seats, they were comfor-table, with adequate seating for three.

My test vehicle came with a 2.8 litre V6, which is the standard and only engine offered at this time. This small but powerful V6 moved the 3,047 pound Regal around very w with no feeling of strain. well

The heart of the 2.9 litre V6 is multiport fuel inject tion, giving the Regal about 125 horsepower. Mated to this V6 is a mooth-shifting four-speed automatic, or as GM calls it, an automatic with overdrive. The gearing in the transmission give good acceleration throughout normal driving speeds. On the highway and in passing situations, the automatic downshifted well when extra speed was required.

The braking and handling has really set the Regal apart from its predecessor and the competition. The car's all-independent suspension is made up of MacPherson struts in the front; in the rear there is a nique tri-link design with double acting struts and a single transverse leaf spr-

One interesting thing about this leaf spring is that it is made of fibreglass, which is said to have a much greater life ex-pectancy than a steel leaf spring.

I would have to say that the only thing that held the Regal back from being a real great road-holding car are the tires and soft springs. But I am told that with the exterior sport package, which includes stickier tires and stiffer springs, the Regal's already fine handling is greatly improved. Brakes on my test car would have to get an 'A' for outstanding performance. This power-assisted all-disc setup, standard on the Regals, worked well under all con-stopping power, driving in any type of traffic is a lot less nerve racking. I have to admit that going back to my own car with a discdrum combination brakes took a lot of getting used to, making me aware of how good a four-wheeldisc setup really is.

The Regal's wide stance made seating for three in the front and rear atsqueezing, which is quite something for a car these days. Trunk space is generous at 15.7 cubic feet but the suspension and a spare tire that lies flat in the trunk tend to make the trunk rather shallow, which means laying everything on it's side. GM has a lot riding on the future with this pro-duct and it's other GM 10 cars. And if the Regal is just a sample of what is to come, the competition had better watch out.

AG MINISTER CRITICIZES FARM REPORTING

By John G. Smith Jack Riddell, Ontario's Minister of Agriculture and Food, paid a visit to Loyalist College last Tuesto praise the college's role in an agricultural journalism program.

The program lasts two years, with the first year at Kemptville College stressing studies in agriculture, inter-twined with jour-nalism studies, and the second year at Loyalist College where journalistic skills are refined.

"It's one of the most significant and exciting things that has happened in Ontario journalism in quite some time," he said. But the praise he had for the program was only a portion of his speech - the remainder was devoted to attacking the Ontario media and its coverage of agriculture.

"To be a successful politician these days, you have to be able to get your message across in that 15 or 30 second clip," he said, discussing radio and television broadcasts. "With only 30 to 90 seconds to explain some major event that happened in the legislature to their steners or viewers, electronic reporters don't have time for details. They want things to be simple, straight forward and more or less black and white. Well, unfortunately, the world doesn't always work that way.

But he focused his comments on the knowledge (or lack thereof) that journalists as a whole have of agriculture.

Discussing stabilization and a possible 7.5 per cent cap on contributions from the province at an agriculture ministers conference in Toronto, he noticed the looks on the faces of many of the general assignment reporters

'I might as well have been speaking martian to them," he said.

Tripartite stabilization refers to an insurance program for low prices on specific products.

"The lack of basic knowledge about agriculture is one of the major problems facing this industry as it relates to journalism," he said.

"If you don't present your point of view in an interesting and easy to understand way, the media will pass you over for one of the hundreds of other stories out there," he accused.

Pointing out that

Ontario Minister of Agriculture and Food Jack Riddell slammed farm reporting during a visit to Loyalist College last week. (Smith Photo)

agriculture is a $15-billion a year industry, he discussed his disappointment with the London Free Press, Ottawa Citizen and CBC Radio for not having full-time staff members dealing only with agriculture. Following his speech, Mr. Riddell fielded a number of questions about various agricultural issues. On his promises since his appointment in 1985 for tougher foodland guidelines, he said a profoodland posal should be introduced in this coming sitting of the legislature.

He attributes the delay to 476 submissions on the subject. "It's taken considerable time to go through all those submissions," he said. "We want to be somewhat flexible petitive on the interna(dealing with land tional market.

Free trade and its implications were also discussed, in particular, a promise of $100 million from a joint federal-provincial program to Ontario's grape and wine industry after they requested $156 million to "We're not softening make them more comstance (on free trade),"

He claimed that wines like Inniskilin already make Ontario competitive in the market but farmers have to focus their attention on hybrid grapes and use the funds to pull labrusca grape vines out of

of many being held across the country at the Thanksgiving time of year. The goal is to restock the shelves before Thanksgiving and the lean winter months when the need for food grows. Gleaners feeds an average of 60 families a week. Although the number is holding steady, right now, neither rising nor dropping, Mrs. Doef knows that the need will start to increase soon. The need really jumps in winter because of heating bills, Mrs. Doef said.

People coming to the food bank must be referred there, generally by Social Services, a doctor or health nurse, the Salvation Army or a pastor. The referral slips are designed to weed out con artists from those genuinely in need. And Mrs. Doef is tough on people who know they are sup posed to bring a referral slip but haven't gotten one.

"I do my part; you do yours," she tells them, adding in the interview:

The food drive here is one "they have to look for a solution. They have to do their homework. It's not just a handout."

She doesn't, however, turn away people who are coming to Gleaners for the first time. They are often confused and upset by their circumstances. Only great need has overcome their pride and forced them to come to the food bank,

At Gleaners, they will find not only food to tide them over, but advice on ef sees all kinds sing the service. There oung people liv-ing on the street who don't even have a can opener and stretch their food with river water. Where they will go in the winter mon-ths, she doesn't know.

There are women, confused and crying, whose husbands have thrown them out with the kids There are people working hard at minimum wages who had to pay first and last month's rent and now can't afford anything to on social assistance o workman's compensation whose cheques haven't arrived on time.

'It breaks my heart sometimes," Mrs. Doef said.

She is cheered when a person doesn't come back to Gleaners for more food. "If they don't come back, there was probably a hap-py ending," she said.

There is nothing she would like more than to see Gleaners close because no one came back, but she knows that won't happen. "There are too many of them," she said. She even finds people coming in from out of town from as far away as Napanee or Tweed, more than Gleaners can handle. "What do you do?" she asked.

You can give.

THE KILLING FIELDS: (1984), 139 minutes

THE KILLING FIELDS, (1996, 1997). Director. Roland Joffe Starring: Sam Waterston (Sydney Schanberg), Dr. Haing S. Ngor (Dith Pran), John Malkovich (Al Rockoff), Craig T. Nelson (Military Attache), Athol Fugard (Dr. Sundesval)

This film is based on the experiences of New York Times reporter Sydney Schanberg (Waterston) and his Cambodian assistant, Dith Pran (Ngor). It begins in 1972, when the vietnamese war was rag-ing along the Cambodian border and the Khmer ing along the Cambodian border and the Rhimer Rouge guerillas were closing in on Cambodia's capital (Phnom Penh). The American Embassy was frantically evacuating American nationals before being forced to close. Schahberg chose to remain in Cambodia and Pran had little choice but to stay on as well as well.

The movie was made in a realistic, cinema verite fashion. Some of the dialogue is impossible to follow, but the direction is so skillful it is clear what is going on. Throughout the film, an illusion is created that you are watching reality rather than a staged production. This is no coincidence, since the director, Roland Joffe, is an experienced documen-

Although it is a long movie, The Killing Fields never drags. It presents a strong case against war, without being sentimental or preachy. Some scenes are almost too vivid to watch, but they never become trite or artificial. As grim as it is, it should be seen even by those people who don't like war movies. It could change the way you think about war and human motivations.

Haing S. Ngor, in his acting debut, deservedly won an Academy Award for best supporting actor.
The film also won Oscars for its cinematographer (Chris Menges) and its editor (Jim Clark).

It is totally unsuitable for younger children.

NEWCOMERS ENTER FRAY

With municipal elections approaching, three people who are new to the field of municipal politics have fil-ed their nomination papers to become aldermen in Belleville.

The most recent one is Dale Baker, owner of the Coffee Connection in Century Place. Although his announcement yesterday afternoon marks his first attempt as alderman, he's been active in municipal politics through organizing a number of petitions and giving deputations to Belleville city council. Some of his priorities as an alderman would be a review of the city's official plan, "the lack of public washrooms at the newly recycling program and holding council meetings later in the evening. Up u til now, they've been held at 4 p.m. but he wants later meetings so the public can participate.

"It's impossible for the public to attend council meetings right now unless you're a school teacher and get out at 3:30," he said.

Last Monday, John Last Monday, John Fryters, operator of Fryters Addiction Con-sultation Training Ser-vices, also threw his hat into the ring. Although he's never run for alderman, he was recently defeated in a bid for the Liberal nomina-

election, beat out by Lyle

If he was to occupy one of the seats in the council chamber, his priorities would include addressing problems in the downtown ore such as vandalism and loitering, more "pro-active" social and health services and municipal taxation levels.

Doug Crosbie, the municipality's former police chief has also filed his nomination his nomination papers in his first bid for the position of alderman.

The only member of the present council who has announced he will not run is Ross McDougall.

Entertainer seeks top city post

By David Botting

A country music entertainer has decided to turn his hand to politics. Willis L. Robertson, known in the entertainment business as Ontario Slim, intends to go from country music to city mayor" as he announced his candidacy for mayor of Belleville last week.

A native of the Ottawa Valley and an entertainer since 1957, he moved to Belleville in 1975 because it is a "logical place to live" midway between the major centres of Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal

If elected mayor, he intends to apply that same logic to the job of selling the city to industry. 'Belleville is ideally located between our capitals — both provincial and federal — thus making our city the industrial location with the most poten-tial in Ontario," he said.

He said he would promote the city. "I'm a number one sales person, he said, "and I intend to sell our city to all types of industry.

He referred briefly to the waterfront, controversy that has embroiled city politics over the last year. saying: "I only want to state that I am not a developer. While we cannot learn lessons from the Toronto waterfront, we can certainly learn from the

He also pledged to devote his time and energy as mayor to the Downtown Business Association and to the "security and safety improvement of our downtown core."

But his heart is obvious

PARK NAMES CITY POET waterfront areas in Brockville, Peterborough and North Bay." WRITER IN RESIDENCE'

By David Botting

Belleville poet Pat Hartmann has been appointed writer in residence at Bon Echo Provincial Park in what may be a first for Canada.

Although writers in residence are common at libraries and universities, it is believed that Mrs. Hartmann is the first writer in residence ever appointed by a Canadian park.

Mrs. Hartmann has had a family cottage on Lake Mazinaw at Bon Echo for many years where she knew Merrill Denison well. The Denison family owned much of the land around the lake and Mr. Denison, a noted author, donated the land for a park.

He was the first person to urge her to give poetry readings at the park. She gave her first reading in the park eight or nine years ago but then dropped it until two years ago when the director of the park's visitors program asked her to resume her readings.

This past summer, she offered readings twice a week, and next summer she hopes to also offer a weekly class for children visiting the park. The class would be aimed at opening up their imaginations, she

Youth charged with murder

A 13-year-old boy whose name cannot be released under the Young Offenders Act, has been charged by Ontario Provincial Police with second-degree murder in the death of Christopher Griffiths, a Smithfield boy found murdered Sept. 28.

The charge was laid by Brighton OPP Wednesday following an investigation that included numerous

The body of six-year-old Christopher Griffiths was found in Smithfield Creek on the afternoon of Sept. 28 by two other boys who were playing there. The body was partially clad, but there was no evidence of sexual assault. An autopsy revealed the boy died from a blow to the head.

"It ain't over 'til the fat lady sings."

Where does the quote come from, we asked last week.
One of our readers responded that the quotable baseball manager Casey Stengel said it, and that Milt Dunnell, the venerable Toronto Star columnist heard him.

Is it true? And if it is, what does the phrase mean? To what fat lady was Casey Stengel referring? We followed up with a telephone call to The Toronto Star to be told that Milt Dunnell would be back after the Thanksgiving weekend. We'll try calling again this week. Stay tuned.

WALKING THE KID

Walking with a child can be dangerous. Last week, my wife and I went for a walk with The Kid, who was toddling along on a trike. Would he ride ahead or behind at a decent distance? No, he would not. Instead, he insisted on speeding up and slowing down. First, he's nipping at our heels like a golfer trying to play through. Then, after we let him through, he's lagging and lollygagging, drooping over his handlebars with theatrical exhaustion and slowing us down to ahalt.

Or try walking next to him as he darts back and forth. You feel like a ship in a North Atlantic convoy during the Second World War, zig zagging back and forth, con-stantly changing speeds in the hope of avoiding being

BREATHLESS QUESTIONS

Ann Landers reports that the single most controversial item she has ever dealt with is the question of which way the toilet paper should hang on the roller. This breathless question received some 40,000 responses on both sides of

We now have another similar controversy: should salt go into the shaker with several holes in the top or one with a single hole in the centre? Our Quintessence cartoonist plumps for the shaker with a single hole while his wife vehemently argues for the one with several holes. Appealed to, this editor voted for the shaker with several holes. However, our resident culinary expert Renata West votes for the single hole shaker.

My own most memorable argument with my wife was over whether it was possible to hit all the stoplights on green on a certain street in Sarnia where we lived for two years after our wedding. I'm happy to report that our marriage rose even stronger from that bitter discord.

Now, dear, that was totally uncalled for. So you want to play hardball, huh? Okay, what price the toothpaste tube. huh? Look, you've got to roll it up. If you just squeeze it in the middle, you can't get any toothpaste out of the bottom. And it looks messy.

Mr. Parsons, represents the Township of Sidney, the Village of Stirling and the Village of Frankford, said his record over the past six years has demonstrated his commitment to "quality education at an affor-dable cost." As a parent with children in both elementary and secon-dary schools, he said he is proud of the school board's initiatives for additional textbooks and computers while stress-ing the basics of math, english and science. The board has been

The revenue from these sales reduces the board's need for tax dollars and provides additional taxation when returned to the private sector, he noted.

Mr. Parsons said he is particularly proud of his and cited public forums he co-sponsors annually in his constituency to maintain communication between the taxpayers and himself.

Mr. Parsons identified funding of education as the major issue facing the school system, citing as examples decreasing provincial support and a pro-posal of the province to remove industrial commercial taxes from local control.

CITY NEEDS WATERFRONT ACCESS

Doug Brewer, a provin-cial candidate in 1987 for Prince Edward-Hastings PCs, announced Friday that he would be running for alderman in Belleville.

Mr. Brewer comes from a background of political science at Queen's University and he moved to the area less that two vears ago.

"I have watched the present city council very carefully over the past months and have become concerned about a number of problems the city faces ... there is a wealth of experience on city council, but aldermen have bickered and let petty differences obstruct their view," he said.

Listing his priorities if he were to become alderman, he mentioned that Belleville needs a recycling program to remain a "progressive city," and needs greater access to the waterfront.

"With the aquisition of the final piece from the Toronto Dominion Bank, the city now owns a strip of land on the river downtown. There is no better place for a public walkway," he said. "We must protect the waterfront - on the bay, and on the river, from development which is not in the long term public in-

As an alderman, the "acid test" he said he would use is "what decision will best serve the in-terests of all of the citizens of Belleville."

SWAT MEMBER RUNS FOR COUNCIL

Shirley Langton, an active member of the SWAT organization that mobilized to fight city hall over proposed development plans for the Meyer's Pier area, has announced she intends to seek a seat on Belleville's city council this fall.

Mrs. Langton is keenly interested in municipal issues, having attended numerous council and committee meetings over the past year, often on behalf of SWAT. She says she is particularly concerned about preser-vation of waterfront parkland, environmental issues and the updating of the city's official plan.

She calls for a "return to honest, open government and compliance with city bylaws and planning concepts.

In addition to her activity with SWAT, she is ember of the citizens advisory committee appointed by city council to assist in the bayfront planning study.

Mrs. Langton is a registered insurance broker with Marsh Insurance Ltd. She and her usband Frank have two children and are longtime Belleville residents.

Local vote no place for federal politics

Belleville's city council has rejected a plea by Doug Grant and 14 other petitioners to include a referendum on bilingualism on the municipal ballot

They were right to do so, as municipal elections are no place for what are essentially federal issues. Furthermore, Mr. Grant is the candidate for the Confederation of Regions party, whose major political platform is anti-bilingualism — and a federal election is being held at the same time as the municipal election and thus the proposed referen-

If council had agreed to allow the referendum, it would have given Mr. Grant and his party an advertisement that money can't buy. It would have given additional publicity to an issue that is essentially COR's and no one else's.

Council acted wisely in turning down the request. A municipal election is no place for federal politics.

A sobering warning

A sobering warning about the dangers of pollution has come from a group of scientists founded more than 30 years ago to find ways of avoiding nuclear

The Pugwash Movement has warned that growing strains on the environment "can lead to massive catastrophe even if nuclear war is avoided." The scientists have declared that the threat of global envir amental disaster is as dangerous as nuclear war.

They make the statement based on the central issue of climactic changes as a result of ozone depletion, massive deforestation and soil degradation. In other words, they are saying that the greenhouse effect is more than just a phrase

Tough words, but worth listening too. Not so long ago, environmentalists were regarded as kooks. Only in recent years have environmental issues come to the forefront and only in recent years have fears about the threat of pollution become a general concern rather than a specialized concern.

The same may be true here. The Pugwash Movement scientists should be heard.

you weak of faith

I for one am sick of all religious fundamentalist crap I have read and witnessed concerning the "controversial" movie, The Last Temptation Of Christ, the latest of this being the letter from Dave Switzer in the Oct. 4th issue of the

Unfortunately, I missed the movie while it was in Belleville, so now it will hopefully be released soon video so that I may watch it at home and not have to be bothered by some nut who thinks he can inflict standards on

There is the first difference between us, Dave, I want to see the movie and you don't. Is it because your faith is so weak that you will not be able to accept the Lord Jesus as Saviour if he is dépicted as having "human" thoughts and fantasies?

Good God, man, He was "God in a tent of human flesh"! Half man, half God. Would it not then be reasonable to assume that a conflict raged inside him as the movie infers?

Remember, the "inher rant" word of God was written by men. Some of those men were "fun-damentalist" enough to twist the meaning of the scripture, as many since the original authors have Another thing, Dave. In order for Jesus to warn us that to lust after a woman in our heart was the same as adultery; do you not think the concept had to be visualized in His mind of such an act in order for Him to worn us about it?

Also, in Mathew, Mark, and Luke He asks three times that, "this cup be

Challenge success

Dear Dave:

I am pleased to report that the 2nd Annual Corporate Belleville Challenge was an overwhelming success. Over 1.000 people were directly involved, either as par-ticipants or volunteers, and it appeared that a thousand more turned out to watch the event.

Your support in helping to publicize the event in your paper was greatly appreciated. I also am grateful for coverage of the challenge and in particular the kind article by John G. Smith

Planning is already underway for the 1989 Challenge, and we can expect it to be bigger and bet-ter again. With your help and the enthusiasm of the teams, I am sure Corporate Challenge will continue to bring diverse parts of the community together for fun and competition.

taken from Me!". A clear sign that he would rather live and some other method used to "save" us all, rather than die on the cross! Both these ideas were used to write the story line of The last Temptation!

My advice to you, Dave, would be to not leave your brain at the door of your house of worthip. Furthermore, Jesus has survived 2,000 years, and I'm sure this movie will do little if anything to destroy my or any other clear thinking non-fundamentalist's trust and faith in Him! Regarding your faith, however, after reading your letter I'm not so sure no such thing as a county health unit. The health services available were generally designed and arranged by individual municipalities to address the need for potable water and sanitation and dealing communicable disease, animal control and control of public nuisances.

In 1966, Hastings County and the City of Belleville formed a single health unit to offer co-ordinated health services for the first time. One year later, the unit amalgamated with the Prince Edward County Board of Health and they were joined by the City of Trenton as well to form what is now known as the Hastings and Prince Edc-Counties Health

INSPECTION

The inspection department, headed by Glen Hudgin, a native of Prince Edward County, is respon-sible primarily for food control, environmental sanitation, recreational sanitation and septic tank approvals.

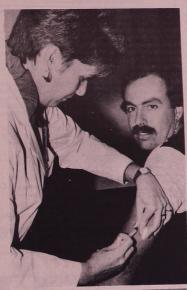

Food control is probably the biggest job, Mr. Hudgin says. His department inspects any premises where food is for offer or sale, including food stores, restaurants, hospitals, nursing homes and Women's Institute kit-

Public health inspectors are also responsible for closing beaches in summer when fecal coliform counts rise too high. Under the general heading of recrea-tional sanitation, the health unit is responsible for conducting water tests and monitoring beaches, parks, picnic areas and local fairgrounds. The unit also provides testing of drinking water, normally from rural wells. Samples brought in by residents as well as routine samples of city water are tested at the public health lab in Less well known, though, is the fact that health unit inspectors also inspect public meeting areas such as bus stations, hotels and motels and even barber shops for general sanitation and prevention of communicable diseases.

INFANT DEVELOPMENT

The Ontario ministry of community and social Services funds several programs at the health unit. One of the programs is in-fant development for youngsters up to two years old.

According to Joan Stacey, co-ordinator of infant development services, the health unit works with children and parents in the home based on referrals from public health nurses, doctors or the children's treatment centre at Relleville Hospital. An example of the kind of children helped are premature babies, who often are slower developing gross motor skills such as sitting and crawling or fine motor skills such as pick-ing things up with their

Infant development workers start by doing an assessment of the child. A program is then developed, working with the parents. The program won't work without the co-operation of the parents, Ms. Stacey

"The parent is the expert," she said. "They're the one there all the time."

ADULT PROTECTIVE SERVICES

Another program of the ministry of community and social services is adult pro tective services. Gail Chiperzak, program coordinator, says they provide support services that allow developmentally handicapped adults to live on their own in the community. "Traditionally, they have been told 'you can't do that.' We're saying yes, you can," she said.

She helps handicapped adults stand up for their rights, vouching for them to agencies, individuals and companies, advocating their right so no one takes advantage of them.

She cites the example of a developmentally han-dicapped woman whose phone has been used by someone else to run up a huge phone bill. Ms. Chiperzak helped her in deciding how to deal with the problem.

Many of her clients have been isolated and don't know how to handle even simple problems, she said, such as telling a doctor about their symptoms and understanding the doctor's Developmentally handicapped adults want to live in the community rather than in isolation and they can successfully,

COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH

According to Alan Mathany, director of com-munity mental health services, his department is a rarity among health units. In fact, he is only aware of one other such department.

Provided by the Ontario ministry of community and social services, the department offers counselling for individuals and families. They work with ex-psychiatric patients com-ing out of facilities into normal life again. They also work with youngsters of high school age, with a counsellor providing ser-vices to five area high

An example of the kind of work they do is that of a single parent mother who is having a hard time controlling her ten-year-old. She doesn't know what to do and is at her wits end.

A public health nurse might recommend that a social worker from com-munity mental health work with the child and parent.

The mother might have a complete immunization. problem with depression that requires medication. Perhaps she just needs support from someone or perhaps a behavious management program is needed for dealing with the

FAMILY SUPPORT SERVICES

This department, headed by Karen Dingwell, offers support to families coping with the demands developmentally handicapped youngsters. The department has information on community, provincial and even national resources available to the narents.

The case worker will help the family to collect comprehensive background information to identify the youngster's needs and then develop an individual plan to meet those needs. They will help the parents to advocate on behalf of their child, to access services and to apply for funding programs to underwrite the costs of the services.

NUTRITION

Proper nutrition is one of the keys to good health, and Nicole McKinnon's job as director of nutrition is to provide nutritional education as far and as wide as she can.

The goal of her department is to provide nutritional information for health unit programs such as prenatal classes, school health curriculums and the unit's preventive dental health program.

People should feel free to call her anytime they have a nutritional question, she

NURSING

Public health nurses are probably the best-known members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit. Barbara Jones, director of nursing, has 43 full time and part time nurses who visit every single baby born in the region. That's 1,800 to 2,000 babies each year.

The nurses also visit every day care and day nursery and every school in both counties to provide testing, identify vision and hearing problems and make sure the children are receiving proper immuniza-

The public health nurses have made an impact on public health, too. Scourges such as polio and smallpox are virtually unheard of today, thanks to immunization programs carried out in large part by public health nurses. According to Ms. Jones, 98.8 per cent of the students in the two counties have had

The remainder are exempt for medical, religious philosophical reasons.

One of the duties of public health nurses is to stop the transmission of communicable diseases such as syphilis, herpes or AIDS. The nursing department also provides infor mation and immunization for people planning trips around the world.

DENTAL

The health unit's dental program is also well-known. The program offers preventive services such as cleaning of teeth to youngsters whose families are on marginal incomes without dental plans. It doesn't provide fillings,

Dental health nurses also go to schools to provide fluoride treatment and give oral hygiene in-

Hockey is hard on teeth, and the dental program provides mouthguard clinics at area high schools each year. Thanks to bulkbuying of materials, they are able to keep the costs down to $8 or $10 rather than $65 or more through private dentists. In fact, the health unit provides mouthguards each year for the Belleville Bulls.

FAMILY PLANN-

This area has the thirdhighest teenage pregnancy rate in Eastern Ontario, said Judith Hockney, supervisor of family planning.
The mandate for her program is to provide sexualieducation and counselling on a wide range of sexual issues from prepubescence to post-menopause. They provide information on sexual health, birth control and sexually transmitted diseases.

"We push abstinence first and then safe sex." she said.

At least 50 per cent of their clients are facing a crisis such as a teen pregnancy or the break up of a relationship, she said.

Judith Hockney is also in charge of the AIDS Resource Centre, started in March through a mandate from the Ontario ministry of health. The purpose of the centre is to purpose of the centre is to provide education on AIDS to schools, businesses, church groups, service clubs and other groups.

The centre also provides individual counselling for people with AIDS and has set up an AIDS support group.

Composting without fear

When I built my first home, it was on a lot of 150 foot frontage, which was a little larger than what was considered the norm · 100 feet. In today's newhome subdivisions, 50 foot lots are emblazened in headlines and 40 foot lots are commonplace.

The point I am making is don't let the size of your lot fetter you from making compost. In fact, if yours is a new subdivision home, the need for compost is even greater because I guarantee that you will not be enjoying the use of natural soils, the soil that nature originally laid down in your area

The moment a subdivision is started, the soil fabric is destroyed. You are left with foundation soil, and if you are lucky, a skim of what is referred to as top soil, soil with a natural organic content.
While it may be enough to root sod, future flower gardens are another matter, and that's where com post comes in. It lightens and adds porosity to even the heaviest of soils. And in sandy soils, where porosity is the prime problem, it provides the qualities of water retention.

The main component of compost is decomposed organic matter: leaves, stems, grass clippings, organic kitchen waste and the like.

But then a second problem arises. For the new subdivision home, devoid of trees and gardens, there is no ready source of organic matter. My advice is, get friendly with the manager of the produce department in your local grocery store. They are constantly trimming and culling over-age vegetables, which means perfectly good organic material is going out to the garbage. No reason why you can't be the garbage collector.

If you are going to compost, you should know a little about the principles of composting and the relative importances of organic material, soil, moisture, nitrogen and warmth

ARDENING AND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

Nature composts but at a rather erratic rate. Sink a shovel in turn into a woodland soil and into a meadow and you'll see what I mean. As a result of years of cascading leaves, the soil in the woodland is dark and crumbly to a depth of one or two feet while the soil in the meadow, fed only by grasses, may be rich with organic matter for only a few inches. Of course, if there are cows in the meadow, the process will be helped considerably. It is obvious that these depths vary according to the rate the organic material that is laid down, the moisture content of the soil, the amount of nitrogen present and the warm temperatures. And when you manufacture compost, you can provide all these elements at an optimum level.

Don't be concerned about insects or smell. When compost is correctly manufactured, the only smell is that rich earthy smell that permeates the air in springtime. It's all a matter of layering, aeration, moisture and the addition of nigrogen

To compost, all you need is a structure to both hold the material and allow the penetration of air, a high nitrogen lawn fertilizer and a compost activator. The rest is pure mechanics.

The structure can be of wood chicken wire or concrete blocks turned on their sides. I have seen successful composting done in containers of snow fencing and plastic garbage pails with holes cut in the sides. Or you may simply wish to have a compost heap with no confining walls.

The compost should be started with a later of coarse material: such things as corn stalks, canna, dahlia, tomato or sun-flower foliage. Over this layer apply a high-nigrogen lawn fertilizer, and a two-inch layer of soil, and, please note, the quality of soil is not important

Water this layer down well before adding the next of finer organic material: leaves, stems, roots, organic material such as discarded vegetables and kitchen waste. Again, add the fertilizer, the soil cover and water well. In terms of amount, each layer can be up to a foot thick. Continue layering with organic material, fertilizer, starter compound and soil until the container is full. And that's all there is to it. With this method, there will be no problems with smell or insects. And no turning necessary. And by the first of July next year, that compost will be ready for the taking.

Belleville Bobcats were able to keep Markham offensive plays at bay last Friday.

CATS TROUNCE MARKHAM 7-1 HOME OPENER

By John G. Smith

It was only Thursday that Moe Hunter, coach of the Belleville Bobcats, was reported to say the team's quality of play was "slop-py." Saturday night, however, the Cats cleaned up their act.

In their first home game of the season, the Cats were able to trounce Markham 7-1.

"I think we played a good game," said Hunter. "The guys were inspired a bit (with their first home

And that inspiration was definitely needed as the Cats entered into the fray with a record consisting of a tie and a loss — a big loss. St. Michael's managed to skin the Cats 10-1.

The results of the loss reflected "the quality of play that night," he said. But Saturday they turned it all around.

"Allan (Bigg) came up big in goal," he said, remarking that during the beginning of the game they "played defensively until we killed a few penalties."

During the first half of the game, shots on goal were almost even for both teams. Markham goalie Pat Mazzoli, however, played a less than spec-tacular game, letting four goals slip by in the first two periods.

At 13:07 in the third period, he seemed to think was a defenseman, skating out after the puck at the blue line, only to glance over his shoulder to see Bobcat Earle Wright slip one into an unguarded

Notable performances during the game consisted of Mark Rupnow with one goal and three assists and Todd Lavender with three assists with other plays spreading out quite evenly over the entire roster.

And now, with this game under their belts, the Cats will face off with a squad at full strength, bringing Derek Potts and Scott Bennett off of suspension.

Their next home game is against Henry Carr, Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. and a rematch against St. Michael's at 8 p.m. Friday night.

We'll try to get a little revenge on that one," said

HAPPY BIRTHDAY JIMY

Happy birthday, Jimy! That's right, with the spirit of giving in their hearts (it couldn't possibly have been for any other reason), Blue Jays' management gave Jimy Williams his fourth term as team manager. Well. that's the answer now the question. Why did you do it, guys?

Think about it for a second. What other club in the American or National League has a manager who can be pushed around by one of his own players? We all know who I'm talking about.

Remember when Williams was finally going to make the right decision and put George Bell on the DH list? It's not that he wasn't justified in that decision — the man just couldn't field anymore.

But because of a little pouting and whining, good old Jimy backed off ... and who set a club record of 15 errors with that little white orb. I'm all for people breaking records but that's a little ridiculous isn't it?

Okay, I admit that he does make some right deci-sions. After all, the team has a 269-217 record in his last three seasons, but they still have the potential to play in the series.

So come on, Jimy, you got another lease on life for your 45th birthday - don't XXX Just a short quote this week.

Where were the people?

I hear people saying over and over again that Belleville's a hockey town. I know we have the Bulls, but let's not forget our Junior B team.

The team's improving in every way and their plays at the net seem well organized. In fact, they might just make it to the playoffs.

And think about this if you go to a Bulls' game, are you guaranteed a seat only six rows from the ice?

There's a lot of talent in the Memorial Arena. Let's have a better turn out for their games and prove that Belleville's truly a hockey town.

The Sportsperson for this week is Mark Rupnow, chosen for his one goal and three assists during the Bobcat's home opener on Friday night.

The large schools of bait fish are continuing to inhabit the bay, in turn giving the bay's walleye population plenty to feed on. Let's hope these forage fish do a quick disappearing act out to Lake Ontario before the winter ice fishing season begins.

Wile limit catches of walleye are quite uncommon right now, a few fish are being caught by those with a little more perseverance. Shad Raps, Wally Divers and other forage base imitations have been the most productive lures of late. Try Telegraph narrows and the Big Bay area if trolling. Shore anglers may want to try casting in the evening off Meyer's Pier as a few walleye have been picked up

With the prime time musky season now upon us, bumper catches are now being reported from Stoco Lake and the Plainfield reaches of the Moira River.

Plainfield resident Mike Skelly was witness to a nice 44 inch lunge caught near O'Brien's Bridge. Mike assisted in photographing the fish as the lone angler unhooked and released the fish unscathed back to the river. Unfortunately, we never caught the name of the good angling citizen, who plans to enter the lunge in the live rlease category of the OFAH's Big Fish Contest.

This is the story of an exception. The murderer stepped forward years after the event and revealed that a murder had taken place and how the murder had been committed.

John and Blodwen Carsfeld of Swansea. Wales.

John and Blodwen Caristed or Swansea, Wates, had been happily narried for years when, on May 3, 1957, John was crushed to death under a load of gravel. The grieving widow was left with little in the way of funds, but with three dependent daughters, Susan, 2½, Sarab, 1½, and Sheila, six months.

Of necessity, she moved in with her parents, Paul and Rosaly Morgan. That's how she met handsome Frank Bayle, a wealthy businessman who was an acquaintance of the Morgan. Blodwen, an attractive 22 year old, caught Frank's eye. It didn't matter that she was in deep mourning over the loss of her husband. Frank courted her with a passion. In January 1959, over a year after the loss of her first husband, Blodwen became Mrs. Frank Bayle.

The marriage was a great success. Blodwen's children were immediately attracted to generous Frank. As the years passed, only the eldest daughter Susan had any recollection of her biological father. Frank became the girls' father in biological father. Frank became the girst state's every sense of the word.

Sixteen years of marital biss passed before it became apparent that Frank, although an excellent provider for his family, had an eye for younger women. In due course Blodwen found out about her husband's peccadilloes. She chose to do nothing at all about the situation, mainly because there was very little she could do.

very little she could do.

Besides, as future events will illustrate, she had a passive nature which allowed her to avoid disagreeable confrontations. When Blodwen heard that her Frank was running around with his 24-year-old secretary, Doreen Soupton, she was hurt, but chose to look the other way.

On Sept. 8, 1975, Frank Bayle abruptly left Swansea. That same day, Doreen, who had been planning to leave, was nowhere to be found. The good folks of Swansea had the mathematical acumen to calculate that two and two invariably add up to four. There was no doubt about it; and Doreen had run off together. Blodwen confirmed the obvious

However, to give Frank his due, he left all his cash and assets behind. Evidently, he telt Blodwen had earned the funds which would provide nicely for herself and her fine teenage daughters. He may have also decided to turn a new leaf in life and have also decided to turn a new leaf in life and start totally fresh with a new woman. We cannot say wife, for neither Blodwen nor Frank went through the formalities of filing for a divorce. Two and a half years later, Blodwen Bayle confided the following story to her vicar, who advised her to tell police. Frank had been obsessed with sex. He had pursued her unashamedly while she was still in mourning for her dead husband. Eight months after her husband's death, he succeeded in seducing her She was ashamed, but there was little she could de Frank was a dear friend of her parents' and often

Frank was a dear friend of her parents' and often stayed overnight at their home. With her passive nature, she became something of his sex slave. When he urged her never to wear underclothing, she obliged. She and Frank had sex at the drop of a hat and in the strangest places. All the while Frank pressed Blodwen to marry him. She wasn't in love with him, but admitted he was a good-looking man who could provide her and her three young daughters with all the material things in life.

As Blodwen approached her 40th year, Frank began having affairs with younger women. Blodwen heard the rumors, but did nothing.

In 1975, her youngest daughter, Sheila, 18, confided to her that she thought she was pregnant. Blodwen was aghast, but there was more to come. Sheila swore that she had been seduced by her Shella swore that she had been seduced by her stepfather while taking a shower. What's more, Shella had not resisted his advances. Blodwen couldn't bring herself to believe such a story. Shella told her mother to ask Susan and Sarah. When Blodwen did so, she discovered that they too had been seduced by their stepfather shortly after their harbitotas. 18th birthdays.

Clever chap, that Frank. When the girls reached 18, they were no longer minors. He could not be charged with any crime related to having intercourse with a minor. Incest was out of the question. He was not their biological father. One question, he was not their biological father. One small mercy — Sheila's pregnancy proved to be a scare, nothing more. Once again, Blodwen did nothing, but she had a plan and was waiting for the opportune moment. She had decided to murder her husband

When Blodwen heard that Frank's current girlfriend, Doreen Soupton, was leaving town, she swung into action. She purchased 50 sleeping tablets. On a quiet Monday evening in September 1975, Blodwen served her husband supper. She 1978, Blowen serve ner nusuann supper sine dissolved the 50 tablets in his wine decanter. Soon Frank was sleeping soundly. Blodwen placed a pillow over his head: A firm believer in doing a thorough job, she held the pillow pressed against his face for a full hour. When she removed the pillow, Blodwen returned the pillow to her bed.

The Belleville Detach ment of the OPP is investigating a break, enter and theft at a trailer located at a construction site on Palmer Road.

Sometime after 7:30 p.m. June 20 and 7:00 a.m. June 21, 1988, thieves broke the lock off the rear door of the trailer, entered and stole a quantity of con-a quantity of construction equipment.

A FLYGT sewage pump serial No. 13-882-0201 and a Poly Quip generator mo PGX2400, serial model 10147, as well as a Stihl Quick Cut cement saw. were removed from the scene. The value of the missing items is $3,802.

Police report that, due to the size and weight of the sewage pump, it would require at least two persons to move it. They also report that it is only used in large sub-divisions and would not be suitable for individual her three daughters

The team will begin this trek at 6:30 a.m. on Friday, Oct. 21.

And many children will benefit because of this at-tempt — like many others have before them. In December 1986, Sonja, age 12, had her wish for a Disney Trip fulfilled. She died of leukemia in September, 1987.

Rachael, age 10, wished for a visit with Michael Jackson. In January, 1987, she and her family flew to L.A. and visited with him for a few hours. Rachael has an inoperable tumor.

Phillippe, age 14, had bone cancer — her wish was for an Omni Robot. She had her wish fulfilled in Febuary 1987 and she passed away 14 days later.

In March, 1987, Niko wanted a BB-Gun. His few weeks before he died of bone cancer at the age of 10. At his request, the gun was buried with him.

In August, 1987, 14year-old Sylvain had his wish granted for a Rambo Adventure. Sylvain was transported from his Hull residence to CFB Petawawa in a helicopter. Thanks to the special ser-vice Forces 1 Commando Squadron, he took part in war game manoeuvres, Hercules plane ride, driving and firing a cougar tank, firing a 150 calibre gun, and participated in an actual war game firing blank ammunition. Sylvain has bone cancer.

These children are only a handful of those who have the Children's wish foundation to thank for their wishes being granted.

Donations can be made by cheque or money order before Nov. 16 and be addressed to: Base Hospital, "Wish Come Operation distributed by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, rabies has been a serious problem in Ontario since the 1950s, reaching epidemic proportions in 1986 when animal rabies cases jumped by 165 per cent from 2,124 cases to 3,507. That year, the number of people treated for exposure to rabies almost doubled from 2,150 in 1985 to 4,212 in 1986.

RABIES EPIDEMIC PEAKED IN 1986

Southern Ontario, the health unit reports, has the highest concentration of animal rabies in North

Although most people associate rabies with dogs, the number of rabid cats has exceeded the number of rabid dogs by as much as 50 per cent in recent

The household pets nor-mally contract rabies from exposure to wild animals such as foxes, skunks, bats, coyotes and raccoons. Livestock such as cattle and horses can also be infected and pass it on to humans.

According to the health unit, it costs about $400 for vaccine to treat so-and in 1986, more than $1.5 million was spent on vaccine to treat the 4,212 suspected cases of human exposures. That figure doesn't include doctors' fees for diagnosing and treating the cases or other medial, laboratory, animal care or investigation costs.

Treatment for people exposed to rabies consists of five injections over a one-month period. The disease is almost always fatal if symptoms develop - only one case of someone surviving rabies has ever been

PET DOGS AND CATS MUST BE VACCINATED FOR RABIES

The Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit will be holding a series of rabies vaccination clinics for cats and dogs on Oct. 15 and 22.

The clinics, held in co-operation with the Quinte District Veterinary Association, will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at advertised locations in Belleville, Brighton, Camp-bellford, Picton, Roslin, Stirling, Trenton and Well-

According to a health unit press release, a provincial regulation adopted Sept. 13, 1986, all dogs and cats three months or over must be vaccinated annually for rabies. The regulation is intended to protect people from the disease, since over 50 per cent of all human exposures to the disease come from contact with non-immunized pet cats and dogs.

The charge is only $6 per ranimal, and the owner is provided with an immunization certificate to indicate when and where the animal was vaccinated and when the vaccination must be repeated. A rabies identification tag will be provided for each vac-cinated pet.

Pet owners who do not get their pets vaccinated as required by law could face fines of up to $5,000.

JOINT VENTURE PRODUCES REFRESHING DESIGN

By Glen Konorowski

Back in the early '80s. Ford, in its wisdom, decid ed that with rising fuel costs and the decline of the mucle car it was time to find a replacement for the Mustang Tying to find a desirable design in a front-drive car. Ford looked to Mazada (Ford owns Mazada).

At the same time Mazada was looking to build a plant in the United States. With this in everyone's mind, a cooperative deal was set up.

Ford would use the drive and suspension com-ponents of the new MX6. In turn Mazda would get its plant and build the car for Ford.

To keep its car destinc-tive, Ford decided to design its own body and in-

As it turned out, Ford decided not to use the Mustang name as the popularity of the Mustang started to increase

Looking at the Probe you will find that it is one of the most refreshing designs to come along from Ford, in some time

This design combined with Mazda's fine reputation for building cars is an unbeatable combination

My test car was a bright red LX version of the Probe. This is the middle car in three-car model lineup: the base model being the GL and the top-of-the-line car named the GT.

ADER'S R.V. Sales

basically different in trim levels: the GT has a turbocharged engine and fourwheel disc brakes.

Quality is the only way to describe the fit, finish and paint on the new Probe. As refreshing as the Probe is on the outside, it is nice to see the same effort went into the design of the interior.

Here, Ford started by designing a functional but attractive interior with all controls well-marked, easy to use, and within easy reach.

One feature that Ford did borrow from Mazda was little flippers that come out of the dash for turn-signal and cruise control. These flippers work extremely well are very easy to use.

My only complaint about the new design of the car was the high lift-over to get items in the hatch. The person loading the car really has to extend himself to move anything around in the hatch.

The seating in this two-The seating in this two-plus-two is practical and comfortable. My test car was equipped with the op-tional power seats, which worked well. A 60-40 split rear seat makes the Probe a lot easier for loading those longer items.

Mazda's own 2.2-liter overhead cam is the base engine for the GL and LX models. This 12-valve engine puts out about 110 orsepower to give the Proa top speed of over 130km per hour.

The base transmission is fine-shifting five-speed. test car was equipped with optional four-speed under all types of load conditions

Ford made the right move by using the suspension components of the MX6.

To get this great ride and handling, the Probe is equipped with a MacPherson strut front suspension. In the rear, a four bar with a single trailing arm with coil over shock suspension is used with a sway bar.

Under hard cornering, this rear suspension will toe in and slightly turn the back wheels for better handling.

While on the subject of better control, the Probe uses a power-assisted rackand-pion steering. As the speed of the car increases. he sensitivity of the steering decreases. Over the course of a year I drive a lot of cars; some suit me, others don't. The Ford Probe is one car that suits my desire for a fine handling car with the practicality of being able to put the kids and all their equipment in the car. too.

It will be on my own list when I go shopping for a

COMPROMISING POSITIONS: (1985), 98 minutes Director. Frank Perry Starring: Susan Sarandon (Judith Singer), Raul

Julia (Lt. Suarez), Judith Ivey (Nancy), Edward Herrman (Bob singer), Mary Beth Hurt (Peg Tuccio)

An amorous dentist is stabbed in his office with one of his own scalpels. Judith Singer (Sarandon), one of his patients, is intrigued with the idea of knowing someone who was actually murdered. A former reporter, she compulsively starts her own private investigation.

She finds out that the dentist had an interest in more than just the teeth of many of his female pamore than just the teeth of many of his female pa-tients. He liked to take them to motels, where they would carry on. When they were agreeable, he took photographs of them in semi-pornographic poses for his private scrap-book. He was also involved with the Mafa in a porno-distribution collection. Many suspects had good reason to kill him.

The story is patteren more on the British than on the American murder story format. It has no fights, no chases and no shooting. Instead, it relies on a lot of talk, reasoning and careful tracking down of clues. The dialogue is witty and believable, especially when Judith's friend Nancy (Judith Ivey) or Lt. Suarez (Raul Julia) are on-camera. There are some unbelievably realistic squabbles between Judith and her husband (Herrman).

Over-all, this film will probably appeal more to women than to men, although it should by no means by considered a "woman's movie". It is unlikely that it would interest children of any age.

The director, Frank Perry, has to his credit a number of other movies including Mommy Dearest as well as the underrated The Swimmer and Diary of a Mad Housewife.

REMATA'S RECIPES

Hi, now that we are all full of turkey and pumpkin pie, I am sure a change would be welcome. The following is a marvellous recipe, easy to make and quite economical.

Vienese Veal Ragout

1 lb. stewing veal in 1" cubes

Put into boiling pot of water: Bring back to boil and remove meat.

- 1 diced onion
- 1 tbsp flour

Melt margarine, add onions and meat and sprinkle meat with flour. Make sure meat does not get brown

1/2 cup white wine 3 cups bouillon

Pour over meat.

1 teasp. Paprika Salt & pepper

Add to meat, and let simmer for 50-60 minutes in covered pan. Remove meat to serving platter and keep warm.

1 egg yolk, well beaten

Add to sauce in pot, remove from heat. Add well beaten egg yolk.

If you wish to add mushrooms, do it about 15 minutes before removing meat from pot. Serve with dumplings or noodles or rice

MAVERICK ALDERMAN SEEKS REVIEW OF OFFICIAL PLAN

Kerry Soden, considered by some to be the maverick alderman on city council, announced Friday that he would be seeking re-election as a Belleville alderman.

Mr. Soden has completed two terms in the council chamber and is a chartered accountant with the firm Soden and Company. He was born in Belleville, left but returned in 1971 and has resided here with his wife and two children.

If elected, he says his first priority as an alderman would be to "insure that the official plan will be completely revised and updated," which he noted is long over-due for a com-plete revsion.

"The official plan was drafted 13 years ago and hasn't been revised since,"

Mr. Soden has criticized the latest council on many occasions for issues such as it's handling of caucus guidelines, the waterfront and the Cablevue building until its sale to Teddington Ltd.

In the past, he's also said he would break caucus con-fidentiality if he thought it was in the best interest of

School prayer

Many Christians, especially those with children in Ontario's public school system, are upset by a recent court decision that struck down the mandatory use of the Lord's Prayer in the schools. They shouldn't be.

The fact is, the Lord's Prayer has become a relic of the past, a reminder of the days when Ontario's public schools were at least nominally Christian. Those days, however, are long gone and no one should fool themselves into thinking that today's public schools are anything other than secular.

The reaction of the Ontario Ministry of Education pro ves the point. Its response to the court decision was to announce that the Lord's Prayer would be allowed in the schools — but only in a context that includes readings from other religious traditions.

As the minister of education noted in making his an-As all minister of education first in the mountement, Ontario is no longer a homogenous society. It is a multicultural society with a wide diversity of religious faiths and value systems, and in reaction, the public school system has tryed to be all things to all peo-

But Ontario's educators are fooling themselves and the public if they think public school education is value-free or that it doesn't promote one religion over another.

Take the example of the decision to make the Lord's Prayer one of many readings from a variety of religious traditions. By doing so, the schools are saying that each religious tradition is of equal value — which is just another way of saying it doesn't matter what you believe or even if you believe anything at all. That in itself is a religious statement. It is an affirmation of the religion of secular humanism, a belief that the notion of God in any religious tradition is meaningless, a belief instead that man is the measure of all things

In fact, education can't be value-free. It can't get away from teaching religious values. The instant facts are placed in context, values, and thus religious principles, come flooding back in. Even the very choice of which facts to teach betrays a value system.

And thus we come to the fatal problem in the public school system. It professes to promote no single value system and to promote no single religious point of view but does so inescapably.

Striking down the Lord's Prayer as a mandatory reading is probably a healthy reminder to Christians not the values taught in the public schools with to identify

And it is probably safer for the public schools not to pray the Lord's Prayer. What if the Lord answered it, as Christians believe he will? Listen to the words: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in

If you pray that in an Ontario school, you had better be prepared for the Lord to bring his kingdom to earth in that very school. If you don't believe that, then don't

Halt Loyalist residences until sewers are improved

Regarding the plan for a residence at Loyalist College: the college sewer system drains into the Dundas Street West sewer system down from Avondale Road. It can be assumed that the proposed Loyalist residence will also drain this way.

The Ministry of Environment has put a freeze on any building that flows in-to the Dundas Street West sewer pipes due to back-up into basements overflow directly into the Bay of Quinte, 700 yards from our intake of drinking water. The sewage does not get down to the treatment plant in a rain storm situation.

A Gore and Storrie report on in-flow and out-flow Filtration into the sewer system was presented to city council in March/88. It concluded that a population increase of 2.3 persons per acre will overload the sewers, laying the blame for the situation directly on deteriorating sewer pipes such as these in this area

The remedy is a two phase program. 1. In 1988, new sewer pipes down Avondale Road. 2. In 1989, new sewer pipes down Dun-das Street West. This information can be verified by a tape recording of the council meeting at which the report was given.

Although the plan was approved and a contract let, the reconstruction has not yet occurred.

This is such a high profile project, that it has to be hoped that enough pressure can be brought to bear on city council in the election year. By the builders of the residence so that the city will get on with the job.

It is to be hoped that the Ministry of Environment

How to fight outdoor bugs in the house

Late this summer or early this fall, a lot of gardeners brought a lot of plants into their home and, possibly, a lot of trouble. And a lot of that trouble has already or will soon, show up as a plaque of insects and disease.

It happens every fall as gardeners, somewhat naively, attempt to perpetrate the outdoor season indoors and even with full-sun windows, the results are usually pale imitations. The only certainty is that there is a high potential for trouble, for a few spider mites to become an army and a touch of mildew become an epidemic.

I gave up garden salvation years ago when I first started to get serious about house plants. First, the risks were just not worth the results. Secondly, I found sunny window space too limited and too precious to devote to the serendipity performance of annuals that, besides threatening my house plants, will perform at a level far below their sum-

A lot of gardeners don't agree with me, and it's to those adventurous souls that this column is dedicated. I hope they have sprayed the plants with fungicide and insecticide at least three times at tenday intervals before bringing them indoors. And even with those precautions, the next two steps are perative - isolation and inspection.

Keep the plants quarantined for at least a month and twice weekly inspect them for any signs of unusual growth, spots, specks or little beasties fly-ing in their vicinity or moving in the soil. Here are some of the things you may find.

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

Spider Mites: The symptoms are speckles on the foliage, sticky secretions and misshapen foliage on the tips of the plants. If you are suspicious, mist the the tips of the plants. If you are suspicious, mist the plant, particularly new growth. If mites are present, their tiny webs will show up just like the webs of garden spiders during dewy morning.

At this point, you have to make a decision, to take up the battle or dump the plant, because in the dry, warm conditions of the home, and without natural enemies, spider mites will proliferate and quite easily spread throughout the house. If you decide to win the war, start spraying with insecticidal soap every ten days for at least a month and be sure to get under the leaves

By the way, while misting a plant to increase humidity is a waste of time, it is a good weapon against spider mites. Spray the plants daily if necessary until the invasion has been repelled.

White Fly: If you brought in fuscia, you almost certainly brought in white fly, and this is a real tough one. Their presence is unmistakable, bits of white that flit and flutter when the plant is touched and settle very quickly back on the leaves. But it's not the flies that cause the problem, it's the tiny green larvae that feed on the underside of the

Again, use insecticidal soap on the adult flies and the underside of each leaf. Let stand for about ten minutes and then rinse the plant with tepid water.

Mealy bug: Easy to spot, not so easy to eradicate. Little fluffy bits that look like tiny flecks of cotton. If the infestation is heavy, destroy the plant. If you spot them just here and there, mix insecticidal soap and rubbing alcohol 50/50 and spray, making sure you hit the bugs.

Repeat as often as necessary and it may be necessary for a long time in order to get rid of these prodigious egg layers.

Scale: Close inspection is needed to spot these 1/8 inch insects that hide under a covering that looks like a lumpy brown or green oval blister. Pay close attention to the underside of leaves, along stems at the point where leaves join a stem. With luck, you'll spot them before the infestation becomes severe.

If you spot them, scrub them gently away with a toothbrush dipped in insecticidal soap then rinse the plant thoroughly. But once is rarely enough. Inspect weekly and repeat as scales are spotted

These are the most common of the insects that can be brought indoors with outdoor plants. But of course, that also includes house plants, which have their own problems when they are re-introduced to the home. And that's what we'll talk about next

Are steroids really worth it? Do they in fact enhance sports performance? Or is it a case of mind over matter you think you're faster so you do go faster?

One wonders after reading stories about steroid users. A Toronto paper reported an interview with a former a toronto paper reported an interview win a former champion discus thrower who used steroids for two weeks back in the early sixties. Unable to bench-press over 300 pounds before, he quickly went up to 500 pounds with esteroids. His performance with the discus improved also, but not dramatically.

What did change dramatically was his health. He quit steroids within two weeks because of dizzy spells, lightheadedness and devastating headaches. The second week left him feeling so badly he went to the university health centre where he found his blood pressure had skyrocketted. "I could have died," he told the Toronto newspaper.

For years afterwards, his blood pressure remained unusually high. In fact, 20 years later his blood pressure is still marginally high, he said

Are steroids worth it? Depends on how much an athlete wants to pay for performance. Some pay with their lives.

There is something wrong in sports, though, when so many young athletes are willing to take a chance with their lives to enhance their performance. And they are willing to take some awful chances. Sixty five per cent of the athletes questioned in a recent poll would take a performance-enhancing drug if they knew it would guarantee an Olympic gold medal — and they would take it even if they knew the drug would kill them five years

And city officials haven't told the company to walk the plank, either. At a meeting with Alderman Stu Meeks, Mayor George Zegouras, Chief Administrative Officer Cliff Belch, Parks/Harbour Manager Jerry Brennan, Industrial Commissioner David Parker and Chamber of Commerce Manager Ron Broadbridge, city officials told the Roach brothers to prepare a formal proposal, saying the idea sounded interesting.

"I think this has tremen-"I think this has tremeli-dous possibilities," Mayor Zegouras told the pair after their presentation, while Industrial Commissioner Parker said the pro-posal could be a major boost to tourism in the area

Joly Roger Cruises has two ships in Barbados and one in Antigua, offering four hour cruises on a piratical theme that Denis

Roach conpares to Disney World. A shipboard pirate wedding, walking the plank, swimming, food and other entertainment combine to create a fun-filled experience, he said. The ships are two masted sailing ships with auxiliary engines and come completely equipped for pirates, including cannons, a genuine plank and, of course, the Jolly Roger skull and crossbones. The ships can carry up to 250 people but Jolly Roger Cruises limits the number to 200.

Belleville would require a ship at a cost of $1.7 million. They are asking the city for docking space of 130 feet minimum, perhaps at Meyer's Pier, perhaps at mey and access to sewage, and hydro. While water and hydro. While they are not asking the city for any grants or loans, they are asking the city for its support in seeking fun-ding through such federal or provincial programs as Destinations East.

If everything falls into place, they estimate the ship could be in operation by spring of 1990.

CITY NEEDS TOURIST DRAW

A proposal for pirate cruises by Jolly Roger Cruises could help make Belleville more of a convention centre, brothers Denis and Dave Roach told city officials last week.

According to Denis Roach, Jolly Roger Cruises attracts about 40 per cent of the estimated 460,000 tourists that visit Bar-bados every year. He estimates that close to half of their business comes from the convention trade.

The key to their success in the Caribbean has been to offer something exciting and fun to do during a fiveday convention or sales conference.

'When you're talking to the president of a big com-pany about bringing his sales staff of 300 people, you need enough to do for five days," he said. "You take people having meetings four or five hours a day, and they want to have fun."

Ron Broadbridge,

manager of the Belleville and District Chamber of Commerce, acknowledged that is one of the problems in attracting conventions to the Quinte area.

'The one thing keeping conventions from coming here is the need for organiz-ed activities that will be a heck of a lot of fun," he

This would be the company's first move out of the warm Caribbean basin and into North America. Denis Roach admits the proposal wouldn't be viable if it depended solely on cruises during the short four-month sailing season. He is proposing a ship that could also be used as a floating restaurant, not only during the cruise season, but year-round.

The company would probably offer cruises in the summer and open as a pierside restaurant in the evenings. In the winter months, it would open for lunch and dinner. Some method would also be needed to keep the ice away from the ship during the winter months.

They are also investigating offering bus tours from Toronto.

The Roach brothers first became interested in the Belleville area after Dave Roach moved here four and a half years ago. He mar-ried a Madoc woman after meeting her — where else — on a Jolly Roger Cruise.

They became interested in the Belleville area because of its access to the protected waters of the Bay of Quinte, because of the region's charm and character and because it is equally close to the Toron-to, Ottawa and Montreal markets.

"After watching it grow for the last few years, we have great faith in Belleville," Dave Roach Mary kept her head. She spoke softly and rose to her feet. Her husband, whom she had only known as a gentle man, now stood over her making animal-like science. He stared at her through vacant eyes. On April 9, 1878, the Frasers retired for the night at around 11 p.m. A few hours later, while Mary slept peacefully, Simon choked the life from his little son. Three months later, Simon stood trial for the murder of his infant son. When he was asked to answer to the charge of murder, he replied, "I am not guilty. I am guilty in my sleep but not in my senses." An array of defense witnesses, including his father, stepmother and wite testified to Simon's long history of sleep walking. man, in contrast to his plactu nature as an other lines.

The doctor testified that when he questioned Simon shortly after the death of his son, Simon told him he thought the baby was a wild beast.

There was little doubt in the jury's mind that Simon was not guilty in the normal sense of the word. Surely he had not consciously intended to harm his son, whom he loved dearly.

The prosecution attorney, sensing that Simon might very well be found not guilty, changed his tack in midstream. Instead of pressing for a conviction, he strongly suggested that Simon should be considered medically insane and be confined to a lunatic asylum to protect innocent people from future attacks.

average judgment. He stated that in his experience the medical profession had not called anything occurring during sleep 'insanity'.

The doctor continued, "Sleepwalking is merely an abnormal condition of the brain producing delusion and violence." When asked if this was the same as insanity, the doctor responded, "We do not regard it as such. A same man may have delusions during sleep which, while sleep lasts, he believes are true. In that state he is not morally responsible when that develops into action because he is not conscious of the true nature of what he is doing."

into action because he is not conscious of the true nature of what he is doing."

In charging the jury, the presiding judge made it clear that the defendant was totally unconscious of his actions when he took the life of his infant son. He placed the problem squarely in the jury's hands. If they considered somnabulism a state of insanity, Simon should be confined to an asylum. If they considered him sane, he should be acquitted and set free. The jury found Simon Fraser not guity. Normally, he would walk out of court a free man, but such was set the case. Two days later, the hearing was resumed. The judge announced that a satisfactory arrangement had been agreed to between Simon and his family to guard against a future tragedy.

Simon was then formally acquitted. The deal was simple but effective. Simon would lead a normal life by day, but at night he would sleep alone in a room locked from the outside. His wife Mary was the keeper of the key to her husband's bedroom for the rest of his

OCTOBER 19

On Oct. 19. 1744, the Earl of Sandwich proclaimod his creation was to be eaten with "a civilized swallow, not a barbarous bolt." A compulsive gambler, he popularized the slice of cooked meat between two pieces of bread to avoid having to leave the table. Now sandwiches help us avoid going to the table.

His thinking was very British: we eat to live, not live to eat. English food fare makes the latter lifestyle perilous. In a country whose cullinary triumph, tea, demands nothing more com-plicated than boiling water, most foods are mply solid fuels designed to keep one alive.

DATES 'N DARTS BY FRED WEBSTER

That's in the short run. Given time, according to Jane Walmsley's Brit-Think, Ameri-Think, they'll Sandwiches in England are still associated with gambling. Brits will eat anything on bread, but par-ticularly anything with more starch "to clog the veins." Hence a favorite for kids is spaghetti on venns. Hence a layorne for kds is spagnetti on toast. Their classic hero, Peter Pan, wasn't really a boy who never grew up, but an adult whose growth had been stunted by protein deficiency. It's all part of Britain's ongoing war effort. Meats and fresh fruits and veggies were rationed then, and the war effort continues today as a major tourist at-

What England needs is to cross her spaghetti with a boa constrictor. That way there'd be more protein, and the spaghetti could wrap itself around the fork so bread wouldn't be needed.

We North Americans don't eat food; we "merge with it." Our common sandwiches like club or combo creations are rare in England, considered tastelessly overindulgent. Three kinds of meat heaped together smacks of something canned by Dr. Ballard

My own favorite, a spring sandwich with everything from the garden thrown in, would bomb too. The British distrust plant life until it's been boiled for hours to make sure it's dead.

Forget the sandwiches. Take time to eat everything in England with a civilized swallow. There's an important decision to be make with each

This film has a long-drawn-out and bewildering start. It involves U.S. Marines and much shooting. The story finally gets under way when a helicopter crashes. The major in charge of the operation discovers that the crash was caused by the manufacturer's negligence. At this point, most viewers will probably become fairly engrossed if viewers will probably become startly engrossed it they like this type of movie. It is basically an action/adventure story with car chases, shooting, violence, coarse language, pathos and drama in roughly equal amounts. Some of the motivations are unclear and some of the action is unrealistic, but these inconsistencies are not too important unless you start thinking about them after the sounds of the last machine-guns have faded away.

The star, Amy Madigan, is a gutsy young mother who is shunned by her friends for something they think her husband has done. She and her son are being pursued by a small army of men, whose chief aim in life is to kill her. She is best described as a terrified mini-Rambo who has to do what she has to

The movie has a strong Canadian connection. It was filmed in Montreal and Rawdon Quebec, and many of the lead roles are played by Canadians. Most children would likely enjoy this film, but parents should remember that it is violent and the language it contains is not what one would expect to hear at the average Sunday-School picnic.

THE ARMCHAIR ATHLETE BUZZERS RING BOBCATS' BELL

By John G. Smith

The Belleville Bobcats went into Friday night's Buzzers with revenge on their mind after an earlier 10-1 loss. But if revenge is sweet, the Cats were left with a sour taste in their nouths after their 10-2 loss Friday night.

"Things went from not great to really bad," said Cats' Coach Moe Hunter.

The Buzzers were able to take advantage of oppor tunities created by a weak Earle Wright was away at wedding and Mark McDowell was still due to come off suspension, so outshooting the Buzzers 34-30 didn't make a big enough differnce.

Buzzer Eric Lindros made the first goal of the game on a power play only 1:57 into the game and it wouldn't be the last. During the course of the game, he made three goals and three assists. Other outstanding performances were by Buzzers Mike Thompson, with two goals and two assists. Rick Lacroix, with three goals and one assist and Paul McGuire with one goal and two assists.

goals were credited to Sam Thornbury and Steve Pascoe, who both made goals on power plays in the third period. Throughout the game, Throughout the game, tensions flared and more than one pair of gloves were dropped as both teams saw many of their players spending time in the penalty box for fighting majors, unsportsmanlike conduct and game misconducts.

But even when shor-thanded, the Buzzers were able to land the puck in the Cats' net for the final three goals of the game.

Luckily for the Cats, they won't have to face off against the Buzzers again unless they make the playoffs.

This loss brings the Cats to a 2-3-2 record after their second consecutive which leaves them only one point over Kingston in the MacKenzie Division.

TRACKER OFFERS MORE FUN FOR THE MONEY

By Glen Konorowski
This week, General Motors released its new Chevrolet and GMC Tracker to the media and the public. This totally new vehicle was a joint dealing vehicle was a joint design effort by GM and Suzuki. For the most part of the 1989 model year, the Tracker will be imported from Japan. But in the spring of 1990, the sport utili-ty vehicle will be built in Ingersoll, Ont., near Lon-

Suzuki has formed for this joint effort is called CAMI and the Ingersoll plant they are building will even-tually employ about 2,000 people. The Tracker will come in two body styles - a soft top and a hard top. Each body style will either come as a base model or upgraded with a few more dressup items as the Tracker is well-equipped already

Correction Notice

Its styling is refreshing with its curved lines instead of the boxy lines we are all used to.

At first glance, I thought that the Tracker was just a new body on the old Suzuki Samurai. GM has informed the world that the Tracker is all new from top to bottom and bumper to

It has a longer wheel base than its distant cousin the Samurai and it also has a longer body.

This enables the Tracker to have much better back seat room plus a little storage space behind the storage space benind the back seat, however modest. Seating is strictly for four, with a good amount of room in the back seat for two adults.

Of course, with four people, cargo space is limited. With two passengers, the Tracker's back seat folds up to make room for plenty of whatever.

Power for the all-new Tracker comes from a 1.6 liter overhead cam four-cylinder. This feisty little engine produces 80 hp and 96 lb. of torque to give the 2,271-lb. vehicle a good power-to-weight ration. In other words, the engine pulls the Tracker with ease. The Tracker can also tow up to 1,000 lb. and is fairly good for a vehicle of this siz

The base transmission in both body styles is a fivespeed manual with a twospeed transfer case. three-speed automatic is also available on the hard top only as an option.

Both models I tested (transmission-equipped) worked well under the worst of load conditions. This gives me the confidence to say that the Tracker will handle almost any situation the average driver could throw at it.

To keep things simple, the vehicle uses front locking hubs to totally engage the gront wheels in the four-wheel mode. By having these locking hubs, the Tracker gets better gas mileage when they are unlocked, plus less wear on the front drive system.

Since the Tracker meant to be at home on the road as well as on the trail, an independent front suspension is used. In the rear, engineers felt that a solid of regular axle works just fine. Its soft top is relatively simple to put up or down. The GM people told us that with a little practice, it can be done in about five minutes.

A unique feature of the oft top is the flip-up feature over the front section of the roof.

This section of the convertible roof folds back quickly to give the driver a sunroof during times when taking off the top is not practical or convenient.

It will start at a price of $12,495 for the base soft top and go up to $14,190 for the top-of-the-line hard for the short time I had the Tracker, I found it to be a lot of fun. With the lack of small inexpensive sports cars and the trend towards off-road vehicles, it is my feeling that GM has a real hot seller on its

For fun for your dollar, you can't beat the Tracker.

Funding needed for social planning

By John G. Smith

Affordable housing, accessibility to social programs, volunteerism and the quality of life.

These are only a selection of some of the many social issues identified by people who attended Belleville's social planning forum on Saturday set up by the social planning committee of the United Community Services of Relleville.

But these are only a selection of problems — not solutions.

This is why the group of 100 people attending unanimously supported the creation of a comunity planning committee by the temporary social planning committee.

When begun, the committee will be involved in any issue which effects the quality of life, such as the co-ordination of social services and creation of ones which have been overlook-

But such a project won't be created tomorrow

"The steering committee will be in existence for a while yet," said Murray Irwin, chairman of the steering committee. "Community planning isn't a speedy operation."

"Now we have a sense of direction ... we know what's needed," he said.

The forum was opened with remarks from Quinte MPP Hugh O'Neil and Mayor George Zegouras and a report on the findings of the survey. Participants then broke off in-

Canada's best encourage female athletes

By David Botting

When Sylvia Rueggar was 15, she wrote herself a note, setting out the goal of reaching the Olympics, and sticking it between two loose floorboards in her room because she didn't dare share that dream with anyone else.

In 1984, that dream came true. She competed in the first Olympic women's marathon, finishing in eighth place. And that's when the nightmare started for her. A year later, she suffered serious injuries in a car accident and was unable to compete until 1987. Due to injuries, she was unable to compete in the Olympic trials and wasn't able to go to the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

"In 1976, I never thought it would take so long to achieve that goal or that there would be so many setbacks along the way," she said Saturday. "But I learned to see failure and setbacks as part of the challenge to be the best that you can be."

That was the theme Saturday at Belleville's Harbour Club as eight Olympian athletes helped kick off the Canadian Women's Open Squash Championships. The eight athletes, all female, addressed a crowd at the club on their experiences as female athletes, striving to be the best in their fields.

In attendance that morning were Karen Stemmle, downhill skier at the Sarajevo Winter Games; Linda Thom, gold medalist in sport pistol shooting at the 1984 Los Angeles games; Sandra Levy and Sharon Bayes, members of Canada's sixth place field hockey team at the 1988 Seoul Olympics; Karen Strong, a cyclist at the 1884 Los Angeles Olympics and now a cycling coach; Sylvia Rueggar.

1984 Los Angeles Olympics, Barb Olmstead, kayaker at the 1984 and 1988 summer games; and Barb's sister Nancy, also a kayaker at the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

She and the other eight athletes were there as part of the FAME program — Female Athletes Motivating Excellence — sponsored by the Ontario Ministry of Tourism and Recreation.

They all shared a common sense of love for their sports and could share with the audience their practical experience of the joys and pains, sacrifices and achievements required to compete at the world level

All agreed that competing with the best in the world at the Olympic level was the greatest thrill of their lives.

"It was, believe me, the dream of a lifetime come true to win that gold medal," Linda Thom told the audience.

She was 40 when she achieved her gold — "and I See DRUGS Page 12

Who said: "It am tover til the fat lady sings: The quest continues.

Another reader called in this week to say she is sure Casey Stengel never said it. She thinks it came from a television show in the late fifties or early sixties, perhaps the Dean Martin Show. Apparently the show, whichever it was, always ended with a fat lady attempting to sing a song but being cut off by the end of the show before she could finish.

Deen anyone else remember this show?

Does anyone else remember this show?

WHAT, MISS SCHOOL?

WHAT, MISS SCHOOL?

The Kid still loves school. Wouldn't miss it for anything, not even sickness. He has it all figured out just like the Ministry of Education posters: don't drop out of school or you will never be able to find a job, you won't be able to get ahead and your teeth will fall out.

Last week, he wasn't sure he was feeling very well, so his mother suggested she pick him up at lunch time.

Oh, no, he said. No way. Why, he couldn't miss kindergarten. Did we want him to miss it and not know everything when he grew up?

THE INCREDIBLE SHRINKING COUNTRY

Canada, that fat, bloated country that stretches up into the Arctic and over what appears to be, at minimum, a quarter of the globe, is shrinking. Canada is slimming down and trimming up, thanks to the National Geographic Society.

The society has unveiled a new way of making maps in which Canada looks smaller and takes up less of the world's available space. Seems that it distorts things when you take a globe and try to show everything on flat surface. In most maps, countries farther north, such as Canada, are projected larger than they should be in proportion to countries closer to the equator. Thus, Canada is about 258 per cent larger than it should be in west maps.

Under a new system of proportion called the Robinson Projection, Canada slims down, however, to a mere 21 per cent larger than it should be. Sure, Canada is still a bit obese but looks a lot more swelte than before.

obese but looks a lot more svelte than before. That seems only fair. After all, Canada is underpopulated compared to some parts of the world. Seems only fair that we should slim down to give over-populated countries more space on this little globe we call home. Why, next thing you know, that 90-pound weakling known as Canada will be strutting out on the beach kicking sand in the faces of all those smaller puny countries.

SELLING A CANDIDATE

Does he or doesn't he? Only the PM knows for sure. For sure whether or not Brian Mulroney is plucking his eyebrows as part of his new prime ministerial image. Seems some in the media think he is. His eyebrows look less bushy, less intimidating. Why, next thing you know, he'll be getting them waxed.

he'll be getting them waxed.

It's all image, of course. Every candidate does it. Joe It's all image, of too bad about the chin, though).

John Turner has had voice lessons. Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa used to bring his own barber to federal/provincial conferences. Shucks, even Ed Broadfederal/provincial conferences. Snucks, even Ed Broad-bent has gotten advice on a new wardrobe, closed up the gap in his teeth and taken to styling his hair. It's all part of selling a candidate. Sort of like selling soap, as the cliche goes. Does that mean that all our candidates are squeaky cean?

Maybe we should compare it to selling a car. Let's check to see if the odometer has been turned back. Can we kick the tires on a candidate? And how about taking a candidate for a test drive. If we don't like the way he handles, we can park him back on the lot.

How about a warranty? One that's as comprehensive as possible. Not one of those where the candidate packs the roads department with his cousins and uncles and has an affair with his secretary and pockets a bribe for his vote and then it turns out the warranty has expired.

The word to consumers when making a purchase is caueat emptor, the buyer beware. The same holds true in

Be sure to ask a lot of questions, don't assume the answers are necessarily true, kick the tires and be sure to read the fine print before rather than after the election.

The BEAUTY OF BELLEVILLE is our heritage. We must work together to protect our unique legacy from destruction by poor planning. We must struggle for our own quality of life and for the new generation. Wise planning will give new meaning to progress: better long-range goals that will create good jobs, lower taxes and afford better city services - A BETTER QUALITY OF LIFE FOR Present City Council has experience. Is it the kind of experience we want?

I feel that the good of the people has not been foremost in their decisions, that conscience and rational planning has taken a back seat to the short-term gain.

Off and running

And they're off! Ontario's triennial exercise in local democracy is officially started with the closing of nominations last week. In 839 communities across the province, candidates are gearing up for the Nov. 14 day of

Here in Quinte, we once again have a bountiful crop of candidates - more than 450 for about 150 positions, ranging from mayors to township councillors to utilities commissioners.

have some interesting races shaping up around the district. In Belleville, some rumoured heavyweights never entered the race for mayor, but we still have a tri-cornered race with country singer Slim Robertson and karate teacher Kenzo Dozono taking on incumbent George Zegouras. In Trenton, Neil Robertson faces a challenge from longtime alderman Paul Tripp.

Perhaps the most interesting race, though, will be in Picton where incumbent Charles Hepburn is being challenged by Al Piroth, a former reeve who missed out in the last mayoral election by just 40 votes, town councillor Ross Cronkwright and bon vivant and antique dealer Bernie Taylor. There'll be a hot time in the old town on election night!

Other municipalities also have significant races. In Sidney Township, popular reeve Jack Arthur has moved on to the federal race for Jack Ellis' seat and a fight is shaping up between the incumbent deputy reeve Ken Daley and firefighter Tom Noble. Another opening has been created in Thurlow with the retirement of longtime reeve Ken Yorke. The race there will be between two businessmen, George Beer and Vince Golden.

Federal and provincial elections are glamorous than municipal elections, and the federal election running parallel to this year's municipal election has tended to dominate the editorial pages of most dailies, at least. Nevertheless, municipal elections may well have a more significant impact on voters than the more glamorous federal and provincial elections simply because they are local. Water boards, for example, may not stir the same fervour as the dog fight between John Turner and Ed Broadbent for official opposition, but the quality of our local water may well have a greater and more immediate impact on our health.

For that reason, we want to say "thanks" to the more than 450 people in the Quinte area who have decided to run for local office. You may not win, but by running, you are giving voters a choice for their

One surprise in the Belleville municipal race involves a person who's decided not to run - council watchdog" Theresa Kellaway.

Since joining up with SWAT (Save the Water-front All Together), Mrs. Kellaway has been very vocal about problems she saw with Belleville's current council. When the time came for her to put her money where her mouth was, however, the watchdog lost her bite.

Too bad. She has made some strong accusations of conflict of interest and mismanagement at city hall. We would like to have seen whether or not voters agreed with her.

Now we'll never know whether her bark is worse

Preserve Picton's streetscape

At its regular fall meeting held in Picton, the Quinte Association passed a resolution affirming its a resolution armining its belief in the importance of the brick building at Main and Elizabeth Streets in Picton. Built about 1835 for the prominent businessman David Barker Stevenson, it is now known as the Master Feeds store.

Though some of its features have been covered up or removed and in spite of the tall feed mill joined on behind it about 1917. this building remains one of the most important and characteristic elements in Picton's main street and a strong reminder of the bustling era when Picton first became the County

The Quinte Association has worked for many years to foster an interest in the historic and attractive road now known as Highway 33 or The Loyalist Parkway, and wishes you and the people of the Town to realize that the streetscape of Picton deserves special care as an important element in this much-travelled route. ### Beware of rushing plants indoors

Many house plants benefit from a summer out-doors. Hibiscus burst into bloom, benjaminas put on a rush of leaves and jades grow fat and red-edged. In returning plants to indoors, you should be aware of two things. First, your home is a unnatural habitat for house plants. Second, the outdoors is a natural habitat for insects.

There is a case to be made for keeping house plants in the home year 'round. The main point is acclimatization to the lower light levels without the stress involved when plants are suddenly transferred from the brilliance of the outdoors to the relative gloom of the home. Many respond with a shower of leaves. Others just sit and sulk. And the problems are compounded when we, free of the sum-mer garden, start providing our house plants with intensive care at a time when they need it the least.

The best thing we can do for houseplants when we bring them in from the outdoors, except for regular inspection, is to leave them alone. Hold back on watering and don't feed. Let them settle down and get in tune with their new conditions. But the regular inspection (at least once a week) is vital because the chances are good that a variety of insects have set up housekeeping

Be on the lookout for all the insects we talked about last week plus one more - the aphid. If you spot curled, malformed leaves and sticky spots on the foliage, look for tiny insects with pear-shaped the longe, look for thy insects with pear-snaped bodies and tall waving antennae. Try not to touch the foliage or they will simply drop, only to crawl back up the foliage and start feeding again.

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

Spray with insecticidal soap and be sure to get nder the leaves. Half an hour later, rinse the foliage with tepid water. After your plants have had a month or two to setthe down, most problems then will be cultural: low humidity, high temperatures, too much water, too little water, too little light, too much plant food or too little plant food. Here are the symptoms.

If leaves grow crinkly and brown then the chances are good that the humidity levels are too low. Don't waste your time misting the plant. This raises himidity levels around the plant only for short periods and, once the foliage has dried, the plant is right back where it started. Far better to correct the condition with a plant saucer two inches wider than the base of the pot together with some aquarium gravel.

Sit the plant on top of (not in) the gravel and add water every second or third day. This bathes the plant in moisture at a constant rate and will do wonders for a humidity-starved plant.

Most house plants, particularly those that flower. like cool temperatures, especially a night. If you find a plant with leaves wilting, curling and yellowing, chances are good that temperatures are too high for that particular variety of plant. The only answer is to move the plant to a cooler location, making sure it is away from heat vents and of course, never sit the plant on top of a heat source such as a television or a refrigerator

Last but not least is the factor that accounts for 75 per cent of all house plant problems - improper watering. Usually it's overwatering and the symptons are unmistakable. Leaves curl, wilt and yellow and the plant starts to droop. Stems go dark and mushy. Often the soil will develop a musty smell and grey cobwebby fungus appear. If your plant has reached that state, the best thing to do is repot in a drier medium, preferably a soiless mix. Then set it away in a cool, dark place for a couple of weeks

The whole process of house plant watering is important enough that we are going to devote a lot of time to it - next week

 $F_{\!\scriptscriptstyle rom\ ghoulies}$  and ghosties and things that go bump in the night, Lord preserve us - a Scottish prayer.

Out of the darkness, a figure appears. All you can distinguish is the white glow from a sheet and the form of a sack slung over its shoulder.

It's getting closer ... closer. A feeling of fear seems to penetrate your heart - until you notice it's only four feet tall. "Trick or treat!" you hear from under a rubber mask.

Yes, it's that time of the year again when ghosts and goblins prepare for a night of trick or treating - it's Halloween.

But where did Halloween and many of its customs originate?

Although Halloween gets its name from the early Christian feast of All Hallows' Eve, most of the customs followed during today's celebrations stem from the ancient Druids.

The druids believed evil spirits roamed the earth on the night of Nov. 1 to greet the arrival of their season - the long nights of winter. The druids felt the spirits played tricks on frightened mortals. The only way to escape the fury of these demons was to offer them sweets or to dress up like one of them and join in their roam-up and roam from house to house in search of candy or treats, threatening to play tricks on those who don't comply.

The custom of trick or treating also stems from groups of Irish farmers who, hundreds of years ago, went from house to house looking for food for the village. Those who gave were promised prosperity, but those who didn't were threatened

The custom of a jack-o-lantern stems from a number of cultures.

Irish and British farmers used to hollow out turnips and pumpkins and place a lighted candle in them to scare off the evil spirits. The lighting of Halloween fires in Wales and Scotland also marked the beginning of winter.

The practice of collecting coins for the United Nations Children's Fund began in 1965 after it was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. UNICEF members found that many of the American youth who gave to the fund collected their donations while trick or treating.

Many Halloween customs come from Ireland or Great Britain, such as tossing stones, vegetables and nuts into the fire to scare the 'spooks" away. Since nuts were a favourite means of fortune telling to the British, All Hallows' Eve also became known as Nutcrack Night.

British boys and girls would place nuts side by side on the embers, and if they simply glow. ed, it symbolized a happily married life. If they flew apart, however, a rocky future was ahead.

In Ireland, girls would name nuts after lovers and set them on the fire's grate. If the nut burned steadily, a lover's affection was proved, but if it jumped, he was unfaithful

In a Scottish custom, blindfolded children would walk out into a field hand-in-hand and pick a stalk of colewort. How straight or crooked it was described their future mate, the amount of dirt sticking to it showed the value of the dowry and the taste of the pith indicated the temper of the mate.

Another Scottish custom was called the three dishes or Luggies. One dish is empty, one filled with clean water and the last with foul. When blindfolded, children would place a finger in one of the dishes. The clean water signifies a maiden; foul, a widow; and the empty dish signifies a life as a bachelor or old maid.

A fruit which has always held significance in the British Isles on this October night is the apple, stemming from a Roman tradition the Feast of Pomona.

Today, bobbing for apples and eating the ever-popular candied variety still exists, but a more "active custom" has been all but abandoned.

Hanging a stick from the ceiling with a candle on one end and apple on the other, children would try to snatch an apple with their teeth. If they were unsuccessful, the candle would spin towards them, scorching them with the flame or hot wax.

Many parents probably feel the risk of drowning while bobbing for apples isn't as great a danger.

A Scottish tradition involving an apple is for a woman to eat one before a mirror in order to see a vision of her future husband over her shoulder.

Whatever the custom, however, Halloween remains a night when the unknown seems uncomfortably close.

Maybe that was more than a trick-or-treater at your front door.

tion to recuperate. The doctors suggested someplace away from the Glass home in Jersey City. The family customarily spent their summer vacations in the village of Greeley, about five miles down the road from Lackawaxen, Pennsylvania, so it was natural that on May 11, 1915, Mr. and Mrs. Glass, their son, Jimmy 4, and two younger daughters took up residence at the Frazer farm in Greeley. The Frazers took in roomers for the season to augment their farm income. Their house laced the road. Behind the house were fields, and beyond them thick tangled woods interspersed with treacherous marshy terrain.

The day after their arrival at the farm, The day after their arrival at the farm, the Glasses rose early and consumed a full breakfast. Mrs. Glass went to mail letters to her parents, letting them know that they had arrived safely. The post office was about 200 yards up the road. She shouted to Jimmy, asking him if he wanted to accompany her. Jimmy shook his head. He was more interested in the safe of the was more interested in the safe of his head. He was more interested in watching a hired hand plowing one of the fields. The eldest daughter accompanied her mother, while the baby remained indoors.

Charles Glass sat on the front porch, happy to be removed from the rigors of his job. He breathed deeply as he watched his soon running this way and that like a young colt. Absently, he rose from his rocking chair to get a glass of cold water from the kitchen. Later he would estimate that he couldn't have been inside for more than two minutes. Charles Glass emerged from the kitchen to see his wife and daughter walking down the road toward the house. Mrs. Glass joined him on the porch. Her first words were. "Where's Jinnny." She

In or the first time, Charles Glass noticed that his four-year-old son wasn't playing on the grass beside the plowed field. He asked the hired hand, william Losky, if he had seen little Jimmy, Losky said he saw the boy crawl through a fence a few minutes earlier, but had paid no attention. Jimmy Glass had disappeared. had disappeared

The Glasses, assisted by farmhands and neighbors, searched all day for the missing youngster to no avail. Mrs. Glass ware that during the crucial moments no vehicle of any kind had passed her on the road. However, Fred Lindloff, who was then working on the road, swore he saw a car whiz by containing a man and a woman. Other citizens came forward with news of the missing child's blight.

Three miles down the road, in the vilage of Bohemia, a Mrs. Quick saw a parked car. Inside were a man, woman and blond, light-complected youngster. The child screamed, but when Mrs. Quick approached the vehicle, the driver stepped on the gas and sped away. The story was kept alive by a series of strange events. The fact that no ransom note ever turned up and that there was no verbal demand for money from the Glasses kept speculators wondering why the kidnapping had taken place. Gypsies became suspects in an unusual way. For some reason, there has always been a myth connected with wandering gypsies. Simply put, it is thought by some that gypsies steal children to thing good fortune to the tribe. This mth is perpetuated by blond children often found travelling in gpsyc caravans. By coincidence, a gypsy caravan had passed near Greeley on the day Jimmy vanished. Police proceeded to trace the elusive band. They had crossed into Mex-ico and later had made their way to Puerto Rico, where they were intercepted. A blond, light-complected youngster was a member of the band, but he was not Jimmy Glass

Over the years, Mrs. Glass advertised extensively for her son's return. As a result, she travelled thousands of miles in the hope of finding her boy. One such odyssey is representative of them all. The clerks and manager of a shoe store in Norman, Oklahoma, were certain that a little boy left in their store was Jimmy Glass. They sent photographs to the Glass They sent photographs to the Glass family, who thought for sure that, at I long last, they had found the missing Jimmy. The news caused a sensation.

The youngster had every obvious physical feature of the missing boy. The Glasses reluctantly consented to a more Glasses reluctantly consented to a more thorough examination. Only then was it discovered that a distinctive scar on Jimmy Glass's foot was conspicuously absent from this youngster's foot. Once one discrepancy was noticed, others were found. The little boy was not Jimmy Glass

Two weeks later, the boy's mother was found. She had been abandoned by her husband. With no means of supporting her child, she decided to leave him in the shoe store in the hope that he would eventually be adopted by a caring family. In Dec., 1923, Otto Winckler of Lackawaxen was hunting rabbits outside Greeley. It had been extremely dry that fall, and much of the terrain normally so marshy that it was difficult to traverse was now firm. Otto's foot kicked what looked like a small round rock. He picked it up and immediately realized he was holding a human skull. Otto had taken part in the original search for Jimmy 8½ years earlier. He felt sure he had found the long lost boy at last.

Otto looked for other remains. All he picked them up, foot bones rattled inside. Otto looked for other evidence of the missing child, but in over eight years no doubt animals had carried away the rest. Otto contacted police, who, in turn, notified Charles Glass of their find Mr.

Otto contacted police, who, in turn, noti-fied Charles Glass of their find. Mr. Otto contacted police, who, in turn, noirfed Charles Glass of their find Mr. Glass, Otto, and a police officer went to the site where the skull was found. They picked up a few buttons, but that was all. The shoes proved to be those worn by Jimmy Glass. They were new shoes, worn for the first time the day Jimmy disappeared. After eight years, they still bore the manufacturer's name. From the position of the skull and shoes, it was fell that the little boy unaccustomed to rural life, crawled through the Frazer's fence into the woods. After becoming exhausted, he lay down to sleep. Some believe that he may have fallen into a pool and drowned. When the pool dried up due to the unusual dry spell, the body was exposed.

Mr. and Mrs. Glass accepted the theory that their son had walked for some time, maybe discovering new adventures as he went, until he became lost. He either drowned or died of exposure. Apparently he never heard his searchers yelling his name. Jimmy's body was found over two miles from the Frazer's farm house.

The big news last week among the angling public was the 65 lb. monster muskie landed at the mouth of the Moon River on Georgian Bay. Toronto angler of the Moon River on Georgian Bay. Toronto angler Ken O'Brien brought in the new Canadian record on eight pound test line using a four inch rapala while fishing walleye. The cleithrum bone was removed from the huge lunge and sent to Dr. Ed Crossman at the Royal Ontario Museum, who aged the fish at 27 to 31 years.

THE NET RESULT

Area walleye anglers have been reporting some fair catches of late with a lot of fish being taken by those jigging at the mouth of the Trent. Those who have been enduring the chilly nights on the bay have picked up some good fish, trolling rebels and rapans.

Anglers waiting for the good fall rainbow action to start had better get their gear together soon. Recent rainfall has washed the feeder streams of lake Ontario recently, sending the signal for the bows to

BERETTA BEATS BACK FOREIGN COMPETITION

By Glen Konorowski

It's hard to find the words that describe the feeling I had when I turned the key and started the engine of the 1988 Beretta

The sound of the dual exhaust was something I hadn't heard since the days of the powerful V8s of the 970s. General Motors, with the help of Chevrolet, is bringing back a little excitement to driving again without a big price tag.

My test car Beretta GT

My test car Beretta GT has a base price of just $14,793, which includes a list of standard features that would impress any car lover. This kind of wellequipped base car is the way GM hopes to get back a lot of buyers that went to the Japanese for excitement in a smaller perfor-

With a design and development cost of $1.8 billion dollars, GM is telling the world that the company is serious about the competition back to the shores of the Pacific.

The look of the Beretta is something you would think comes from design studios of Europe. Its sloping and round-nosed front gives it a very clean and unclutered look, which is very pleasing to the eye. The fit of all the body penals om my test car was good and the metallic paint flawless. Comfortable is the word

Comfortable is the word would use to describe the seats in the Beretta. They have plenty of support in all the right places plus lots of adjustment to please any size of driver.

The GT's dash contains a full set of guages bunched a little too close together. All the control stocks and heater controls are well marked and easy to use. Even the shifter is placed

Paul

1989 Chevrolet Baretta GT

just where the driver doesn't have to lean over for it.

As for the back seat, getting in and out is quite easy, thanks to the design of the doors. Seating in the back is also good, but lacking a little in headroom—which is the price you have to pay for a great body.

Under the hood, the Beretta GT has a small but powerful 2.8 litre V6 that delivers 125 horsepower. The Beretta GT that I

The Beretta GT that I was given from GM was equipped with the optional Z51 suspension, a package that provides bigger sway bars, heavy duty front bushings and larger front shock struts.

Topping this suspension package are larger-styled wheels with performance Eagle GT and four tires. Putting this together with the MacPherson strut front suspension and a beam axle on trailing arms with coil springs and you have an unbeatable combination.

Cornering the Beretta was no problem at any speed, body roll was minimal, giving the car a very stable feeling to it. I would add that the Eagle GT and tires worked well even in the snow.

The power rack and pinion steering, which seemed a little heavy at first, gives the driver good control with just the right amount of road feel. With a turning circle of just 34.7 feet, parking the Beretta is no problem.

Trunk space is fairly reasonable at 13.5 cubic feet. My only complaint with the design of the car was the high lift to get items in or out of the trunk.

I would have to say that the 1988 Beretta GT has to be one of the best attempts by GM to stop the invasion of small sports coups. By selling the car well-equipped with only the high-priced items optional, GM should be able to bring those traditional foreign car buyers back to the domestics.

Base price: $14,793 (plus destination charges of $453).

Price as tested: $16,855. Standard features included power brakes and steering, power trunk release, intermittent wipers, V6 on the GT, Mag wheel on the GT, plus a long list of standard items.

Some people probably believe that the authors of Some people probably believe that the authors of this column are so uncritical that they all write a glowing review about any old movie they can get their hands on. Not true! Our objective is to find films that are not widely known, but which are above-average in quality. This is not always possible. We do not review any films that we would not recomment to at least some of our friends.

Out of every three movies we view, one is discarded, as being unfit to be recommended. Some examples of these follow:

Perhaps it was only the cold Saturday afternoon, but the two hour wait for Prime Minister Brian Mulroney seemed long enough for some of his younger supporters in the crowd to reach voting age.

Despite the wait, though, hardly anyone in the estimated crowd of 400 to 500 people went home, especially sign-carrying protesters who waited in the cold outside Century Place for over two hours for the chance to show the prime minister their opposition to free trade.

See PM Page 10

By Francis Kavanagh

The battle lines were drawn on Monday, Oct. 24 when opponents of the Madawaska Highlands Regional Land Trust discussion paper attended a meeting organized by the Belleville Fish and Game Club

The 250 anglers and hunters in attendance fear the loss of their privileges to hunt, fish or trap on the proposed 1,500 square mile trust area.

However, Ted Mosquin, president of the Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society (CPAWS), sponsors of the paper said a major study, the Reid Report, conducted by the Natural Heritage League (NHL) significantly alters and narrows the scope of CPAWS. As a result, literally half of the discussion paper falls under the jurisdiction of NHL. Mosquin said CPAWS will adhere to the findings of the Reid report and play an active roll, under the vehicle of NHL, to see the recommendations are met and implemented.

The Reid report deals with the apparent need to establish private nature trusts across the province.

A nature trust is defined as a "charitable, nongovernmental, organization dedicated to the protection and management of natural areas and land-scapes through the purchase, donations or operative land-ownership programs. It is supported through memberships and donations and by volunteer involvement of members.

The NHL is a govern-mental umbrella organization of 28 interest groups, such as; the Ministry of Natural Resources (MNR), Ducks Unlimited, Wildlife Habitat Canada, the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH) and CPAWS.

Mosquin said in future CPAWS will concentrate on MNR's Crown land policy planning process in particular logging on Crown lands. He also said he cannot understand why the anglers and hunters are "scared out of their wits" because CPAWS' 2,200 members do not pose threat to the members of OFAH. 72,000

CITY HALL TOURS AVAILABLE TO PUBLIC

Belleville's citizens will be able to tour city hall this week to see for themselves where their tax monies went in the massive renovation of the building constructed in 1873. Tours are planned for Tuesday, Nov. 1, 7-9 p.m.; Wednesday, Nov. 2, 7-9 p.m.; Saturday, November 5, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Sunday, November 6, 1 to 4:30 p.m.

4:30 p.m.

On Saturday, the municipal candidates running for city hall have been invited to meet the public at Century Place from 1-3 p.m. The event is sponsored by the Belleville Downtown Business Association.

Also on Saturday, antique cars and horse and buggies will be displayed on Front Street downtown and around city hall from 1-4 p.m. If you wish to display a car, call Ian McFarlane at 968-3647. People in period costume can also be seen.

didacy for trustee.
"I know from personal experience what the job entails," the city businessman said in a press release. He served as a trustee in 1977 and 1978 and was chairman of the board 1981-82. As a businessman, he stresses the need for strong liason between the board and the business community, calling cooperative education and the Ties program "excellent programs."

"Employment opportunities for students will improve as they and their teachers get to know first hand the expectations of employers," he says. He is also concerned that taxpayers receive the "best value for our educa-tional tax dollar." He notes that each year, provincial grants form a smaller percentage of the total local educational budget.

The joys of parenting

"Being a parent is wanting to hug and strangle your kid at the same time," says the dad in a recent edition of the cartoon Calvin and Hobbes.

All parents know that sensation, especially when your kid is lost. You're frantic with fear. You just know that he's been run over and left for dead or that someone has abducted him and you'll never see him again.

And then you find him again.

And then you find him again.

Now, this is where the urge to hug and strangle him start up at the same time. A minute ago, you wanted nothing more than to see him again and hug him, but now that you've found him, you find a terrible desire to smack him but good. A minute ago, your heart ached with fear. Now you know it's heartburn and that he's responsible for it, and you just want to shake him and holler at him you're so relieved to see him again.

Ironic, isn't it? Ah, the joys and tribulations of parenting.

IGNORANCE IS BLISS

The London (England) Sunday Times recently commissioned a survey to guage the level of general knowledge amongst the general public. The results were startling, to say the least.

One out of six surveyed couldn't pick out Britain on a map. They didn't have a clue. No idea. Not a sausage.

map. They didn't have a clue. No taea. Not a sausage.
Canadians, of course, have no such problems. We're that big red country north of the U.S. The one that stretches up to the North Pole. I think. Or is that the Soviet Union?

Heaven help us if the ever change our colour on the

"Oh, sure. I know which one is Canada. It's the red one over here. No? ... Um, here's a red one. Is this Canada? No? Okay, what about this red one? Whatdya mean they changed the colour? How am I gonna find Canada if you change the colour on me, huh? I mean, what right did they have, huh? Why next thing you're gonna tell me they moved it or they made is smaller or something. Whatdya mean they made it smaller? How am I ever gonna find it if they make it smaller too?"

A recent column on chain letters sparked an idea for newspapers: chain circulation. Here at Quinte Weekly News, we print a minimum of 36,000 copies every week. With the concept of chain cir-culation, we could cut that back to, say, about 3,600 copies, and ask each reader to pass it on to their neighbours.

Remember to pass it on. Don't break the chain. If you break the chain, then next week, you'll find all 3,600 papers in your hedge. And everyone of those 3,600 papers will include your name in the court news. Or worse, your neighbours will read all about you as the star feature in next week's Crime Flashback by Max Haines.

ELVIS SIGHTING

We feel a little like the boy who cried wolf so often that when a wolf was really there, no one believed him. I mean, who's going to believe us now? Still, here goes.... Last week, a friend saw Elvis Presley eating at the lunch bar at Woolworth's in the Belleville Plaza. She can't recall what he was eating or how he was dressed, but she says he had grey sideburns. She said he wasn't humming anything or singing anything. He didn't flash a rhinestone jewels at her or anything. He just sat there and ate

Is she reliable? You judge that. She's a teenager and what could be more reliable?

XXX GIILLIBILITY

Remember The War of The Worlds with Orson Welles? That radio broadcast became a classic. Aired on Hallo-That radio broadcast became a classic. Aired on Hallo-ween and treated as if it were regular programing rather than theatre, the show scared the wits out of millions of Americans despite disclaimers throughout the show that told listeners it was only a Mercury Theatre production. How guilble can people be! Nobody could be that guili-ble today, could they? I mean, no one believes that Proc-tre and Gasphie's low in each;

tor and Gamble's logo is really connected to satan wor-ship and no one really believes that there are alligators in New York City sewers and no one really believes that we entered a New Age of peace and prosperity last August and no one really believes that Elvis is still alive, do they?

Going for gold

When Canada's pride and glory, Ben Johnson, was stripped of his medal for illegal use of steroids, all of Canada's other Olympian athletes were unfairly tarnished. It seemed as though Canada's other fine athletes and fine performances were lost in the swirling cloud of doubt and suspicion, charge and countercharge, that followed the Johnson incident.

If a handful of athletes left all the others tarnished, then perhaps a handful of other Olympian athletes can restore the shine. The eight female Olympians who visited Belleville recently, as reported in last week's Quinte Weekly News, certainly did so.

It was refreshing to hear these women share their youthful dreams with the audience. It was refreshing to hear of their high goals, of their motivation and determination, of the sacrifices made for the sake of achievement.

If the message had stopped there, it wouldn't have been enough, though. After all, that's what motivated the athletes who took illegal drugs: a driving determination to win — at any cost if

But what came through was something more. We heard about setbacks and failures despite the determination and the hard work. And we heard that these failures were all right. That it was enough to have done one's best, to have given one's all, and to have still fallen just short.

Perhaps Karen Strong, a member of the Canadian National Cycling team and a competitor at the Los Angeles Olympics, summed it up best from her perspective today as a cycling coach. A fierce competitor who had to come to terms with her failure to win a medal at the olympics, she talked about desire, motivation - and sheer enjoyment - of not just sports, but any aspect of life.

You have to have an intense, burning desire for whatever it is you're going to do," she said. "Get out there and give 110 per cent, kick butt — and then enjoy your efforts.'

Now, that's a role model for people of any age, athletes or not.

levid Bolling

JEERS - To those who heckled the prime minister Saturday with the language one would expect — though no less deplore — in a hockey arena. Not that there's anything wrong with heckling, one of those fine old Canadian traditions. But surely, other language could have been found than the language of the barnyard.

You stated that I did not put my money where my mouth is Mr. Botting, I have questioned council's actions very openly and have never backed down from anyone. Over the past 18 months I have spent approximately $3,000 of my own personal funds doing - I'm sure you realize the cost of proper research. I have spent endless hours doing this research and I have no regrets.

Jeers: To David Botting for unjustified criticism of the "Watchdog"

IN YOUR OPINION

Regarding your editorial in the Quinte Weekly News this week, I was very disappointed in your remarks

At no time did I ever hear or read of Mrs. Kellaway aspiring aspiring for public office

Did you, Mr. Botting, of-fer support to the "Watchdog" either morally or financially? Did you enquire as the cost of the research done by the "Watchdog" over the last 18 months to two years?

To run for public office requires a great deal of money. If you or anyone else feel the "Watchdog" should have been in the race, perhaps you should have made your support known to her.

Having attended council meetings and having followed council broadcasts since their inception, I realize the network does not appreciate anyone pointing out the shortcomings of our elected representatives. Too bad!

The apathy in this city is appalling. If the present mayor and council are returned after the disclosures of secrecy and apparent wrongdoings eaven help this city.

Kay Manderville, a second-term trustee on the Hastings County Board of Education, has decided to switch her sights to Belleville city council. She said she sees the environment as the municipal problem requiring top priority. Two studies, one on waste management and one on water treatment facilities, will form the basis for important deci-sions by the new council, she said in a press release.

Another area of concern for her is the need for low income and/or co-op housing facilities. She also mentions revision of the city's official plan, preservation and enhancement of the waterfront and improve-ment of "Old Bellevillian" architecture as needs within "the confines of fiscal responsibility.

She is a lecturer in the faculty of medicine at Queen's University and has been active in many different groups and organizations within the ciorganizations within the ci-ty. Her sons, she notes, were avid hockey and baseball players, while her daughter is a student at the Quinte Dance Centre and is active in musical performances. Her husband, Dr. Gene Mander ville, practices family medicine in Belleville.

DO WE HAVE AN ALTERNATIVE - YES, WE DO

My name is Kenzo Dozono. I am taking up the challenge for the position of Mayor of Belleville. Why? Because I love this city and am willing to work very hard to improve Belleville.

This has been my home since 1969. My wife, Kiwako, and I are raising our young son and daughter here. I am a Quality Control Manager at Beclawat (Canada) Inc. Belleville, and former member of the Economic and Business Development Committee of the City of Belleville.

My concern is that we are losing the unique character of our beautiful city through political vandalism, vandalism which, if left unchecked, will destroy our present environment.

Together, I propose we fight the ignorance of political abuse. We cannot afford the waste of our tax dollars going to 'Mickey Mouse' opera-

I do not see conscience, creativity or vitality in most of our Council. I wonder why. Is Council too complacent to keep in touch with you and me, and too busy caring for their own private interests? The blatant errors of the past three years cannot be erased, but future mistakes on this scale need not happen.

We deserve better services; we demand more respect. We can take the initiative in areas of common concern: employment, safer streets, services for our seniors, environment protection, recycling waste. These are your concerns, and mine.

What we do need are honest councillors who put the public first and work with conscience, determination, care, enthusiasm and love.

To win this election, I need YOUR support. Please ask your family, friends and co-workers to vote for Kenzo Dozono on November 14th. If you will allow me the privilege of placing my poster on your property, please call my home at 962-8551.

Together, we can make Belleville a city to be proud of.

INDOOR CLIMATE SECOND RATE FOR GROWING

I earn my living advising on the care of indoor and outdoor plants. With outdoor plants the task is fairly simple since they are primarily affected by the vicissitudes of nature rather than man. In addi-tion, they are well adapted to local climate condi-

With house plants, the opposite is true. Climate, although second rate, is fairly constant with the plant owner playing the major role in the plant's health and welfare. First, let me explain my references to "second rate" in terms of climare and then we'll talk about care.

Recognize that house plants are outdoor plants that have been selected for their ability to adapt fairly well to home conditions that include low light and low humidity. Unfortunately, a lot of plants are sold that are extremely demanding in terms of climate and should not be attempted by the casual plant lover, e.g. - the gardenia - but that is another

The main problem is that a house plant's roots are confined to a pot so that it cannot spread and search out water and nutrients as it can in its native habitat. House plants are something akin to a pet, totally dependant on their owner for food and

And there is a second problem. As light values fall, house plants respond in exactly the same way as their outdoor counterparts by slowing or even stopping their growth, going into semi-dormancy and begging to be left alone. Conditions that demand watering to be cut back considerably and feeding cut to zero feeding cut to zero.

But, of course, the opposite happens. With the outdoors shut down, plant lovers lavish their care on their house plants, watering and feeding as though it was mid-summer. In other words, house plants receive the most attention when they want it least, especially in terms of watering.

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

In answering questions on radio and in forums for many years, I can say without contradiction that 75 per cent of house plant problems are the result of improper watering with over-watering being the main culprit by far.

It is almost impossible to over-water outdoor plants. What doesn't drain into the sub-soil is quickly evaporated by the sun and the air. But when plants are confined to a pot there is nowhere for excess water to go and plant roots litterally drown for the same reasons we drown, lack of ox-

But there are exceptions. Some plants such as the But there are exceptions, some pane are a azalea and the cyperus require a growing medium that is constantly moist, which brings up another point. Not all house plants watering needs are the same.

Our house plants come from a variety of locales and climates: rain forests, fog forests, mountain slopes, meadows, stoney plains, deserts, swamps and woodlands. In some locales, rain is constant. In others, rain is rare. And still others - seasonal. And that is why it is not possible to set up one watering schedule for all of our plants

There is one answer to all these problems - know each house plant as an individual. Never buy a house plant because you like its looks. Buy it because it will like you and the home conditions you have to offer in terms of both light and watering

Here is a quick course in winter watering. Cactus and succulents (plants with fleshy leaves and stems) should be allowed to go bone dry, then watered down to the point where the growing medium should feel faintly cool to the finger. The same applies to flowering plants with watering stepped up slightly if they are flowering. But if a plant shows no sign of growth, back off and under-water rather then over-water. All of which can be summed up in one phrase. When in doubt - don't

Proud city re-opens city hall

By David Botting

When Belleville's city hall was completed in 1873, there was no official opening ceremony, but the city made up for that Sunday with an official outdoor ceremony attended by several hundred dignitaries and prominent local citizens to re-open the hall after major renovations to the building.

"We are here today to celebrate our past, to renew our links to our proud history and to renew our commitment to the city and this area," Mayor George Zegouras told the crowd on the bright but cold afternoon.

The building itself was the guest of honour, and speakers paid tribute not only to the building, but to the sense of vision that it symbolized in 1873 and in

"If he (builder John Forin) were looking on, it would be with pride that his 19th Century city hall will be going on into the 21st Century as he envi-sioned it," the mayor said.

He compared Forin's vision that inspired the tall clock tower with the vision of Bill White, president of Bel-Con Engineering and the man most responsible for the shape the renovation took.

Local Historian Gerry Boyce, author of a book the Boyce, author of a book the city is publishing in December to com-memorate the city hall renovation, agreed that the building shows the "degree of optimism members of council and citizens had in their community not only in 1872 and 1873, but also in 1987 and 1988.

Johan had informed police of Uncle Louis' fraudulent ways.
Johan, a clerk by profession, did not earn a great deal of money. He was merely dipping into the loot given to him by his uncle. When Louis found out that Johan was spending more than he was earning, he was fit to be tied. Louis bided his time, which was all he could do in prison.
Upon his release, Louis looked up his nephew. On July 12, 1930, the two men drove off in Johan's car. That was the last anyone saw of Johan Louis, however was seen by a Mrs. C.J. Hoftman who lived on a first man are that of Louis' father the woke Mrs. Hoftman up in the middle of the night to borrow a flashight. She told him she didn't have such an item in the house. the house. Louis walked away from her door into the darkness. Then he too disappeared.

Johan was reported missing. Police traced his last known movements. He had been seen driving away with Louis toward the senior Van Wyk's farm. Being well aware of Louis' background, investigating detectives found themselves on the farm looking at a fresh indentation in the earth. Two and a half feet down police uncovered Johan's fully-clothed body. They found a wound in Johan's back made by a not too sharp instrument which had gone through his coast, his braces and into his back to a depth of one inch. Johan's skull was fractured as well.

When police learned of Louis' financial involvement with his nephew and his presence in the area on the night of the murder, he immediately became a prime suspect.

Detectives theorized that Louis and Johan had been digging for money buried by Johan. Louis had struck Johan on the back of the head, killing him instantly Johan fell down into the hole they had been digging. Before covering his victim with earth. Louis wanted to make sure his victim was dead. He struck Johan in the back with a pick, penetrating coat, braces and body. The wound to the back had not caused death.

Johan's car was missing. There were no signs of a struggle near the area where the body was found. A short distance away, police were able to make plaster casts of footprints which were later matched to Louis' boots. The prints were near a small pond, from which police recovered a shovel and pick.

Newspapers featured photos of the wanted man. Louis spotted his own picture in the Johannesburg Star and turned himself in. On Oct. 21, 1930, Louis Van Wyk stood trial for the murder of his nephew, Johan Moller.

stood trial for the murder of his nephew, Johan Moller. Our Louis came up with a terrific yarn. He told the court he and Johan had driven to the farm to dig up money which had been buried there previously. Louis was in the hole digging with the pick. Johan was at the edge of the hole. The women were back to back. Louis swung the pick over his head, intending to bring it forward into the earth. Instead, the pick struck Johan's back. Johan lost his balance, swung around and started to fall face down into the hole. Louis realized what had happened immediately. He dropped the pick. Johan fell down and struck his head plumb on that pick. I was this impact which had killed him.

Doctors produced photographs showing that the wounds and the position of the body were consistent with Louis story. It could have happened exactly as he described. Louis had figured that with his record no one would believe his accident story. He had fled, but had car trouble a short distance from the scene of the crime. That's when he woke up Mrs. Hoffman asking for the loan of a flashlight.

Louis was acquitted and walked out of court a free man, professing his faith in his fellow man and in the Almighty.

Six months later, Louis made the acquaintance of Almighty.

Six months later, Louis made the acquaintance of Cyril Tucker, an Englishman who owned a farm called Appeldoorn. Tucker wanted to sell the farm and return to England. His wife had returned home some months earlier, leaving Tucker alone until he could sell out and join her.

Louis posed as a prospective buyer. He was introduced to Robert Stewart, who grazed some of his stock on Tucker's farm. Louis went into serious negotiations with Tucker for the purchase of Appeldoorn. A deal was struck. The two men agreed to attend to the legal documents on Feb. 4 in Pretoria.

On the evening of Feb. 3. Tucker retired for the night.

On the evening of Feb. 3, Tucker retired for the night. Louis, who was a permanent houseguest at Appeldoorn, struck the sleeping Tucker on the head repeatedly with a hammer until his skull was battered to a pulp. Louis buried the body in a ploughed field and threw the murder weapon into a utility shed with other tools.

Next morning, one of the servants came into the main house with coffee. Louis told him that Tucker was in Pretoria. Louis Van Wyk congratulated himself. He would get away with murder for the second time.

On Feb. 7 he went to Pretoria and let it be known he and met Tucker. He had purchased the farm lock, stock and barrel. The deal had been for cash. Robert Stewart, the man whose stock was grazing at Appeldoorn, inquired whether Tucker had mentioned paying him. Not one word, said Louis.

nim. Not one word, said Louis.

Maybe he was planning on compensating Stewart out of the money Louis had paid for the farm. Not to worry. Louis was going to meet Tucker in Pretoria on Feb. 13, at which time he would mention Stewart's one at which time he would mention Stewart's concern.

A which is touis commenced to sell off stock, which aroused some suspicion. But it wasn't these transactions which caused concern. Previous to the farm scam, Louis had passed a few counterfeit coins. A warrant was issued for his arrest. Louis realized that if anyone looked into his phony purchase of the farm, his murderous ways would be exposed and the jig would be up.

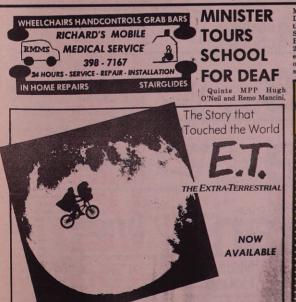

Resourceful Louis came up with one of his patented stories. He told a magistrate that Tucker had made an improper advance to him while he was a guest at Appeldoorn. He repulsed Tucker, who became furious and attempted to shoot him with a rifle. In order to save his own skin, Louis struck Tucker over the head with a piece of pipe. Tucker fell to the floor. Louis went outside and threw the piece of pipe away. He returned, not knowing if Tucker was dead or alive. For the second time. Louis struck they in a ploughed field.

For the second time. Louis struck treat for the second time.

For the second time, Louis stood trial for murder. This time he wasn't as fortunate. He was convicted of premeditated and willful murder. While awaiting the death sentence to be carried out, Louis confessed to the murder of Johan Moller. He had hounded Johan for the money he had given him before he went to prison. Finally, Johan had no more excuses. He took Louis to where he claimed the money was buried. When Louis realized that there was no money, that Johan had spent it all, he decided to kill him. There had been no improper advance by Tucker.

At 7 a.m. on June 12, 1931, Louis van Wyk was executed on the gallows. Yes, Virginia, you can get away with murder. Well, once, anyway.

NEWS SPORTS

The Peterborough Roadrunners were pro-bably celebrating well into Sunday after their win on Saturday against the Belleville Bobcats in the Memorial Arena.

Not that this game was more important than others, but the club hadn't won a game in almost two years until this 5-3 victory. Belleville's defense never seemed to get off the ground, outshooting their opponents but unable to stop inbound pucks.

The loss is the fourth in a ow for the Cats, leaving them with a record of 3-7-1.

The Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society "is in the business of seeking protection of/and con serving (for human needs) lands and waters having unique wilderness, ecological, scientific, recreational or scenic value.

Holding a PhD in biology, Mosquin advocates the need to address the eco-system: to put the water before the Bill Hagborg, MNR, Tweed district, spoke of integrated resource manage nement, a role performed by both MNR and the logging industry. Hagborg stress-ed the interaction between MNR and the loggers in planning and overseeing the conservation of a renewable resource. timber plan, covering 47 areas of Ontario, is updated every five years and encourages public scrutiny.

Jack O'Dette, secretary-treasurer of OFAH, zone four, admitted loggers in the past have exploited rather than conserved. But, the Carleton Place District, for example, completed a new forest plan and found the reserve zone around hunting camps hould be 100 metres compared to the present 30. The increased area pleases "sportsmen", O'Dette said, but more importantly it allows the eco system to sustain plant and wildlife.

O'Dette's biggest concern was the loss of good hunting ground, in an area that has an abundance of wildlife, to CPAWS.

"If you've got to give up hunting why give up hun-ting in the prime areas," O'Dette said.

ed the gauges in such a way that they can be read at a glance, just like in-strumentation of the past.

After years of providing ho-hum seats, the designers of the Cutlass have come up with a set of seats that are making the Europeans take notice.

These multi-form ad-justable seats are the height of comfort. After many hours of driving, I got out of the car with the feeling that I could have driven a few more hours with no problem.

The standard and only engine used in the 10-car line is the 2.8 liter V6.

For the best braking ossible, Oldsmobile uses a four-wheel disc brake setup in the Cutlass. It works well. I found no hint of fade during the testing.

The advanced design of the Cutlass suspension system has resulted in one of the best-handling cars of this or any size on the market. The firmer ride of the International Series Cutlass makes all those twisty roads and highway cruises a pleasure.

BY GEORGE

MISSING-(1982) 122 minutes

Editor: Costa-Gayras

Starring: Jack Lemmon (Ed Horman), Sissy Spacek (Beth Horman), John Shea (Charlie Horman), Melanie Mayron (Terry), Charles Cioffi (Captain Tower)

This film is based on actual events that first came to light in the book of the same name, written by Thomas Hauser. It takes place in Chile shortly after a military coup.

The streets of Santiago are littered with bodies and hundreds of people are being arrested or shot for no apparent reason. Charlie Horman (Shea), an expatriate American and a compulsive "noteexparrate American and a companie hower taker", has been working for a left-wing publica-tion. Without warning, he disappears. His wife Beth (Spacek) tries to get help from the U.S. Em-bassy, but gets nowhere. Charlie's father (Lemmon) arrives from New York to take charge. He obviously has political clout, because the ambassador himself becomes heavily involved

There is no love lost between the senior Horman and his daughter-in-law. He feels that his son is a wishy-washy radical who is frittering away his life and that she is encouraging him. She finds him pompous and irritating. As they try to break through layers of bureaucratic lies and evasions they begin to understand and respect each other.

At times this movie is difficult to follow because At times this movie is diminuit to flond because of the confusing use of flashbacks and fast scene shifts. Nevertheless, it is gripping from the opening scene and it never lets up. Its director's most notable other movies are Z and State of Siege. He, along with writer Donald Stewart, won an Academy Award for their screenplay.

The acting is exceptional, particularly by Jack Lemmon, who underplays his role as a dogged, willful man who is being frustrated at every turn. Although it was made in 1982, it is very relevant today. The description of police violence, following the recent vote in chile to end the military government, sound exactly like many scenes in Missing.

Anyone who has not yet seen this movie would be well advised to put it on their must-see list. Its subject matter and complexity make it unsuitable for children.

SENIOR WON'T ABANDON PET

By David Botting

Joe Lavin will have to decide soon whether or not to dump an old friend.

The 72-year-old senior has to decide whether to get rid of his cat Sandy, who has been his only companion for the last eight years, because he can't take Sandy with him into seniors housing.

Mr. Lavin lives in a mobile home at Kenron Estates where he moved eight years ago after retiring from 32 years as manager of the Royal Hotel in Kingston. Single, he has no family left except for a few nieces and nephews who live out of town.

"I'm by myself, and she's good company for me," he says.

But he will have to give her up if he wants to move into a seniors unit owned and maintained by the Hastings Prince Edward Housing Authority.

Housing Authority.

Mr. Lavin decided this summer that he would have to move into an apartment, partly on his doctor's advice, because it's getting to be too much for him to cut the grass and clear the snow. Furthermore, he said his mobile home is one of five that will be moved in a few years to make way for a new building

Mr. Lavin acquired Sandy almost by accident. He had never had a pet before, but took Sandy for a week when a niece in Toronto went away for a holiday to the Maritimes.

"I ended up keeping her," he said.

At first, he wasn't sure if he wanted to keep her. In fact, he set off for the Humane Society initially, but when he stopped for gas, the gas attendant told him the society would put her to sleep if they couldn't find a home for her. That settled it. He turned around and headed home.

"Now she's a good friend," he said.

After eight years of companionship, he has no intention of abandoning her now.

"I wouldn't leave here if I had to give her up," he said. "I'll just have to stay here as long as I can."

According to Kaye Kokesh, authority manager, the organization maintains a 'no pet' rule in its 907 seniors units in two counties. She says the leases state that the tenant must have permission of the landlord to keep a pet. The housing authority doesn't grant that permission because she calls it a very difficult situation to

To be fair, the authority has to either ban all pets or allow everyone to have a pet, she said. Then, people with allergies to pets could have problems.

"In fairness to the people who cannot or do not wish to tolerate animals because of allergies or the fact that there are odours and noise to contend with, we adhere to the 'no pet' policy as per Ontario Housing Corporation rules," Mrs. Kokesh told Mr. Lavin in a letter this summer.

Mrs. Kokesh says other people have asked about bringing their pets with them when moving into seniors housing, but that Mr. Lavin is the only one who has decided to make an issue out of it.

"He's the first yeat who has been really adamant," she said.

And 'adamant' is a good word to describe his mood. He has written MPP Hugh O'Neil for his help, since the housing authority is a provincial agency.

"I do not want to give up my cat," he wrote. "I'm sure that you can appreciate the anguish this problem has caused me."

the past year, the construction of Belleville's city hall in 1873 also ran into controversy.

But Belleville citizens ended up proud of their city hall after construction was done, and today's council is hoping their modern counterparts will be similarly proud of the renovations done over 100 years later.

Designed by architect John Evans, the hall was constructed by veteran con-tractor John Forin. According to local historian Gerry Boyce, the young ar-chitect and older contractor didn't get along.

dispute also broke out over the height of the clock tower. It appears, Mr. Boyce says, that Forin wanted a taller tower than the one designed by the architect. Costs increased, controversy erupted over it, council debated and work even stopped for a while. In the end, the clock tower was built taller and is now considered to built taller and is now considered to rival even Parliament's Peace Tower. According to Mr. Boyce, one of the reasons for building the tower higher was to aid fire prevention — the tower's bell could be heard farther. Later, the bell was also used to summon police. Clocks were also added to the design to be visible to people on the east and west hills in an age when watches weren't compan.

Mr. Boyce calls the design ambitious for a town of Belleville's size in the 1870s, but it reflected the boom times the town was experiencing and the pride of the city's leaders.

"It was a tremendous period of growth and optimism," he says.

However, the final stages of the city hall were never built. Two more stages were planned, both extensions at the back towards Pinnacle Street that were intended to house the egg and butter market and the meat market.

ity hall book started small city hall commemorative book started small but kept on growing to become a 96 page volume at last reckoning.

The book started as a commemorative pamphlet of perhaps 32 pages when local publisher Nick Mika suggested it to city council. Local historian Gerald

Boyce was commissioned to write the text and Kingston architectural photographer Roger Pensom to take pictures of the newly renovated hall to go with historical pictures culled from personal collections and historical ar-chives. The pamphlet grew 48 pages, then 64 and is now at 96 pages and still then 64 and is now at 96 pages and still only at the page proof stage.

The book, called Belleville City Hall 1873 - 1989, actually arose out of the Belleville centenary celebrations in 1978. The Hastings County Historical Society compiled a list of 100 projects that someone should attempt. One of them was a book about city hall. Two years later, Mr. Boyce decided he wanted to be the "someone" to attempt that project and asked city council's endorsement and permission to go through the city's minute books.

Over the course of his research, Mr. Boyce went through the minute books from 1837 on, delved into archives in Ottawa and Toronto and interviewed around 50 people associated with the hall, including a great grandson of the contractor who built it.

contractor who built it.

He found, among other things, that the city hall built in 1873 was badly needed. City council had met at five other locations, one of which still exists above Norma's Restaurant downtown.
He notes that the latter location had a chimney that backed up, occasionally driving councillors from the room. He also found that not much has changed since 1873. Town council —

Belleville didn't officially become a city until five years after building its city hall - dragged its feet on deciding to build a new hall, then got embroiled in controversy over the escalating cost.

And in a side issue, members of the streets committee were accused of con-flict of interest for hiring family members

An educator, Mr. Boyce teaches local history at Belleville Collegiate Institute and is author of several books of local history. He is also one of the founding members of the Hastings County Historical Society in 1957, just weeks after he arrived in Belleville to start his teaching career.

He believes the value of local history is to reveal where we came from and to call attention to local achievements.

We think of Sir John A. Macdonald We tunk of Sir John A. Macdonald in Kingston, for example, but we overlook Mackenzie Bowell," he said. He acknowledged that Bowell doesn't have the historical significance of Canada's first prime minister, but added: "he survived in office longer than Joe Clark or John Turner."

He also finds local history exciting, rie also finds local history exciting, especially when his research reveals new facts. For example, he and most others had always thought John Forin was architect of city hall. But he wasn't. John chitect of city hall. But he wasn't. John Evans, a young man who moved away from the city a few years later, was the actual architect. John Forin, who designed other buildings in the city, was actually the contractor — and he didn't get along with the architect and had disputes with city hall over payment of his bills.

would be incomplete without the story of the city's farm

In fact, when the new city hall was uilt in 1873, it was not even a city hall Belleville was still incorporated as a town. And even though the town council was going to meet in the upstairs com-munity hall, the building was known as the market building.

Belleville's farmer's market has a long and illustrious history and at one time was known as one of the province's biggest and best markets. First opening in 1816, the market will celebrate its 175th birthday in 1991.

Over the last 25 years, however, the market has come under increasing pressure to move. Over the years, the city gradually moved indoor vendors outle to the market square as its administrative requirements grew.

The market has, however, successfully fought recent attempts to move it to the fairgrounds and to the city's sports the targrounds and to the city's sports complex. Then, two years ago, market came under pressure again when the ci-ty decided to renovate the city hall. Original plans included an annex at the back of the building into the market square, that would have forced the market to move.

The market association, founded seven years ago as a voice for market vendors, girded up again for battle. More than 1200 names were collected in hen Bill White talks about Bel-Con Engineering's work on Belleville's city hall, his eyes light up with enthusiasm.

A vision for cit

After almost two years of proposals, plans, tearing down and re-building, Bel-Con was able to restore city hall to a scale many people say is comporable to the original structure when it was built the original structure when it was built by John Forin over 100 years ago. "It was like finding King Tut's tomb," he said when describing his first tour of the structure. And what he tour or the structure. And what he found was in essence buried.

In the roof was a large amount of space which was being wasted. Where other people might only seen this as empty roof space, Bill White was able to see further ahead.

He almost spent too much time look-ing ahead as a shopping trip that was to take place after a brief survey ended up being delayed three hours.

And with these visions, he accomplished getting needed office space without having to put an addition onto the historic structure

By re-organizing the trusses, Bill White and Bel-Con created what would amount to 11,000 square feet even though only a gross of 10,000 square feet were requested — by changing a two story structure into a four story with an additional room at a fifth level.

What he felt he had done was take a building which had lasted 100 years and extended its life as a useful municipal of-fice for another 100 years. "It was an absolute high," said Mr.

But getting the idea and developing it was only one stage. Belleville's city council still had to accept the proposal. He described the wait for the final go ahead from council as being like "a lava flow." "Council didn't do anything for a few months, it could have gone any way," he said.

But it was accepted and, of course, the project was completed. But Mr. White would be the last person to downplay council's role in the project.

"We really have put far more work in-to this project than any other." "It's the most complicated renovation project I know of anywhere."

Now that the project's completed, he has only one thing in particular on his mind: "everybody needs a rest," he

Modern restorations keep downtown history alive

Belleville's city hall isn't the only structure in the downtown core many people felt was long overdue for restoration.

In fact, one ambitious product has been lying in the shadow of city hall's restoration by Bel-Con Engineering.

The property is the Bogart-Carmen Block, known as the Cablevue building because of its most recent tenant, and was built by the same person responsi-ble for Belleville's city hall — John

Like city hall, time has taken its toll on the building, but in this case, the structure seemed to be destined for the wrecking ball

It was purchased by the municipal government on Aug. 19, 1985, originally for the use as parkland. But then city hall began to realize that they would have to expand to relieve their cramped

City council began to look across the street at their newly purchased land as a solution to their problems. Could Cablevue be restored and used as office

A preliminary report by McEwen and Associates couldn't see anything that couldn't be solved economically but a subsequent report in the summer of 1986 said otherwise.

Once again, the historic landmark seemed to be doomed to the wrecking ball.

Heritage groups in the city of Belleville and Bill Keast, a local school teacher, presented petitions and gave deputations at numerous council meetings until city council considered private development for the project.

Belleville realtor Ed McKinney came forward with a proposal to rebuild the structure in two sections, each flanking a park. Although this $1 million project was initially accepted for a purchase price of $152,000, it would be short lived praisal of $400,000.

On Nov. 10, 1987, council called for demolition proposals with only Alder-man Soden and Smith opposing. With the historical community at its heels, however, council approved a series of terms for the sale of the building to a private investor

Then Teddington Ltd., a Toronto based developer, offered to purchase the site and build a structure that not only retained the old building's unique facade but added new elements with a historic look to them

This May, their offer was approved with a $500,000 bid.

Since then, Teddington Ltd. has also purchased property on Coleman St., formerly belonging to Emhart, with the historic Bella-Flint house. Plans for this property include an entire lex around the city landmark.

Clearly with a combination of private developers and city council's work on ci-ty hall, Belleville's downtown is not only retaining its heritage buildings but im proving on it.

He has owned four stores in both downtown areas and malls and he feels this store is the best by far.
"Belleville truly is the friendly city."

he says.

John Bailey is another newcomer to the downtown business scene with the Off Shore Club next to Dinkel's. A Belleville native, he worked in retailing for five years, then as a sales representative for Reebok Shoes and Descent Ski Wear.

When he decided to go into his own business, he chose the downtown because it has character. His store also has character, thanks to an imaginative renovation to his own design that has opened up the ceiling to the second floor and laid bare the old wooden beams.

His goal is to keep people shopping in Belleville rather than going out of town for their clothing.

Terry Barratt, on the other hand, is one of the "oldtimers" in the downtown. The owner of Barratt's Stationary, says his store is about 25 years old and has been located at five different places in the downtown.

He is a longtime promoter of the downtown and has been active in the downtown business association for years. He feels he has seen a lot of progress over the years.

"We've come a long way downtown," he says. "We've accomplished a lot. We have a downtown that is second to none."

Stuart Spoelstra of Stuart's Place is delighted to welcome Belleville's city hall back to the downtown.

Since city hall staff has returned, he has seen a significant increase in business at his downtown coffee shop across the street from city hall.

His store is located where the old Ed Thomas Tobacco and Variety Store once was, and he collects old pictures of the store and downtown area that he displays for his customers. He also collects stories about the store.

One of the pictures he displays is of a group of men with stopwatches and pit bulls that he is told was taken upstairs. He also discovered when renovating the place that it had been a bookie shop for horse races at one time.

horse races at one time.
"I ripped more phone lines from the store," he said. "Phone lines were everwhere."

He has been told by oldtimers that the store also was a centre for gambling at one time. Workers from a steel plant located south of Dundas would come in to cash their cheques — and then go upstairs to gamble. Prominent citizens would also gamble there, he has been told, which explains why the police were reluctant to raid it. They would call ahead to give a five minute warning. Stuart says he has been told that in the end squads had to be brought in secretly from Toronto to do the raids.

He believes an experienced mayor is critical for the city over the next few years with the update of the official plan and handling newly purchased in-dustrial land. The mayor during the next term must be able "to communicate with different government offices," he said.

As for the record of the city he notes "the building permits speak for themselves ... Belleville has become the jewel of Eastern Ontario

As to doubts created by a series of Globe and Mail articles discussing his investments in the city, he says "my record speaks for itself ... I've been an upright and honest individu

Priorities if he's elected include the updating of the official plan, implementing a study on the waterfront, dealing with environmental problems and building a "first-class soccer pitch."

Last to announce his intentions was 'Ontario Slim' Robertson, announcing that he planned to make a transition from "country music to city mayor."

Mr. Robertson came to Belleville in 1975 because of its proximity between Toronto and Montreal and Ottawa.

Toronto and Montreal and Uttawa.

"Belleville is ideally located between our capitals — both provincial and federal — thus making our city the industrial location with the most potential in Ontario," he said. "I intend to sell our city to all types of industry."

But it's the issues of daycare and social services that he's most vocal about.

"There is a definite need for day care," he said using a two-child family as an illustration. Leaving their job to go on welfare and mother's allowance is the only answer when both parents are working at low wages and can't afford the day care, he said.

Being active for 20 years with different organizations dealing with drug rehabilitation, he's also quick to point out a need for treatment centres and particularly a detoxification centre.

Running for office, he's encouraging voters to write to him at 179 Palmer Road Apt. 210, Belleville, Ont., K8P 4S8 with any suggestions and ideas for the city.

He's quick to point out that he's "not a politician" and fells this is a positive aspect to his campaign.

Until Nov. 14, however, all three will be playing the political game. Who wins it will be up to the voters.

BEL-CON ENGINEERING REALIZING POTENTIAL

Until renovations began over a year ago, Belleville's population watched the years take their toll on city hall.

Acid rain and previous methods of renovation began to eat away the structure's exterior and extra beams, while suspended ceilings and cheap panelling all but masked the once magnificent interior.

Windows had been added and deleted from the structure over the years and a fire escape had been attached to the building's east wall as an afterthought.

City hall staff found themselves cramped in their small quarters and barely had enough room to work.

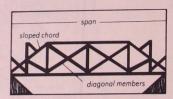

But through all this, Bel-Con Engineering realized the potential in the 100-year-old structure. On April 2, 1986, Bel-Con Engineering's vision of city hall's potential was accepted by city council.

But what was their vision and how did they arrive at it?

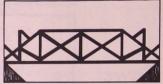

Bel-Con wanted to take every factor into account using a "municipal equation." Only studying cost, quality, appropriateness, historical qualities and a time frame would they realize the best solution.

They also realized that the best solution for city hall had to include the same faith in Belleville's future that the city fathers had when they first designed it.

Simply viewing the clock tower showed Bel-Con the faith city fathers had in a future Belleville. Only with a positive outlook to the future would such a magnificent structure be built.

Truss with labelled terms

Truss as it was found

Truss as it was reconstructed

"This tower has been described as one of the finest examples of Tower structures in Canada, perhaps only second to the Peace Tower in Ottawa," said Bill White, president of Bel-Con Engineering. And with building heights restricted in the area, city hall's tower will always remain a focal point for the city.

But how to get the needed office space to make city hall practical as well as a landmark was another question all together.

Touring city hall before making his proposal, Mr. White noticed the massive attic and ceiling areas were not being used. He saw potential for these areas as "a first class area for human occupancy."

The ceiling space he found revealed what was once a theatre that measured 73 feet by 32 feet — almost 2300 square feet! With a ceiling height of 20 feet, this area had a rich potential for development.

The question now was how to re-organize the area to fulfill space requirements for city hall staff.

The answer involved re-organizing the roof trusses. In all, six trusses spanning a building width of 73'-6' were found taking up what could be useful office space.

By supporting the truss at the third points of the span, the diagonal members of the truss could be removed completely and re-organized so useable floor space can be created the full length and width of the structure.

New large beams could now be supported by four interior columns extending to the basement and another set of beams could be installed in the middle to support a second extra floor.

Existing trusses would be re-organized so the sloped chord at the ends of the truss could be moved to the underside of the roof to serve as a roof beam. The sloped truss immediately inside the mansard roof would be combined with an extra vertical member and braced to become a "portal frame."

The "portal frame" would provide the horizontal support needed for wind against the mansard roof. Although some trusses would remain in the open to keep a sense of history in the building, the portal frames would be buried in the walls.

With these structural changes the rest began to fall in place.

City hall was gutted and the new truss system installed. Walls and ceilings were put up, floors put down and windows replaced.

After 1 1/2 years of construction, Bel-Con is now able to stand back and look at what they've created — a city hall which will probably dominate Belleville's downtown for another hundred years.

The potential was already there but it was Bel-Con who realized it — and did it.

Ministry rejects inquiry after 5-month council review

By John G. Smith

A five-month review into the way Belleville city council conducts its business has found no "evidence of maladministration" and, as a result, a commission of inquiry will not be

The review, undertaken by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, was the result of 71 petitioners pointing out problems they saw with Belleville's city council.

Issues in the review included the appointments of senior positions, how coundealt with certain developers, in-camera meetings and the proposed development of the Quinte '78 site. Many of these items were also discussed in a series of articles by Globe and Mail reporter Andrew McIntosh.

Issues not reviewed were the firing of economic and business development director Fred Bemis, since the matter was before the courts, and conflict of interest which don't fall under the ministry's jurisdiction. 'Review of the council, management and opera-tions systems of the City of Belleville reveals a corporation municipal recently and presently in the throes of very signifi-cant change," said Spencer Hope, the field operations manager responsible for the report.

Areas which the ministry felt could be further assess ed by council and staff have been brought to the city's attention but these areas do not represent mismangement.

Summarizing the findings in the report about the hiring of Chief Administrative Officer Cliff Belch and economic and business development director Dave Parker, Mr. Hope said that the selec tion processes "appeared not to be unreasonable. Referring to land aquisitions and purchases by the city, the report noted that there were no written procedures but appear to be within the ambit of coun-See SWAT Page 9

How many stories and how many words is hard to calculate, but probably in the range of at least half a million or more words.

Scary, isn't it?

They say that writing for a newspaper is just another form of fiction writing, in which case I have written the equivalent of seven to ten medium-length novels since August of 1986.

So here I sit with an empty screen. If I had a pad of paper in front of me, it would be blank.

Well, okay. So it isn't blank. So I've babbled on for another 250 words. And about what? About nothing. About how I have nothing to say. Sounds like verbal diar

TRY THE KID

I've got an idea! I'll write about The Kid! He's always good for a few lines.

Hmmmm. Let's see. What did he do this week? I'm not sure. In fact, I don't recall seeing much of him. It was one of those weeks where you work until past supportime, then dash home for a quick bite to eat, a quick peck on the wife's cheek and out again to cover a meeting. If he did anything interesting this week, I wasn't there to see it.

In fact, I hear that The Kid asked his mother who that man was and she said she wasn't sure. And I hear that she is changing back to her maiden name

Hey, it's not my fault. It's the fault of those politicians Did I ever say I wanted two elections to cover at the same time so that I would never be home and my children would refuse to talk to me because they know better than to talk to strangers? Let the politicians take the blame on

SPEAKING OF POLITICS...

Say, politics is always good for a remark or two. Maybe I could try that.

Let's see. The federal election. Brian Mulroney was in town and hecklers said... No, I can't quote that. Hmmm. No, I won't quote what the prime minister said about a homosexual NDP MP in B.C. It wasn't nice. And then he indinosexual rober Mr in So. It was trible. And that he called John Turner a... No. I won't mention that either. Ummm. In Toronto, Tory John Crosbie called opponents of the free trade deal... And Finance Minister Michael Wilson called them ... No. I'm not going to quote

Let's see. How about the other candidates? John Let's see. How about the other candidates? John Turner called the prime minister a... No. I'm not going to stoop to that kind of mud slinging. And then Liberal cambridge of the call of t paign co-chairman Michael Kirby said... No. No. I'm just not going to get into that.

Aw, forget it. I'm not going to write about politics. It's too dirty for me. I don't feel in the mood for mud today.

NEEDED: IDEAS

See y'all next week. Maybe I'll have some ideas for a column by then.

and says he "grew with the system," retiring as electric distribution superintendent in 1984.

Since retirement, Mr.
Portt has operated a small layout and design service, carrying on work for the Napanee, Deseronto and Trenton public utilities.

In his campaign, he is stressing his practical knowledge and experience in the field.

With his experience, he feels he can save BUC customers money on the extensive work now underway on the city's electrical distribution system.

distribution system.

He said he would be accessible to the public when problems arise. "I am willing at any time to assist you, and I can assure you that I will do my utmost to see that you get a fair deal," he said.

FAIR CHAIRMAN RUNS

Robert Bell, a 43-yearold Ameliasburgh Township resident, has filed his papers to run for councillor this fall.

Although he has never served in an elective capacity before, he has been very active in the community as a volunteer. Since moving to the township in 1975, he has served over 10 years on the local volunteer fire department, five years as chairman of the revived Ameliasburgh fair board, four years on the township's culture and recreation committee and four years as a 4-H leader.

An employee of Rentway Canada Ldt since 1981, Mr. Bell has advanced to operations co-ordinator and is regional driver trainer for all their Ontario operations.

With his business and volunteer experience, he feels that he should be able to contribute "a great deal towards the every day operations of the township." Among the items he sees on the agenda for the next three years are properly controlled waste management, a continued roads improvement program and the preservation of the townships parks and heritage buildings.

How to vote

chosing your councillor, alderman, mayor, utilities commissioner, school board member, deputy reeve or reeve?

First and foremost should be the integrity of the candidate. It's more than just honesty, though that is part of it. Look for a set of values and principles and a solid commitment to them no matter what the personal cost. It's a matter of trust. If, when push comes to pull, you don't trust a candidate, don't vote for him or her.

Second, among those values should be a steady sense of justice and fairness for all. If you think a candidate won't treat everyone with equity and fairness, if you think a candidate doesn't care about the underprivileged in your municipality, then don't vote for him or her no matter what other qualifications they may have.

Third, among those values and principles should be a commitment to openess and a willingness to listen. A politician is a servant. He or she should be sensitive to the needs and desires of the people they serve. And especially in a democracy, he or she must operate openly for all to see. Caesar's wife must not only be good but be seen to be good, as the old saw goes. If a candidate doesn't listen to you, if a candidate isn't open with you, don't vote for him or her.

Fourth, a politician should have a measure of wisdom and understanding. It's a tough job and one in which competing needs and desires must be balanced against each other and choices must be made. Not everyone will be satisfied with those choices, but everyone should be satisfied that the politician has fairly considered the choices and made an informed decision. It's a matter of knowledge balanced by judgement, and if in your judgement, a candidate doesn't have wisdom or understanding, don't vote for him or her.

Fifth and finally, a politician should have a sense of vision. It's not enough to be a pragmatist and go with the flow of votes and opinion. Politicians are aiso leaders. Where should your municipality be headed over the next three years? Over the next decade? If a candidate doesn't know and doesn't care, then don't vote for him or her.

So who should you vote for? If you find an honest candidate, one guided by a solid set of values and principles, one with a sense of fairness and a commitment to justice for the underprivileged, one committed to openess and with an ability to listen, one with a measure of wisdom and understanding, one with a sense of vision of where you and your numicipality should be going — then don't wait. Vote for him or her and tell your friends to vote as well. You have found a pearl beyond price.

The Editor

Recently, the CJBQ sports news ran a story on two local S.K.I. Belleville Karate School members (Betty Courtney and myself) paying their own travelling expenses to go to Japan in November '88 for the third S.K.I. World Karate Championships.

Since this news broadcast, I have received many kind and generous offers to help. As I was mentioned personally on the broad-cast, I felt obligated to respond publicly re my posi-tion on funding athletes.

I believe that too many elite athletes take advantage of their positions, seek government assistance for expenses, and abuse the tax payers' money for their own enjoyment and glory. One such athlete, representing Canada in Seoul, 'took a hike' being distressed about the drug controversy. This was irresponsible; our tax dollars paid his bills. Our money could surely have been better spent on food or housing at home for people genuinely in need. If an athlete is prepared to sacrifice and suffer financial hardship to fullfil a personal dream, he will become stronger for his efforts. I do not believe that tax dollars have a place in the world of sports. Corporate sponsors, by choice, can help, but the athlete should do all he can on his own behalf. The training and discipline necessary to produce a first-rate athlete is not enough if the participant is weak in character and lacks integrity like our Seoul runaway

As a president of S.K.I. Ontario, I did not apply for government assistance for our trip. I am proud of it. We like to do our best, and to struggle. We try to represent true sportsman-

Mayor George Zegouras Belleville City Hall 169 Front Street K8N 2Y8

I would like to know your views on assistance for the special need groups" in the Belleville community.

I am very glad to see that the street curbs are (finally) being ramped (after some pressure from Yvonne Lem and Doug Bagley). Nevertheless, there are some other problems regarding the needs of the physically challenged that need attention in regards to: housing, employment, and recreational facilities. In regards to recreation, we should have more programs for the handicapped at the recreational centres and schools.

I am especially incensed with the people that con-tinue to abuse the handicap-parking areas. I think this is a very serious problem and believe that the malls, plazas and city streets in Belleville should be diligently enforced by the parking authority. The present fine of $10 is a poor deterrent, and a fine of $100 (as in Mississauga, Ontario) should be induced. If the problem continues, you may find the handicapped writing tickets as they do in Ottawa.

If you wish my support and the support of other physically challenged peo-ple in Belleville, then we should be able to rely on your support (also).

My annuals are seeded in April and perennials in June. House plant cuttings are taken from spring June. House plant cuttings are taken from spring until fall and geranium cuttings in August. Desert cacti bloom in spring, jungle cacti (Christmas, Easter) three times a year, African violets year round and the orchids put on their exotic display from January through June. ## ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

Growing under fluorescent lights is one of the easiest and most rewarding of all creative gardeneasiest and most rewarding of all creative gardening activities. Requiring no experience or special skills, it is a basic learning ground for neophyte and experienced gardeners alike with the nurturing of plant material from conception to maturity. And best of all, it's fool-proof.
It's fool-proof partly because the indoor light gardener is completely in control of the elements:
light, temperature, humidity and feeding. But mostly because of the quantity and quality of light provided by the fluorescent fixture. And thanks to the fixture's mobility, the indoor light gardener can set up anywhere there is an electrical outlet and a flat surface: in a living room, an apartment, a win-dowless basement, on shelving, a kitchen counter, board or a closet.

But let me warn you, no matter how modest your first attempts, the bug will bite and you'll add another unit, then another and another. For exam-

Light sponsors photosythesis, the food pro-duction process that has its equivalent in human digestion. With adequate light, growth slows down and halts, leaves drop and the plant goes into a slow decline and often dies. But that doesn't happen with the indoor light gardener, because they provide their plants with the right light diet.

In the indoor light garden, light levels can be as high and constant as you wish, as high as 1400 foot candles (four tubes), as constant as 18 hours a day and as continuous as seven days a week, 365 days a

The term "foot candles" is simply a measurement of the amount of light received by a subject from a given source. In our case, the subject is plant foliage and the source is the fluorescent fixture. At a centre point six inches below a two-tube hooded fixture the foot candle rating is 700. Under four tubes this soars to 1400. In more familiar terms, such as those used in house plant books to describe light conditions, foot candles translate as follows: Low: - up to 300 foot candles. Moderate - 300 to 500. Bright - from 500 to 700. And sunshine - 700 and up. Next week: Getting started.

By John G. Smith

While one candidate gave his speech from a written text, another gave his "off the cuff." While one gave his speech from notes on a package of Number 7 cigarettes, another read his in braille.

The one thing all of them did have in common, however, is that they were at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce's all candidates night last Tuesday to try to convince voters that an "X" should be placed beside their name.

In all, 41 municipal hopefuls came forward to give two minute speeches about why they should be elected to the public utilities commission, either school board or Belleville city council. The three mayoral candidates in the group were given an addi-

The only candidates absent were alderman hopeful John Fryters and separate school board incumbent Jack Sheridan

So what points did the candidates stress in order to sell themselves to the voting public?

Incumbent Mayor George Zegouras stressed how the city has developed over the past three years and the experience he has gained in three terms as I invite citizens to see for themselves what is happening in the city," he said to the voters.

He also pledged to improve the official plan and to "devote my energies unselfishly

Mayoral candidate Kenzo Dozono, a local karate instructor and quality control manager, said that he was running for mayor mayor has failed his responsibility to protect you, the public."

We have a smelly, smokey, controlled govern-ment," he said, criticizing the present council and listing various social problems in the city.

His pledges were based on a better planning pro-cess for the city and called for citizens to "be happy, don't worry.

Country singer Willis "Ontario Slim" Robertson spent his three minutes not describing himself, giving election promises or promising to be a good candidate, but describing the plight of a handicapped man named Martin.

'As of tomorrow, doctors are signing him over in custody because there's no place for him to he said. "Ontario housing can't do anything for him because of the

Mayoral candidates were grilled after their speeches by the audience on questions ranging from store hours to sewage problems in the city.

When 20 alderman candidates squared off in a bid for one of the 10 available chairs, many focused on the same issue - the city's planning process.

Dale Baker, operator of a local coffee shop, said "the absence of an official plan revision allows council to permit constant rezoning which puts a strain (on city services).'

"I'm fed up with seeing the citizens of this city come before council with their valid concerns and being intimidated at every council meeting," he said in a scathing review of council's work over the past three years.

When local restaurateur Richard Barrett stood up a the podium, he told voters of the challenge ahead of them. "Tonight, you will hear about how 21 aldermanic candidates are going to make Belleville a better place to live in ... your job as voters, is to select 10 of us whom you feel will act on your behalf to resolve these issues effectively and efficiently," he said.

"City council needs a new, fresh approach to solving the problems that are before them," he said to the packed hall, asking for them to consider him

Doug Brewer, a Pro-ressive Conservative candidate in the last provincial election, pointed out "the city of Belleville lacks an up-to-date official plan and the strain is starting to show on the planning pro-

He then criticized council for their aquisition of "various widths of land for a riverfront walkway ... an example of piecemeal development.

He then called for utilizing staff more wisely, a waste management plan and bus service to the Foster Ward area of Belleville.

Selma Bochnek, an incumbent alderman, said she was bringing "the same enthusiasm and concern for the city of Belleville to this election as I did when I was first elected to city council ten years ago.

Challenges she saw Belleville being faced with over the next term included the implementation of bayfront, transportation cultural and recreational services.

"Belleville is a choice location — for business, vacations or retirement.' she said.

"I will support improved, more efficient development procedures for in-creased assessment is one way to lessen an increased tax rate.

Incumbent alderman Wally Dever told the crowd that he supported the study of Belleville's waterfront and called the Save the Waterfront All Together group "one of the best examples democracy in action.

We have seen Belleville advance at an un-precedented rate in the last three years," said incum-bent alderman Bill Finkle, stressing there had also been only a small increase in property taxes.

Talking about problems with the sewer systems within the city limits, he noted that he was a member of the delegation that acquired a $1.9 m grant from the Ministry of the Environment against capital costs.

where he has been for 27 years. But he said the public demands greater ac-cess to their elected

The "pay as you go" policy affords Trenton the luxury of having the lowest tax base in the area. According to Mr. Robertson, 1.7 percent of total municipal revenue is used to service debt; the provincial average is 9 percent.

On the job front, he said the $8 million Dundas Street bridge project and the $3 million hydroelectric generating station will appeal to the work force. He estimated the unemployment rate at 6 percent.

The building of the Dun-das bridge, slated to begin in April 1989, will be funded by the provincial government to the tune of $6 million with Trenton picking up the rest of the

TRIPP CHALLENGES FOR MAYOR

By Francis Kavanagh

Paul Tripp has been away from minicipal politics for three years, but his community spirit hasn't waned.

Prior to 1985, Mr. Tripp was an alderman for 17 years, serving as chairman of the industry and economic committee. He is not adverse to large in-dustrial expansion in Tren-

However, as chairman of the Lower Trent Con-servation Authority, Mr. Tripp has a strong commitment to the environment He said any new industry coming into Trenton would have to meet strict provincial regulations, first.

A municipal dump in Sidney Township raised some concerns because the authority found run-off was leaching into area wells. THe dump has since been closed.

Mr. Tripp is an advocate of waste management and recycling. As mayor he would encourage engineers to plan a recycling plant for Trenton. He said land is available and the recovered energy in the form of steam would be used by industry.

Mr. Tripp's roots are firmly planted in Trenton. His grandfather opened a tobacco and barber shop in 1879. That business today is Mark Tripp Ltd., specializing in confec-tionery wholesaling. Mr. Tripp left highschool in 1949 to help his father run the business and has been very active in the wholesaling industry.

He was a founding member of the Confecfounding

Wholesale tionery Distributors of Canada, an organization that informs the public through seminars and school visits of the wholesaling industry

Mr. Tripp was in-strumental in establishing alternatives to main street parking by means of deck parking on side streets. He said it is time for additional parking.

"Either you move ahead," he said, "or fall behind."

SHAD EXPLOSION LEAVES BAY WELL-STOCKED

Reports from various tackle retailers along the Reports from various tacase retailers along the bay last week show the walleye fishing somewhat slow. Kevin winter from his shop in Deseronto related to me that he has been marking huge schools of pickerel near Hay Bay in about 40 feet of water. Noteworthy is that the graph recorder is also showing clouds of gizzard shad that are still inhabiting the bay.

Paul Pickard of Wellington reports some walleve are being caught by shore anglers in the PictonBay area along with salmon upwards of 30 pounds. The salmon are trying to navigate their way up a shallow culvert to spawn.

The same holds true for the Moira River where the chinook are making their annual run. Extremely shallow water has left then susceptible to snaggers who have been charged by the MNR for that wile act. The flesh of the salmon when they spawn has the texture of a wet sponge, and why anyone would want to keep one is beyond me. They are near death and also display that appearance and fighting quali-

Mr. Montgomery related that last year there was an "explosion" of gizzard shad in the Bay, and an "explosion" of gizzard shad in the Bay, and while the walleye angling may be a little more dif-ficult, the population remains "exceptional." The good news is the sport fish in the bay have an excellent forage base, which is necessary for the walleye to remain healthy, without the good forage base, the Bay could become another Rice Lake where pickerel are dimunitive in the two pound range.

HUMAN SACRIFICE TO SATAN

hey were only teenaged kids sowing a little wild oats. That's what some of the residents of affluent Northport, Long Island thought of the youngsters who hung around Cow Harbor Park and along Main St. Others knew better. The kids were dopers. A short trip to New York City guaranteed a steady supply of angel dust, marijuana and mescaline — you name it; the kids around town were well supplied.

The inevitable happened. Grades at chool suffered. Some of the kids dropped school surfered. Some of the Rius Groppes out. They took part-time jobs to earn enough money for their next high. # 4 MEN WANT TO BE MAYOR OF PICTON INDUSTRY HOTTEST ELECTION ISSUE

"For the first time in a long time, Picton is going to have an election," says Bernie Taylor, a mayoral candidate in Picton.

He may be right. Certainly, with four mayoral candidates, Picton has the most interesting municipal election race in Quinte. And the candidates include some very experienced municipal politicians as well as a newcomer who isn't afraid to make waves.

The candidates are incumbent councillor and former reeve Ross Cronkwright, incumbent mayor Charles Hepburn, former reeve Al Piroth and newcomer Bernie Taylor. Their views follow.

ROSS CRONKWRIGHT

Ross Cronkwright has served in every elective council office except mayor. Winning his first election in 1971, he has served as councillor, deputy reeve and reeve. For the last three years, he has served again as councillor

He says the key issue in the campaign is leadership, and he makes no bones about the fact that he is unhappy with the town's incumbent mayor. The town needs a mayor "that is available to make decisions when they need to be made" - and one who isn't indecisive, who doesn't change his mind after having made his mind up, he

He also stresses the need for communication with the rest of council, talking about filling the town's in dustrial park "with council's knowledge and back-

As an example, he cites Wingrill, a local industry employing 40 people that is leaving town for Brighton The announcement has sparked intense debate in the town over what hap-pened and why the company decided to leave.

According to Mr. Cronkwright, the company was promised land at a given price by two members of council before the town had bought the land or set a price tag on it.

"I first hear about it on Main Street," he said and he is a member of the town's planning commit-

The town purchased the land, but when the rezon-ing dragged on and the price was almost double what the company was told privately, Wingrill backed off and decided to move to serviced industrial land in

He is pleased, though, that the town finally has the job begun on the town's industrial park. The town purchased 30 acres has an option on another 60 acres in land annexed in 1986 from Hallowell Township Township. Rezoning and planning is now in place and services are being installed, which means the town "now can develop in an orderly way, ed as well — a traffic signal at the corner of Main, Talbot and Lake Streets.

After years of fruitless negotiation, the town has finally decided to expropriate the land required to straighten the corner. A price will be negotiated period and the town could with Wingrill leaving town leaves him even more

"What are you doing?" he demanded of council in the interview. "Are you sit-ting on your hands? The blame lays squarely on council.

Industry is important because it provides jobs,

Bernie Taylor is the only race, but he has acquired a high profile since moving to Picton five years ago. Owner of Gallery Soho in Toronto for 22 years, he decided to leave the big city rat race and run Strawberry Fields, a bed and breakfast establishment in Picton.

As with the other candidates, he sees industry as a key issue. "Do you realize how many young people leave Picton every year?" he asked. "We have to have something here to keep those young people.'

Unlike the others, however, he suggests strengthening the town's tourism industry. "It's already here," he said. 'Why not capitalize on what you've got?

of events to put Picton on the map and to just plain offer something fun to do. That, he suggests, is what Picton needs to promote

There are so many things there for the tourist dollar - we have to grab it," he said.

He offers a whole list of ideas for events to promote tourism as well as incidents where he feels the town has failed to act.

The town has to expand its short summer season into a longer tourist season, he said, perhaps through some kind of fall or spring festivals. He suggests that his annual asparagus fete could become such an event. As far as he knows, the festival is unique in Ontario, and it plays to one of the county's strengths -

He says the town has to keep its charm through a stronger historical board Main to help preserve Street. "Buildings Street. "Buildings have shouldn't have been," he said.

He urges the renovation of the Crystal Palace at the fairgrounds back to its former glory. It could serve as home to a farmers market and/or art gallery. he said

The town also has to do more to spruce up its Main Street, he said, citing problems such as the drinking fountain in front of the Post Office, which wasn't functioning last summer.

"These are all details that add up to a town that has life or doesn't," he an industrial park after years of discussion and planning. After years of falling behind or standing still, the town is finally on the verge of growth, he said. A large nursing home complex is planned for the industrial park and at least three more industries are Mr. Cronkwright says that a county-wide garbage recycling program is also a top priority. Garbage col-lection is costly to the town, jumping almost $40,000 this year to around

He also responded forcefully to a rumour that is circulating in the town that another move will be made after the election to change the fire department back to an all-volunteer

As a member of the fire committee for 11 years, chairman of it for nine years and a volunteer firefighter for six years, "I can say with some authority that I believe the present system we have nov the best we could have," he

CHARLES HEPBURN

Incumbent mayor Charles Hepburn has 14 years experience in public office. First elected to office in 1974, he has also served as the town's reeve was warden of the county in 1980.

He said he is running for re-election primarily because he wants to finish

He uses words like "orderly" and "prudent" to describe the town's progress, citing the setting aside of reserve funds for purchasing the industrial park property and in-stallation of services. That's how the town has been able to keep its por-tion of local taxes below the rate of inflation, he

And the new industrial park is starting to attract industry to the town, he said. He calls the Wingrill incident unfortunate, but says the zoning didn't fall in place in time and the town couldn't pave the roads and install storm sewers by the company's requested deadline of December of this year. Other industries are com ing to town, though, he said, with a nursing home complex planned and four other offers in hand but not yet made public.

'We don't want to announce them until they've been signed and sealed, he said, "but we do have offers with cheques."

As incumbent, he also points with pride to the reconstruction of Main Street, which is in its final phases after years of work, the dramatic increase in downtown parking thanks to the Market Lane reconstruction and parks and harbour im-provements.

He said that another longstanding problem is on start installing the light as of the end of January, he said. He hopes it will be operable by late spring.

"There's lots happening for a small town," Mr. Hepburn said.

AL PIROTH

Al Piroth, a local realtor and former town reeve, has decided to throw his hat back into the mayoral race this election after losing the last one by just 34 votes in a straight race between himself and Charles Hepburn.

Mr. Piroth first came to Picton in 1937 with the Canadian Armed Forces. He retired to a new career in Picton in 1968 after a distinguished 31-year military career that took him to assignments with the United Nations in the Middle East and NATO.

Industry and better communication with the public are the top issues, he said.

"We seem to be staying put, letting our neighbours

— Belleville, Trenton,
Napanee and now Brighton move ahead," he said.

He has long been a booster of the town, but has been frustrated by town council's response. Two years ago, he persuaded a pharmaceutical manufacturer to come to Picton, but it all fell through when council had which means that the town's young people can stay in town, he said. For that reason, he would like to see a variety of small industries, providing a wide variety of jobs, rather than single large industry such as Goodyear.

"It's maddening to think we were that close and blew it," he said.

Picton can't go it alone. though, he said, citing the issue of waste manage-ment. Waste disposal is a problem for most municipalities in the county, and he suggests Picton get together with them to find a solution. One may be a county-wide recycling program, he said.

Affordable housing is also a problem, and he suggests the town pursue more programs for low rental housing. Housing is a problem, he said, for young people starting families and for the large number of seniors living in and around Picton.

He also suggests free parking in downtown Pic-ton on the peak shopping days to encourage people to shop in the county town.

The other key issue, though, is communication. There seems to be a breakdown in communica: tion," he said, both on council and with the townspeople.

If elected, he plans to set side specified times when the public can come to talk to him about their con-cerns. "You have to be available to the public," he

GM CHANGES MODEL LINES FOR 1989

Announcement

DALE MILLER

Mr. John Davidson, President of Davidson Pontiac Buick Ltd. of Trenton is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Dale R. Miller as Business Manager.

Mr. Miller, a former sales and leasing representative, brings a wide background of experience in the automotive business to the new position.

The Davidson Team wish him every success in his new endeavours

Davidson

38 Elgin Street 392-1245

About this time every ear, the car companies start their new models. Here are some changes that are coming from GM in 1989

BILLICK

Riviera: News is that the car will be going back to a more traditional size with new body metal and a strethc of 11 inches. Options will include a cellular phone for 1989.

Park Avenue: To get even more of the luxury market, Buick has decided to upgrade this model even higher with the Ultra.

Skylark: This model will also be getting some upgrades due to its good sales this year.

Regal: The hometown favourite states basically the same for 1989 but a new offering in the engine department will debut. The car will be offered with a larger V6 later this year. This V6 is the 3.1-litre with 140 horsepower, giving the Regal extra power.

CADILLAC

an increase in engine size for the new year: 4.5 litres from its present 4.1 litre. The 4.5-litre V8 is the standard engine in front-wheeldrive Cadillacs and was new for the 1988 model year. Flared fenders and larger tires are also in store for the Allante in 1989.

☐ Seville: The Seville will be getting a facelift for the new model year, plus a sport model called the STS aimed at people who might be considering European luxury sedans.

OLDSMOBILE

☐ Cutlass Ciera: The Olds will be getting some rear roof and rear window redesign for the 1989 model year. This will consist of a more sloping rear pillar and a rounded rear glass to give the car better profile and better aerodynamics. In the International Series, expect to see a new sport version.

The 3.8-litre V6 will be dropped in favour of a new 3.3-litre V6 for 1989.

☐ Calais: A sport version will grace this line in 1989. It will include a ground effects package with fog

Cutlas Supreme: The big news here is that Olds will get a 3.1-litre V6 to replace the slightly underpowered 2.8-litre V6. Daytime running lights will also be standard for this year.

KENZO DOZONO believes the essential requirement for Belleville is

PROGRESS WITH PRESERVATION

The BFAUTY OF BELLEVILLE is our heritage. We must work together to protect our unique legacy from destruction by poor planning. We must struggle for our own quality of life and for the new generation. Wise planning will give new meaning to progress: better long-range goals that will create good jobs, lower taxes and afford better city services - A BETTER QUALITY OF LIFE FOR ALL.

Present City Council has experience. Is it the kind of experience we want?

I feel that the good of the people has not been foremost in their decisions, that conscience and rational planning has taken a back seat to the short-term gain.

REMATA'S RECOPES

Hi, After a brisk walk in the countryside or (do I mention this?) cross-country skiing, there is something to be said for a good hot bowl of Chile Con Carne. If you expect to feed a crowd, double or triple the recipe.

Chili Con Carne

- 1 lb. medium ground beef 2 tbsp salad oil
- In large saucepan, heat oil and add meat and

- 1 large onion, diced
- 1 green pepper, diced 2 cloves of garlic, finely diced
- Add to meat and cook until tender
- 1 cup of hot water 2 cups stewed tomatoes
- Add to the above
- 1 tbsp chili powder 1/2 tsp. salt pepper
- Add to the above and simmer, covered, for
- 2 cups cooked or canned red kidney beans
- Add to meat, heat up and serve with crusty bread and a tossed salad and enjoy!

PIROTH SQUEAKS IN BY 18 VOTES

History almost repeated itself at Monday's municipal elections in Quinte's closest mayoral race in the county town of Picton. This time it was Al Piroth's turn for victory, though, edging out previous mayor Charles Hepburn by a meagre 18 votes. In 1985, Hepburn snatched mayoral status from Piroth by only 37 votes.

Picton's mayoralty race this year saw four can-didates at the starting blocks, something new, at blocks, something new, at least in Picton's recent history. Town Clerk-Treasurer, Sterling Johnston said, "in all my time in town I've never

ROBERTSON WINS DURTH TERM

By Francis Kavanagh

Incumbent Trenton mayor Neil Robertson burst from the blocks on Nov. 14, hurdling over contender Paul Tripp and capturing his fourth term of office. Robertson led in all 30 polls and tallied 3370 votes to Tripp's 1520.

"I'm riding on the crest of popularity," Robertson said, "I'm elated."

In 1985 Robertson was acclaimed mayor and virtually watched the elections from the side-lines. However, this year Paul Tripp mounted an earnest attack in an attempt to unseat Robertson. Robertson said Tripp

By John G. Smith

Incumbent Mayor George Zegouras pulled away from candidate Kenzo Dozono almost as soon as the first ballots were counted on Monday night.

When five of the 109 polls were accounted for, Zegouras held the lead with 191 votes with Dozono close on his heels with 141 votes. Willis "Ontario Slim" Robertson was down for the count after the first polls were tabulated, leaving him with 53 votes. See DOZONO Page 11

Shifting polls

Can anyone remember such a volatile election as this fall's federal election?

In just a few weeks, the Liberals have been resur-rected from the dead, the NDP has dropped from of-ficial opposition to also ran and the Tory coronation has turned into a horse race.

Polls have shifted dramatically. The Tories held a commanding lead through the first half of the election, then some polls showed the Liberals with a commanding lead, surging from dead last. Now, polls indicate something close to a dead heat between the Tories and Liberals and it's anybody's guess what will happen in this last week of the cam-

We relate the volatility of the voters to the free trade issue. Those opposed to free trade had no where to go when the election appeared to be a Tory coronation. At that time, neither the Liberals nor the NDP appeared able to stop the Tories. We would guess that many of those votes shifted to the Liberals, however, when Turner was picked as the winner of the national leadership debate, turning into a landslide when the Liberals began clearly gaining ground on the Tories. That would explain why the Liberals took such an incredible surge forward while the NDP support plummetted.

Meanwhile, large numbers of voters remain undecided, and where those votes go in the last week will determine the election. Again, we suspect the critical issue will be free trade. Despite the debate of the past few years, most voters say they don't understand free trade. And what we don't understand, we usually fear.

Can the Tories get across their message in one week after failing over several years? If they can't, they probably won't win. David Botten ☐ CHEERS - To students in the BCI local history class, taught by Gerry Boyce, who invited each of the six Prince Edward Hastings federal candidates to visit and discuss their qualifications for office, their party platforms and their views on the issues. That's good training for good citizenship.

☐ JEERS - To the federal leaders of the three major parties for their namecalling over free trade. The level of debate has been comparable to the "liar, liar, pants on fire" chant heard more commonly on kindergarten playgrounds. No wonder the public is confused on free trade. How about a more reasoned discussion of the pros and cons — after all, this issue could have a big impact on Canada's future. A pox on all their houses!

Sheltered workshops called 'sweat shops'

To the Federal Candidates: I represent P.U.S.H. Persons United For Self

Concerning special need groups, I would like you to ook into and know your views on: employment, housing, (for all physically handicapped), education and special aids for the physically challenged.

Concerning employment for all handicapped people and those that work in sheltered workshops, these people should be paid ac-cording to the work they do. It seems to me that all sheltered workshops are in reality just sweat shops, making use of a lot of the mentally handicapped, and if this is the case, they should be closed complete-

In regards to people on pensions, there is at pre-sent a ceiling of $150 a month they can earn above their monthly pension.
This should be doubled to enable to help bring us up and closer to the poverty

I would also like to voice my concern about the free trade issue. Handicapped formed about how it could effect and/or hinder their pensions, health costs, housing needs and employment. I truly feel that we should have the freedom to vote on this issue before it is rushed through parlia-ment, as it is one of the most important issues in the election.

These are my views. I hope you will soon let me know yours.

Peter Ramsay Director - P.U.S.H. (Persons United For Self Help)

Vote for your beliefs

Many people in the Belleville area are concern-ed that legislation restricting abortion is nonexistant. It seems unlikely that we will see Canada enact a new abortion law soon. Meanwhile, more than 70,000 lives a years are lost to abortion, leaving many women experiencing the after-effects.

IN YOUR OPINION

Prolife people need to be single-issue voters. People have criticized this approach, but ask yourself this question: "If a can-didate stood on all the issues in an election as I wanted, yet, I discovered that he was involved in and approved of child abuse, would I vote for him?" Can a prolife person vote for so-meone who endorses the ultimate abuse of children namely, their death?

Seems a simplistic argue ment? No more simplistic than solving problem pregnancies with the death of a child

Failure to vote in a prolife candidate makes voters responsible for the conuation of a holocaust. Ask your candidate where he stands with a simple phone call.

The pit bull of talk shows

I have yet to watch an entire program and probably never will, but every time I flip past the Morton Downey Show, I stop to watch for a few minutes in the hope of seeing him get decked by an irate guest.

This guy's popularity is hard to figure, but he seems to be appealing to the same people who buy videos of NHL hockey fights. You might say he's the pit bull of talk shows as he growls and snarls his way through the show, abusing his guests, browbeating and insulting them, rudely cutting them off in mid-sentence, telling them to get lost, shouting at them, calling them names, blowing smoke in their faces and generally acting like the type of guy who leaves cigarette burns in your living room carpet and carves his name on your oak dining room table.

And yet, he had the nerve to lecture one of his guests on responsible speech in a brief segment I saw the other day.

Having just cut off one guest who was making a strong point and called another names, he turned on a third guest to lecture him on how free speech is fine and all that, but that it brings certain responsibilities and that other people should be treated with courtesy. Right. The way he does. That shows like his or Geraldo Rivera's are rising in popularity is disturbing. The traditional view of free speech is that, in the marketplace of ideas, the truth will out. These shows prove the opposite, that in today's marketplace of ideas the most obnoxious will drown out the voice of reason and sensibility.

More disturbing is that politicians north and south of the border seem to be learning the same lesson. The result has been among the dirtiest elections in anyone's memory in both Canada and the U.S.

As economists have long known, bad money drives out

QUICK QUIP

I love bumper stickers and t-shirts. One of the best I've seen recently, and one new to me, was on a t-shirt: "When God made man, She was only joking."
Was that the original bad joke?

You can be sure that when The Kid comes in search of information or with a question for his dad or mom that he has an ulterior motive. A case in point:

Last week at work, he came to ask whether his brother was allowed to play with ... well, he wasn't sure what to call it. On checking it out, it proved to be a layout knife. "Sure," his unsuspecting dad said, "As long as he doesn't cut himself."

Which is when the truth came out - from his brother. The Kid had been using a knife, too, and had cut himself. Blood was dripping down his hand, which he had carefully hidden, but before he sought first aid, he wanted to know if he was going to get into trouble.

He did.

DOZONO GIVES MAYOR A TOUGH RUN

By press time at 5 a.m. Tuesday morning, 104 polls were tabulated in the mayoral race with Zegouras continuing to widen his lead with 6,714 votes, leaving Dozono with 4,489 and Robertson 1,181. It was, however, the closest race Zegouras has run in four elections for the municipality's top position.

viously fatigued Dozono.

"Any results will give me "I hope our new council satisfaction," said an obwill do good job for public. Because I did my best there's no regrets." He also added that he felt a better voter turnout (estimated by a sampling by the city clerk to be under 50 per cent) would have helped him win the election.

During the 1985 election, Zegouras swept to victory with 10,176 votes over his challenger's 1,274.

"It's nice to have it over," said Zegouras.

"Now we can carry on the work we (council) initiated in the last term."

But a close start for the veteran politician reminded him that an "undercurrent" still existed because of a series of Globe and Mail articles casting doubt on his land dealings and petitioners calling for a review by the Ministry of Municipal Affairs. "I think the whole thing was a crock of baloney," he

"There've been some very frustrating times in the past ... I don't intend to pre-occupy myself with the nonsense and foolishness."

One of the strongest showings, however, was for a new alderman hopeful — Kay Manderville.

Capturing an early lead, Manderville rocketed to 7,797 votes with 102 polls tabulated at press time. Falling a distant second was Alderman Kerry Soden with 6,540 votes. "I had myself placed anywhere from fifth down," said a jubilant Manderville, commenting

She also placed a strong showing in 1985 as a school board trustee, leading the votes with 6,330 sup-

Occupying the third Occupying the third council chair was incum-bent alderman Selma Bochnek with 6,090, followed by a face trying out election life for the se-cond time — Mary Anne Sills with 5,917.

Incumbants Stu Meeks followed with 5,588, Jean Smith with 5,467, Wolf Tausendfreund with 5,370, former police chief Doug Crosbie with 5,142 and incumbent Wally Dever with 4.416

At press time, Incum-bent Bob Dolan seemed likely to occupy the tenth spot with 4,298 votes but former school trustee Lyle Langabeer was close behind with 4,261. The Langabeer final count was not available at press time Tuesday morning and wasn't expected until

The only faces not to be returning to Belleville council are Alderman Ben Corke and Ross McDougall who decided not to run, and Bill Finkle, who was knocked out of the race Monday night and taken down to thirteenth place.

The present council met for the last time in open session on Tuesday night.

en an election with four candidates running for mayor." Candidate for mayor, Bernie Taylor was pleased because this time "Picton is having an exciting election."

The Picton Fire Hall couldn't have been a better location for this close and heated election, but even the hoses of the Picton Fire Department couldn't have doused the flames of democracy in action Mon-

As the tally board filled, it became obvious that the race had narrowed to three contenders: Ross Cronkwright, Charles Hep-Cronkwright, Charles nep-burn and the eventual win-ner, Al Piroth. The lead shifted from one candidate to the other as new polls totals came in. At times, Cronkwright led the race, then more votes would come in and former mayor Hepburn would slide into the commanding position, then Piroth again. Around and around and back and forth it went with no one able to guess the results until the final vote was counted. In the end, Piroth had enough to squeak to victory with 657 votes. while Hepburn had 639 votes, Cronkwright, 602 votes, and Bernie Taylor, a newcomer to the town, brought in 202 votes.

The new mayor ended his evening with a celebratory lunch hosted by the Picton Seniors Club at their dropin center on Ross Street.

There Piroth praised his workers, saying, 'If it hadn't been for the very strong support from the team we probably wouldn't acceptable job.

"( When the) economy is good," Tripp said, "it's hard to find a chink in the armour." He also said no one has prepared such a strong campaign since the Second World War and that, "Unless there's an earthquake," his name will not appear on the ballot

Alderman elect, Murray Workman, thought the race would would have been much closer but considered the solid economy in Trenton was hard for Tripp to beat.

Returning alderman, after a three-year absence from council, Bob Wannamaker, said he "felt it (the mayor's race) was going to be neck and neck Wannamaker concluded the race for the mayor's chair was cleanly fought with the voters choosing the right man

From the onset the Tren ton mayoralty race had all the makings of a grudge match. Tripp, an alderman for 17 years before losing in 1985, said "I haven't spoken to that man (Robertson) for three years and will not speak to him until I'm in my coffin.

Robertson was not as adamant but said, "(There's) no animosity. I just don't want him

Robertson said the two mayoralty candidates called a truce in the beginning of the campaign and laid their differences aside. Robertson said he was pleased the campaign did not "degenerate into a mud slinging duel.

The possibility of confrontation between the mayoralty candidates and the fine weather on election day drew voters out of the woodwork. Voter turnout for the election was up considerably from 1985 with 41.25 per cent of the 11,841 eligible voters casting ballots compared to 30 per cent in 1985. In 1982 45.7 per cent of eligible voters cast ballots.

moved out of their home. Jan, the devil, regularly got into his cups and, tenacious as a pit bull, would seek out his terrified wife. Thrilled at finding her, he would beat her up. In self-defence, Bessie developed a network of friends who would hide her from the left jabs and right crosses of her irate husband. One such haven was the flat of Hazel Malone and her actor on, Cavan, who lived up to then in apparent harmony in

On the day in question, Valentine's Day of 1958, Bessie had heard from her network that her bullying husband was loaded for bear and was searching everywhere for her. Bessie found refuge with the Malones.

Jan, drunk as usual, burst into the Malones's flat. With-Jan, drunk as usual, burst into the majorities is tall. Willing out a word, he brushed past Hazel in the living room and proceeded to a hall leading to the bathroom. Hazel, not knowing what to do, offered him a slug of brandy. Jan wheeled around and clutched Hazel by both wrists. Bessie, who was frantically running from room to room searching for a door that would lock, shouted out to Cavan, "Help your mother, He will probably kill her." Stout lad that he was, Cavan replied, "I will help her. I

He then proceeded down the hall and observed Jan He then proceeded down the hall and observed Jan punching his mother in the face and in the back of the head. Hazel broke free and ran into the living room, leaving Cavan alone with the wild and wooly Jan.

The two men struggled, Jan. was doing all the punching while Cavan was stienting to pin his adversary's arms to his side and pass battle, Cavan retreated to the living room, picked up kitchen knife that was lying on the table and retued to the fray. Moments later, with blood gushing from a wound in his neck and three stab wounds in his bod, and slunged to the floor, dead.

Instead of reacting as expected, Jan lunged at him. Jan had a hand under his chin and was pushing his head back. Cavan felt as if he was about to lose consciousness. He claimed he closed his eyes, raised his hand and must have swung. When he looked up, blood was gushing from Jan's neck. Jan collapsed and died a few minutes later. As for the stab wounds to the victim's back, Cavan could only say he couldn't remember inflicting them, but admit ed he must have done so in the course of the struggle.

On the surface, it appears that Cavan acted in self defence. He was in a struggle with a violent, dangerous man, who might have killed him had he not defended himself.

Not so, argued the prosecution. After Cavan's mother broke free and after Cavan retreated to the living room, the drunken Jan was not an immediate danger to anyone. They professed that Cavan, in arming himself with a knife, was using undue aggressive force not in keeping with the provocation received.

Cavan's attorney addressed the jury, stating, "Any young man with a spark of manhood in him would be provoked and disgusted at seeing a man strike a woman at all, but seeing his own mother struck by this brutish drunken man—could there ever be evidence of greater provocation?

The defence attorney went on to explain self defense, emphasizing that an individual had the right to defend himself by all reasonable means. He closed his address by inviting the jury "with confidence to come to the con-

It was left for the presiding judge to sum up. He instructed the jury, "Provocation does not render the act of killing excusable in the sense that it entitles you to give a verdict of not guilty altogether."

The judge elaborated on self defence. "If a man attacks me, I am entitled to defend myself. So, if this is a case of self defence, a true finding here would be not guilty."

Belleville's Junior B travelled to Markham and Bobcats tied Bramalea on dropped a 4-1 loss despite Friday night to extend the team's undefeated stream to four games, but then in the final 20 minutes or broke the streak with a loss play.

Allan Bigg was shakey in three goals

Rob Ord opened the scor-ing to give the Cats a 1-0 lead. The Cats fell behind 2-1 but were able to salvage a tie on Kevin Doherty's goal in the final minutes of the game.

On Saturday, the Cats dropped a 4-1 loss despite outshooting their op-ponents 55-24, almost half goal, giving up three goals on the first three shots. Coach Moe Hunter pulled Bigg in favour of Dave Bonter, who allowed just one more goal over the rest of the game.

TOUGH WEEK FOR BULLS AS TEAM DROPS THREE

It wasn't a good week for the Belleville Bulls as the Junior A hockey club dropped three losses to firmly dig themselves into last place.

In all three games against Peterborough, Ottawa and arch-rival Kingston, the Bulls fell behind early and then could never catch up.

Last Thursday, it was the Petes who sent the Bulls back to the showers with a 4-2 loss. At one point, the Petes led 4-0. The turning point in the game was an apparent goal by Frank Melone for the Bulls that would have back the goal and called penalties. A few minutes later, it was 4-0.

Saturday, the Bulls lost 6-4 at home to Ottawa. Again, they fell behind early, spotting their guests a 5-1 lead before storming back in the final period. In that period, the team outshot their guests 18-2 but made the game 2-1. In-stead, the referee called game away for good. game away for good.

The team then headed to Kingston where they lost 7-2 to the Raiders. In their usual pattern of late, they fell behind early, trailing 4-1 after the first period. By the end of the second period, Kingston led 6-1. Bryan Marchment and John Porco scored for the

ARGYLL CHAPTER I.O.D.E. Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire

Wishes to thank the citizens of Belleville and surrounding areas for supporting the recent "Argyll '88" Arts and Crafts Show, and to thank the artists and craftspersons for their participation which made the Show such a success.

For nearly a century, from coast to coast, the I.O.D.E. have laboured to make our beloved Canada a better place in which to live, raise and educate our children. Loyalty to country and to the Crown is the guiding star of the Order and education and service its main concerns.

After the First World War when benefits to our wounded heroes, to War widows and their children were so minimal, the Order shouldered the worthy task of assisting in every way and with the education of the children. Scholarships for higher education and post-graduate studies were also established for them. Cenotaphs across the land attest to the efforts of the I.O.D.E. to keep "We Will Remember" ever green.

For forty years the Order has adopted native schools across the North, supplying them with libraries, clothing, sports and craft equipment, besides building two Arctic community halls. Education has been liberally supported around the world, especially in India and the Caribbean.

Services at Home and Abroad are always prepared when disaster strikes and the thousands of Korean orphans were a major project. New arrivals to Canada are met with material help and the Order is very active in the Citizenship Courts.

In Belleville the activities of the Chapter are numerous in both education and charity and members give thousands of Service Hours to the community each year, including the Blood Donor Clinic. The little Park by the bridge was donated to the people of our fair city.

WEEKLY NEWS AUTO MART

-new chassis for the Dynast

It has been a year now since the new Chrysler Corporation introduced the new Dynasty. The car design is the 'square look', not the aerodynamic look that so many cars are changing to.

The Dynasty was one of the two new cars introduced in the '88 model year by Chrysler. The Dynasty and its sibling the New Yorker platform. This platform shares some suspension components with the Kcar, but the chassis is all

The squarer, more traditional look of the Dynasty has proven to be a sales success for Chrysler.

The test car I was given was the very well-equipped base Dynasty . The only other model in the lineup is the LE, which comes with a few more goodies than the base model

Angular

As I entered the Dynasty I found the interior styl-ing to be very North American, with angular lines not common in European cars. This is not to say that a lot of thought wasn't put into the design necessary stocks and control switches are where you would expect them to be in a North American car.

Seating in my test car consisted of traditional three-passenger bench seats. I have to admit I didn't think they still made then without some kind of split in them.

My preference would still be a bucket seat as it does give the driver more back support. But as bench seats go, these were not too bad and did offer the option of carrying that third person in the front.

Since the platform that the Dynasty runs on is larger than its K-car forerunner, the leg room on this car is greatly improved.

P-X CHRYSLER

YNASTY DAYS

The wide doors of the Dynasty are also another advantage to this well-thought-out car — they make entering and exiting the front and back seats

With the straight lines of this car, finding room for your luggage is not a pro-blem. The 16.9-foot trunk can swallow just about anything you put in it. THe only drawback to the Dynasty's trunk was higher liftover.

The base engine in the Dynasty is the 2.5-liter overhead cam used in many other Chrsyler frontwheel-drives. The test car I was given to use was equipped with the optional 3-liter V6. This V6, with an overhead cam on each side of the V6, is built by Mitsubishi for Chrsyler. Mitsubishi also built the Colt for Chrsyler.

This strong yet quiet V6 gives the car plenty of lowend power, making highway acceleration very easy, and delivers about 136 hp.

The three-speed automatic was the only transmission choice for '88, but for 1989 the Dynasty can be ordered with a fourspeed automatic.

Making up the suspen-sion is an Isostrut setup in front, with gas-charged shocks and sway bar. In the rear the basic beam axel is used with coil spring.

To my delight, the ride on the Dynasty was fairly smooth without being mushey. In the corner, the gas shock absorbers did their job keeping the car level.

When it comes to reasonable price and reasonable value for your dollar I don't think there are many cars on the market that will beat the Dynasty

Specifications

Base price: $15,865. Price as tested: $17,791; price includes V6, upgraded sound system, power locks, cruise control and tilt steering wheel.

Engine: Three-liter electronic fuel-injected V6 with an overhead cam on each bank; 136hp at 4,800 rpm. Tires: Goodyear P195/70 R14 all-season radials.

Become an indoor gardener

It all began about 25 years ago when I hung a four-foot, two-tube, hooded fluorescent fixture over a discarded kitchen table and propagated my first house plant, a jade plant stem about three inches long.

It is still with me, reigning over an east ceiling to floor window, standing about three feet high on stems three-inches in diameter and each spring sending up clusters of pinkish-white scented blossoms.

Today I have 132 square feet of lighted growing space and it still isn't enough.

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

It yields about 1200 annuals every spring and by Christmas, in various rooms of my home, there will be half a dozen violets, three or four Strptocarpus, columneas and two or budding Christmas cactus to supplement the one currently loaded with about 150 brilliant coral buds

By January, the first of half a dozen Phalenopsis orchids will be in flower and its companions will continue the process right through until summer.

I am not bragging, I am selling. Become an indoor-light gardener. Not only will your gardening enjoyment increase ten-fold, so will your knowledge and you wouldn't be the first to convert a consuming hobby into a business. Such as a guest I had on Toronto radio show on a recent Saturday, Jackie Patterson.

She propagated her first African violets under lights in Belleville, Ontario not too many years ago. Today, she runs a thriving business called Plants 'n Things in Keswick, Ont., each year propagating about 15,000 violets and other gesneriads and sending attitude. ding cuttings all over the world.

I would suggest you begin your adventures in indoor-light gardening with either a commercial decorator unit or a home-made structure in a basement room. Besides being perfectly functional, the decorator unit not only looks good but provides an ideal growing centre for those with limited window ideal growing centre for those with limited window space or low humidity, such as happens in apartments or townhouses. The basement structure can be used for mass production and experimentation.

I have both, a decorator unit in my dining room for displaying flowering plants and two basement units where I produce about 1200 annuals a year and propagate house plants.

The basement unit is of very simple construction, 2x 4 frames with 2x 4 shelf supports all connected.

The basement unit is of very simple construction, 2 x 4 frames with 2 x 4 shelf supports, all connected by 2 x 4 side rails, cross-braced in the centre and near the ends. Side by side, 1 x 10" boards provide the shelving. All wood should be waterproofed before construction. Width should be no more that 24" and length depends on whether you are using 4" of the shelving the shelf of the shelf o or 8' fixtures.

On the top of each end of the fixtures are punchouts. In these, insert two S-hooks connecting a short loop of fine chain. Another length of light chain is connected to the loop with a S-hook. This allows for height adjustment of the fixtures above the growing nabels. In the case of the top shelf, first. the growing plants. In the case of the top shelf, fixthe growing plants; in the case or the up-such, in-tures are hung from the rafters and subsequent fix-tures are hung from the cross bracing below each shelf. Space between shelves should be 18 to 24". Next week: The Miniature Packaged Plant.

REMATA'S RECIPES

Hi, When I first landed in London, England, I could not cook. I was an au pair girl. However, the lady I worked for could not cook either. I the lady I worked for could not cook either. I liked to eat and learned to cook very fast. One of my first offerings was Beef Stroganoff. Un-fortunately this established me as chief cook, babysitter, etc. in that household.

Beef Stroganoff

1 lb. sirloin steak

cut in 1" x 11/2 strips

1/4 cup margarine or butter

Melt butter in deep skillet

1 minced onion

Lightly brown, then remove onion from skillet, add meat

1 tbsp flour

Sprinkle over meat, brown well, turning often, then remove meat.

1/4 cup water 1/2 cup beef bouillon

Add to skillet and dissolve the residue on the bottom. Return meat and onion to skillet, cover and simmer for 15 minutes.

WHY IS HE SMILING?

John Turner, leader of the opposition, was all smiles last Saturday as he visited a crowded reception in Centennial Secondary School. Over 1000 Liberal supporters attended to hear their leader speak on election issues. Ultimately, however, he would once again lose the chance at the title of right-honourable, losing the election to another majority Conservative government. (Smith photo) AND THE RESIDENCE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPE

Liberal Vanclief bucks Tory trend

By John G. Smith

There was no joy in Jack Arthur's election party Monday night despite a national sweep by the Progressive Conservatives. He saw his party win a rare second consecutive majority but lost personally in what was once considered a long time Tory seat.

In Lyle Vanclief's headquarters, however, it was hard to hear over the shouts of jubillation as poll after poll came in to show a Liberal sweep through the entire Prince Edward-Hastings riding.

Vanclief held 42 per cent of the vote with 19,450 supporters followed by Arthur with 16,578 (36 per cent). Don Wilson, fourthtime NDP candidate, pulled in 6,468 followed by John Herring, candidate for the Christian Heritage Party, with 2,037, Doug Grant with 523 under the Confederation of Regions banner and Heather-Anne Lapsley, a Libertarian candidate, with 231.

"I feel great," remarked Vanclief when half of the results were in. "The Liberal party has done well from where they were.

"I was exceptionally pleased with the reception we got throughout the riding," he said, commenting on his door-to-door campaign. In all, the Vanclief campaign team knocked on over 17,000 doors with hundreds of volunteers.

To chants of "Lyle ... Lyle ... Lyle," he addressed the audience of supporters jammed into the Dundas Street campaign head-quarters. "All I can say, folks, is thank you so much," he said.

Why indeed? The question could fairly be posed the other way around as well. At any rate, researchers at the University of Western Ontario now think they know

According to media reports of a recent neuroscience convention, two women neuro-psychologists at the university have found that sex hormones shape the way the brain is organized both before and after birth. As a result, they say that men do better than women at parallel parking a car while women can master trickier tongue-twisters and finer hand movements than men.

Maybe they're right. My wife hates parallel parking and I can't say "Peter Piper p... p... p... picked a p... p... p... p... pickle, a pick, no, no, a peck of p...p... p..." Oh, forget it. I can't say tongue-twisters to save my life. They drive me out of my mind.

Of course, another researcher at the neuroscience convention was quoted as saying that no one has a mind, that the idea of a mind as an independent agent that acts on the brain is just that — an idea, a figment of the imagination. We have brains and electrons go down nerve paths and that's all there is to it. We don't "think" the way we think we think. So much for "I think, therefore I am." Pascal only

Wilson:

We all lost

By Francis Kavanagh
"We all lost," was how Don Wilson, NDP candidate in the Hastings Prince Edward Riding, summed up the election results Monday night after the Progressive Conservatives swept back to a majority government.

And locally, it was no better a night for the NDP.
Despite the statement on the wall of Don Wilson's campaign office that "A vote for Liberals is a lost vote against free trade," Liberal Lyle Vanclief won with the NDP once again trailing in third with a lower percentage of votes than in the last election.

Running in his fourth campaign, Wilson said he is disappointed with the loss but not "shattered."His greatest fear is the majority won by the Conservatives, because the passing of the free trade deal is now inevitable.

By the 21st century

Wilson sees Canada in a different light than the majority of Canadians.
"Maybe they didn't realise what's at stake," he said after the election.

He is concerned that Canada will become the underling of the United States, similar to what has taken place in Central and South America. The country will be run by the multinational corpora-tions, he predicted.

Wilson's other concern, and a more immediate concern to the workers in the campaign office, is the fact that he won less than 15 per cent of the vote. Under Elections Canada rules, candidates with less than 15 per cent of the vote must cover their own campaign expenses without assistance from the government.

A veteran of four federal campaigns in the Hastings Prince Edward riding, Wilson said Monday night he will not run for a fifth

For now, Wilson and his wife Elsa plan to take a holiday in Elsa's home land, Chile, returning in

Elections worked thanks to you

The signs are coming down, the shouting is over and we have survived two more elections this fall.

Quinte Weekly News offers its congratulations to the winners, both municipally and federally in the Quinte area. Now the real work begins as you set out to govern for the next few years. We'll be watching with great interest.

We also offer our thanks to those who ran but lost. You helped make the democratic process work. We would rather see an election than an acclamation and a close race than a landslide - it helps to keep everyone honest. There were still acclamations in various municipal elections, but in most cases we had election races. Thanks for making it a race.

And finally, thanks to all those who contributed in some way to either the municipal or federal elections. We think not only of enumerators, polling officers, scrutineers, but also of those who worked for various candidates, answering telephones, driving people to the polls, putting up signs, knocking on doors, distributing electioneering pamphlets. You all contributed to a healthy democratic process.

Don't abandon pet

Dear Editor.

In reference to the article by David Botting Quinte Weekly News, Tuesday Nov. 1st, 1988 and "Senior Won't Abandon Pet."

It is about time that the provincial government and their officials, both elected and appointed across this province, recognized that "Loneliness" is or is is or is becoming one of our biggest social ills amongst the nearly one million seniors population, a state that leads to all sorts of physical, mental and emotional problems.

Mr. Joe Lavin should be congratulated for binging his plight to the attention the public and your newspaper for publishing it. It is shameful the at-titude adopted by the government and their lack of positive action.

It is suggested with a little effort, imagination and leadership a suitable pro-cess could be found where those who may be alergic to pets could be housed in one building and those with pets in another. The size and number of pets could be controlled by law the same way the government controls all aspects of housing. There is sufficient turnover and movement in seniors housing that over a limited space of time a suitable scheme could be worked

I would recommend a lot more effort, less talk, more action about how to support seniors in their own homes and environment would help take the government partially off the hook

Maybe the Ontario Gerentological Association should put more effort into this problem and that a gerentology course be man-datory before promotion for middle and upper management in the government in those ministries dealing with seniors. This includes their agencies. LSW

Who won the War?

The Editor,

Can someone, anyone, tell me who won the war between the English and the French? The reason for this question is that to me it seems that the French have won

Everything we see, the recent political debate, and everything we read, signs, labels, containers, etc., more and more has the French content before the English content. Should it not be the other way around, especially when the Province of Quebec is Unilingual, French only?

It is my personal opinion that if the souls who fought in that war so long ago and lost their lives for England could see what has been done to this country, they would roll over in their graves.

But please don't get the idea that I am a bigot, antisemitic or anything like that because I'm not. We live in a multi-cultural country, so treat all cultures equally. Stop pushing French on us and demand we learn it or be left out of jobs and posi-tions. Teach a variety of languages and cultures, for example: Cree, German, Spanish, Inuit, Russian, Japanese, etc, etc, etc.

Thank you from a fifth generation Canadian and nothing else but Canadian.

Turner visit boosted Vanclief

"I've never been a believer in fortunes," admitted Vanclief, pulling a slip of paper out of his pocket. But after opening a fortune cookie three weeks ago he found the slip he read to the cheering crowd: "You will be recognized and honoured as a community leader.' I may never read another fortune cookie,"he joked.

"We were prepared to win and we were prepared to lose but we certainly hoped we prepared more one way than another," he said Repeating a campaign theme, he promised to "warm the debate not the bench" in Ottawa.

bench" in Ottawa.
In an interview, Vanclief was quick to point out that Saturday's visit by John Turner may have had an influence on final election results.

"I think that was the biggest political rally that's been in Belleville in maybe a couple of decades. Certainly, even if we go through more campaigns in our life, we'll probably never be fortunate enough to have the leader of the party in the riding on the last day and the afternoon of a campaign." he said. "We felt that they must have had some indication that it would be a worthwhile trip ... it was a great climax to a super campaign."

He added: "We hope that we can fulfill the trust that people in the riding have placed in us."

The Vanclief family was equally jubilant regarding the riding's newest member of parliament.

"Fabulous," was the word his fifteen-year-old daughter Vanessa used to describe her father's standings in the first election she's ever been involved in.

"I had a good positive feeling ... I'm just delighted." said his wife.

The night definitely ended on an upbeat note with the Vanclief team.

Arthur: scare tactics hurt free trade vote

"At least the story of free trade ... is going to go forward," said Jack Arthur in retrospect, looking back on his own personal defeat in an election that saw his party return to a majority government.

"I'm just sorry we didn't get the story (of the benefits of free trade) to our people here," he said. "I feel the scare tactics worked better than I had anticipated and that was unfortunate."

He had a warning for his opponent: "I'm not going very far away ... we're going to be around."

Arthur supporters, even though they seemed down-trodden, consistently spoke of such a "next time," a possibility their candidate didn't rule out at all.

"Keep your eyes open fella," he said to Vanclief.

Comparisons were being made between this federal campaign and the provincial campaign that swept Hugh O'Neil into the provincial legislature in 1975. Both were victorious in what was considered a longtime member retired and found themselves as members of the official opposition.
"I don't think you can consider this part of the province is Tory

consider this part of the province is Tory anymore," said O'Neil, commenting on the seats now held by Liberals in the provincial and federal parliaments. "We've come a long way from where we were."

But it will be the next four years which will decide how strong the new member of parliament is.

CROWD CHEERS TURNER'S LAST CAMPAIGN STOP

By John G. Smith

"Tur-ner ... Tur-ner ... Tur-ner."

This was the now familiar battle cry of over 1,000 Liberal party supporters as they jammed Centennial Secondary's auditorium in Belleville to greet their leader Saturday on Turner's last Ontario campaign stop of the election.

In a speech filled with familiar Liberal campaign cliches, Turner kept the crowd cheering with phrases like: "this is more than an election, it's your future" and referring to President Reagan's recent speech on free trade, saying it reminded him of "a lame duck trying to rescue a dead duck."

a dead duck."

Cheers of "go get em
John," "we're with you
John" and "give 'em hell John" were yelled out by almost all of those attending...almost.

As he talked about accusing Brian Mulroney of selling out Canada during the national debate, Turner faced a lone heckler who yelled out "you're lying."
Turner capitalized on the

Turner capitalized on the moment, accusing Mulroney of not having "the guts" to defend himself on national television and criticizing Progressive Conservative campaign vocabulary for only including the words "traitor" and "liar".

Trying to hurl more insults, the heckler_was covered with campaign signs and shouted down by the vast majority of Liberal supporters surrounding him.

Commenting on Mulroney's campaign strategy, Turner said earlier that "Mulroney's getting a little desperate ... in the last four years I've had everything but the kitchen sink thrown at me and there's nothing he can do to hurt me."

Centralizing his attack on free trade with its concerns to agriculture, he said that the deal would jeopardise the family farm and Canada's food processing industry.

Because of Canada's growing season and additional costs relating to it. Turner said Canadian farmers wouldn't be able to compete. Any nation not able to sustain its farming community in his words is 'not a sovereign nation and is not worthy of being called a sovereign nation."

He continued to chastise British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and U.S. President Ronald Reagan throughout his speech for interfering in the election.

"In one stroke of the pen, Mr. Mulroney reversed over 120 years of Canadian history," he said.

"We have a great advantage over our conservative opponents in that we've read the document and we're dealing with the facts," he said to a cheering crowd. "Vote Liberal to defeat the Mulroney deal." The rally concluded with Turner, the Liberal candidates and the crowd singing Oh Canada shortly after his call for a greater sense of national pride.

When introducing his prize speaker, Liberal candidate Lyle Vanclief had said "John Turner's visit here today puts the icing on the cake on a fantastic campaign." In the eyes of over 1,000 people, he was

LOEB OWNER STRESSES SERVICE AND FRESHNESS

By David Botting

Customers are important Michael Eastman, owner and operator of the new LOEB grocery store in Relleville

"My bosses are my customers," he says, and he wants to stay in close contact with his bosses.

A veteran of the grocery business for 20 years, he started as a 15-year-old packing groceries in a store near his Windsor home. Now owner of his own dream supermarket, he can still be found packing groceries — and he hopes to keep doing that until he retires.

"I hope the last job I do before I retire is packing," he said in an interview after the store opened earlier this month. "Then I'll say goodbye."
After 20 years of working for a major super-market chain, the chance to own and operate a LOEB franchise is a dream come true for Mr. Eastman. He describes it "the opportunity of a lifetime.

He also likes LOEB's emphasis on freshness and service. Admitting he was skeptical of the company's claims when he first joined it, he said he is now a true believer.

Fresh-baked goods and pizza available at LOEB are just that — freshly baked that day. Not the day before or a few days before.

That day.

Fresh fish will be filleted before the customer's eyes. In fact, in the case of trout, the customer can see the fish swimming before his

The company also emphasizes customer service. That includes people on every checkout to bag groceries and a carry out service to the customer's car. That includes more customers on the floor than in most grocery stores to help customers find food items. That includes a service-oriented fish department instead of just slabs of fish in a freezer.

The new 30,000 square foot LOEB store on Bell Boulevard across from the Quinte Mall is only the third in Ontario and is the beginning of what Mr. Eastman called an "aggressive expansion progressive expansion program" in Ontario.

LOEB was family owned until 1977 and is now in its 76th year of operation. It employs over 1,300 people directly and another 7,000 in its Ontario and Outper. in its Ontario and Quebec franchise and affiliated food stores, mainly under the IGA, LOEB IGA and LOEB banners.

Unlike other grocery stores, LOEB doesn't offer specials. Instead, it offers everyday low prices on hundreds of goods, in-cluding staples such as milk, orange juice and bread. Advertised prices for the store's opening aren't just opening specials, he said. "Customers don't have to load up their buggies," he said — prices are guaranteed for nine weeks.

Mr. Eastman said that a survey of customers at his store indicates most are saving around $30 on each $100-$150 food order.

"We're not a warehouse store," he said, "but we of-fer warehouse prices." LOEB also stresses its family roots and communiconnections. Mr. Eastman is joined at the store by his fiancee Janet Crouch, a deli specialist, and his two daughters, Lisa and Christi, who are part-time grocery clerks.

READERSHIP SURVEY SEPTEMBER

Every year in September, Quinte Weekly News conducts an annual survey of its readers. The results of the year's survey are below. Once again this year, we found a high readership for most of the newspaper editorial features. We are especially pleased that five of the six top editorial features are found on it editorial page, an indication that our readers look to us for an alternative and independent point of view the Quinte area. Responses to questions about classified advertising were a real eye-opener with almost per cent of our readers soving they read the classified a regularly. And they said our classifieds work if them—no wonder our classified section has grown by over 500 per cent since last year.

Growing plants from seed

Plants can be propagated two ways: asexually, (from plant parts), or sexually (from seed), and the indoor light gardener can master both skills without much effort.

Before this series is over we will talk about asex-ual propagation, but I'd like to talk about growing ual propagation, but I o like to talk about growing plants from seed. If my timing seems inappropriate, let me explain this way. If you are leaning towards becoming a phytoilluminationist, I want you to lean far enough and realize the full extent of your needs lar enough and realize the full extension your necessbefore you make a commitment.

If you are planning nothing more than keeping house plants in bloom and perhaps propagating one or two, that's one thing. But if you decide to lean all the way and grow annuals and vegetables from seed, propagate trees, shrubs and evergreens, that's something else.

ARDENING AND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

For the first exercise, then a three-tier commercial decorator unit will undoubtedly serve your needs. But if you plan to make indoor light gardening a year-round hobby, then a home-made basement unit is a must.

The reason most gardeners build the basement unit for growing annuals and vegetables and in-dividual flowering plants such as geraniums from seed is because it's the simplest and most productive way to get started.

Because a seed is nothing more or less than a miniature packaged plant awaiting the proper climatic conditions to continue its life cycle. Pro-miniature packaged plant awaiting the proper climatic conditions to continue its life cycle. Provide the approximate conditions and the seed will grow, even if those conditions are far from ideal. Seeds are either light-responsive, light-sensitive or light insensitive, which simply means they need light to germinate, must be germinated in the dark or couldn't care less. Some seeds require a high soil temperature, others like cool conditions. If seeds need to germinate in the dark, simply cover the seed flat with a dark-green garbage bag. If they need bottom heat, use a heating pad or set the flat on top of the fixture. If they prefer it cool, germinate on a bottom shelf of the growing unit.

The best possible seeding guides are the full information seed packets provided by seed mail order companies. The only thing I would discount are their germinating periods. These are for greenhous use and, as indoor light gardeners, you can cut those times in balf.

Any container that drains well can be used for seeding. I use the plastic flats that can be obtained at any nursery for both seeding and the growing of at any nursery for both seeding and the growing of plants to the point of setting out.

Label the container and fill to the brim with soiless mix. Water with a 10-52-10 fertilizer solution and let drain. Seed according to package instructions (seeds covered or uncovered), and cover the flat with a clear plastic film held with masking last the industrial beat and the flat with a clear plastic film held with masking tape at the sides and ends. This maintains heat and humidity, resulting in faster germination.

By the third day start checking under the plastic film and as soon as tiny green specks appear in quantity on the surface, get the plastic off or the plants will soor and grow spindly. Never let the germinating mix dry out, I use a plastic clothessprinkler for gentle watering of tiny seedlings.

When they show four leaves, the seedlings are ready for transplanting. Ready a flat by filling with dampened soiless mix and poke holes about three inches apart in three rows, two along the edges and one along the centre.

inches apart in three rows, two along the edges and one along the centre.

Hold the seedling by a leaf and dig out with a sharp-pointed spoon. Don't worry if it comes out bare root, they have an amazing will to live. Plant in the prepared holes in the growing flats, firm, water thoroughly and set back under lights, (making sure the foliage is never more than six inches away). All that is required now is simple maintenance until set ting out next spring.

This weekend's Argos game marked the end to an era in Toronto's Exhibition Stadium.

No, I don't mean the Argos will start winning their games. It's something a little more nostalgic and definitely more realistic.

Marking a move to bigger and better things, this is the last "professional" football game to be played in Exhibition Stadium with the first game of next season to be played in the Skydome. If the walls of the decaying stadium could talk, they might even be crying right now.

It's been 30 seasons

since the team, infamous for its lack of ability for playing football, entered Exhibition for the first time. Fourteen of the seasons saw them doing the Australian crawl into last place in the CFL. Only in 1983 were they able to hold the cup during the last 36 years.

But maybe this marks a new beginning for the boys in blue. Just maybe.

X X X
It's a Belleville custom to throw insults at referees during a Belleville Bulls game and, in the case of Saturday's game against the London Knights, it was a necessity.

But our friends in the black and white striped shirts get used to that what they shouldn't have to be trained for is picking up garbage.

During the last few home games, newspapers and even a garbage can have been thrown on the ice dur-ing the game. This, to say the least, is unacceptable.

Come on fans, clean up your act. Just learn new in your act. ous. sults to hurl. Hey ref ...

Wa leye, bows hitting hard

Those who have laid to rest their jigging rods for the season are missing out on some fine walleye Mike Delaney from Pilots Marine and Sports reports his clientele have been taking some good eating-size walleye on jigs tipped with minnows or variants of pork rind.

THE NET RESULT

By Bruce Elliott

Mike also relates that the government dock in Belleville has been producing some nice fish for twilight anglers casting Rapalas. Not to be overlooked is the use of vertical jigging methods with Swedish Pimples or Mr. Champ imitations. What works after ice-up likewise should produce

The news is the same from Randy Turners' tackle shop at Carrying Place. Trent River anglers who frequent Randy's establishment have been bringing in many walleye, with some weighing over the ten pound mark. Their success has been attributed to minnow sweetened jigs in daylight hours and trolled minnow imitations after dark.

Rainbow Trout

Lakeport and Grafton streamouths are displaying some superb "bow" action, weather permitting. On-shore winds from the south have been a deterrent for a few days over the last couple of weeks for "surf anglers". But when the north wind blows, the rainbow action has been nothing short of excellent. Roe, tied in dime-sized mesh, remains the hot number when cast into clear waters of the big lake. Of the rear-shore waters become darkened by the southern winds, a spawn bag below a pencil float can do the trick in the streams (check out MNR regulations when fishing inland waters).

Bits and Bites

The Northunberland Fishing Quest held their wind-up celebration last weekend, giving out more than $26,000 in prizes.

Although the final figures are not yet calculated, it appears nearly $3,000 will go to sport-fishingrelated projects in this area.

Thanks go out to Budweiser and all area sponsors their generous support and to Ande Line of Florida, who for the last few years has been a major supporter of the endeavours of Central Lake Ontario Sport Anglers and their quest to enhance and improve sport fishing in this port of Ontario. Good Luck and Good Fishin'!

Dr. Hadley appeared to have everything - a thriving practise, the respect of his neighbors, and a bevy of local beauties more than willing to share his bed. But the good doctor wanted wealth, I mean real wealth. He looked around and homed in on the millionaires from Dallas and Galveston who spent their summer months on ranches near Dickinson.

One fine day the gods smiled down on lascivious wilmer. He was asked to minister to a young morsel named Sue Kathleen Tinsley, the guest of Commodore E.M. Hartrick. Sue had a bad sunburn. She also had everything else in all the right places. The doctor cultivated the romance and reaped the harvest.

On Oct. 13, 1913, Wilmer and Sue were married. Sue's sister paid for the shindig, which sort of surprised Wilmer. When he questioned his new bride, he discovered for the first time that her once rich daddy had lost his entire fortune. Wilmer flipped, but there was very little he could do other than bide his time. Demonstrating the patience of Job, the man of medicine kept his eyes open for his next try at the brass ring.

Wilmer figured that Colorado, with its wealthy silver miners, should be ripe for picking. Besides, the miners' wives should be sufficiently neglected to be susceptible to a large dose of his particular cure all. Wilmer and Sue settled in Eagle County. The doctor had figured correctly. He soon owned a thriving private hospital, chock full of women with an assortment of minor aiments and some with no ailments at all. It didn't matter to Wilmer. He cured what ailed each and every one.

Rumors of the doctor's peccadillos spread throughout the county. A few robust silver millionaires got together with the idea that the district would be a far better place without the virile doctor. Wilmer didn't have to be told twice. He sold the hospital and headed for Red Cliff, Colo., where he was hired to run a hospital owned by Empire Zinc. The job came with the usual peres for Wilmer – nurses.

But a man of Wilmer's greed can only live on love for a limited period of time. He still wanted a wealthy wife. Maybe doctoring in the service would put him in touch with a rich Southern belle. Wilmer joined the army and was assigned to Debarkation Hospital No. 52 at Westhampton, Virginia. As luck would have it, her nurse Cheryl Johnson, who was everything a red blooded southern peach should be, without the pit. This time, Wilmer didn't take any chances. He consulted Dun and Bradstreet take any chances. He consulted Dun and Bradstreet. Sure enough, Cheryl's daddy was a financial heavy-weight. Wilmer commenced his campaign with the flair of a Patton and the attention to detail of an Eisenhower. It only took three dates before Cheryl was enjoying the doctor's physical attributes. There was talk of marriage. Serious talk. Daddy and Mummy Johnson consented.

Johnson consented.

Almost forgotten was everloving wife Sue. Cheryl Johnson consented.

Almost forgotten was everloving wife Sue. Cheryl knew that her true love was married, but firmly believed that Sue was in California finalizing her divorce. Nothing could be further from the truth. At this crucial juncture in his campaign, Wilmer received a call from Richmond. Sue was on her way for a visit. Wilmer did a neat bit of footwork. He rented a furnished room, met and made passionate love to his wife, and then formulated intricate plans to kill her. It was a momentous day, Nov. 11, 1918, the day the armistice was signed ending World War I. Wilmer took Sue for a boat ride on the James River. He brough along a bottle of whiskey, liberally laced with a drug which would render his wife unconscious. Once this was accomplished, it would be a simple matter to dump her overboard. A tragic accident, a drowning. Why, Wilmer could see the headlines — Doctor Makes Heroic Attempt to Save Wife.

He offered Sue a drink. It was cold that November afternoon out on the river. Sue took a healthy gulp, swayed and keeled over. Wilmer was just about to dump her overboard when he absently felt for a pulse, as doctors sometimes do. He was shocked. Sue was dead. As any fan of Agatha knows, if a person is dead before being submerged in water, there will be no water in the lungs. That's a prerequisite to drowning. Wilmer had to improvise. He tied Sue up with a rope and the boat's anchor. Then he dropped the whole bundle overboard. dle overboard

Wilmer went ashore and faked checking his wife out of the furnished room, explaining that she was moving into larger quarters with him. He packed her belongings in a trunk, which he shipped to Atlanta, to be held there until he called.

Details, details — they were cumbersome. But in a few hours they were completed, enabling the murder-ous doctor to keep his date with wealthy Cheryl that very night.

A few days later, Wilmer wrote to Sue's sister, advising her that Sue had become seriously ill on a cruise to Puerto Rico. Unfortunately, she had died of natural causes. It had been tragic.

On Dec. 5, Dr. Hadley received his discharge from the army. He told Cheryl he had to travel to Texas to the army. He told Cheryl he had to travel to Texas to practise there. Cunning Wilmer travelled via Atlanta, where he picked up Sue's trunk. While he was in Atlanta, Sue's body was discovered, caught in some bushes at the edge of the James River.

It was a month and a half after the murder and the body was badly decomposed. However, the woman who had rented the lurnished room to Dr. Hadley, who had resided the luminour from to Dr. Haldley, identified some of the clothing found on the body as belonging to Mrs. Haldley. Suck sister was called in. She identified her sister's ring. The hunt for the missing husband had just slater was a possible murder vicanounced that Sue Haldley was a possible murder vicanounced that Sue Haldley was a possible murder vicanounced that the Haldley was a possible was a pos

um. Wilmer felt the heat. He stayed one step ahead of the law for two years before being tracked down by Pinkerton detectives in Aug. 1921. He was bedded down with two young Mexican girls in San Juan County, New Mexico when he was taken into custody. Brought back to Richmond, Wilmer confessed to kill.

Brought back to Richmond, willier contessed to Ril-ing Sue. He added the little white lie that she was having an affair with one of his friends. His story didn't hold much water. At the time the friend was accused of having the affair, he was serving overseas in France with the armed forces.

Wilmer was tried and found guilty of his wife's mur-der. On Oct. 27, 1921, Dr. Wilmer Hadley was executed in the electric chair in Richmond, Va

CELEBRATING THE AUTO

- NOVEMBER 23 -

General Motors celebrated today, in 1954, rolling its 50 millionth car off the assembly line at Flint. Michigan. This was 54 years after The New York Times had predicted automobiles would solve parking problems since they occupied less curb space than horses and buggies.

Now the only way to find parking room in some cities is to buy a parked car. Getting 50 miles to the gallon, it an oldtimer recall when operating an auto cost more than let-ting it sit. On long trips my wagon has to stop at service stations DATES 'N DARTS fewer than I do.

BY FRED WEBSTER

In 1899 two Americans died in motoring ac-cidents. Seventy years later the annual toll was 60,000. Already, about 30 million people have been killed worldwide, and by A.D. 2,000, more will have died on roads than in both world wars - a figure estimated at 45 to 50 million.

Automobiles may have become a big hit in North America, but they're aimed pretty well elsewhere, too. In fact, it makes some drivers downright angry when they miss you.

The modern chariot is a truly dependable machine that can get you just about anywhere. No matter which may you go, it can get you. Current production figures are astounding. If all the cars on roads today were laid end to end ... someone would pull out and pass. Fortunately reckless drivers are seldom wreckless for long. And they place such a constant demand on Detroit, assembly lines have become automated.

Robots assemble cars in a matter of seconds. The process is called mess production. There are machines, too, which can take cars apart in seconds. They're called trucks and trains.

The automobile is in trouble, however. Engineers want to eliminate the steering column, ecologists want to eliminate the motor, and Planned Parenthood wants to eliminate the back seat. People cause accidents, but some accidents cause people

Nothing ever changes much. That happened with horses and buggies, too.

TOYOTA 4RUNNER IS A WINNER

By Glen Konorowski

Toyota is known around the world for four-wheeldrive vehicles such as its legendary Land Cruiser. This jeep-like vehicle is world-famous for durability and rugged con-

With this kind of ex-perience behind it, Toyota was the first of the auto makers to venture into four-wheel-drive small trucks. This move proved to be extremely popular and profitable for Toyota.

As times changed, so did the demand for smaller and roomier sport utility vehicles. So Toyota in-troduced the 4Runner a couple of years ago.

Its success has proven that people enjoy the ver-satility, comfort, and security only four-wheeldrive can give them.

The vehicle I was given was the SR5 4Runner, the top-of-the-line model in this two-model lineup. It was equipped with all the options that make driving a truck not like driving a truck, if you know what I

Each 4Runner is basically made up of two body sec

The main body is shaped similar to that of a pickup, except there is no wall behind the cab. The roof and window section covering the box section is made of fibreglass.

This removable section is then connected to the body by means of bolts and screws, making a fine waterproof seal. The fit was so good here that not a squeak could be heard. All seams were straight and

Being a four-wheel-drive, the body tends to sit a little higher. This results in a little more difficulty entering and exiting at first but, with little practice, it becomes second nature.

Once inside the 4Runner, the driver is confronted with a well-laid out dash that is easy and large enough to read at a glance. Control sticks are behind that steering wheel for easy access by the driver's fingers. Heating and cooling controls run from the centre of the dash down into the console area. The sound system is also located here, with easy-touse controls.

My test car was equipped with the optional sport seats. These were com-parable with any good seat on the market. They gave the driver and his passenger plenty of support in all the right body areas, thus reducing the fatigue experienced on long

Rear seating is more than generous for two adults. A split rear seat also adds to the cargo space and versatility of every 4Runner by allowing different loading combina-

By virtue of the 4Run-ner's shape, 44.5 cu.ft. of whatever can be loaded behind the rear seats.

With rear seats down, 81 cu.ft. of space becomes available to the frontseat passengers. Carpet and tie-down straps make this area a little more practical

The vehicle I was given was equipped with Toyota's optional overhead cam V6, new for 1988. This fuel-injected three-liter engine generates 145 hp; the four-cylinder produces 116.

This smooth and quiet engine gives ample power around town and on the highway. The V6 per-forms equally well off-road, with a healthy 180 ft.lbs. of torque for the toughest of conditions where power can save the day.

Putting this stump speed manual transmission. A four-speed automatic is also available. An easy-to-operate two-speed transfer case did the shifting into low or high

With a crisp, light shift and an easy-to-use transfer case shifter, getting the 4Runner anywhere is relatively easy.

Carrying everthing is a conventional but sturdy box frame-constructed chassis. This frame combined with the 4Runner's V6 engine will tow up to 3,500 lbs. — tops in this Front suspension on the 4Runner is a well-designed pulling power to all four independent unit. Here wheels is a standard five- Toyota incorporates a dou-Toyota incorporates a double wishbone system with upper torsion bars, heavyity shocks, and sway bar.

Rear suspension is basically conventional with live rear-axle leaf springs and staggered shocks. All this results in a firm but comfortable ride, making travelling with the 4Runner very accommadating. Off-roaders will ap-preciate its fairly tight turning radius. Toyota ac-complishes this with simple recirculating (olderstyle) ball steering.

For braking, the manufacturer disc/drum combination Load-sensing brake pro-portioning and bypass valve are added for extra control during hard and heavy braking

Good sales for the 4Runner have proven that this sport utility vehicle works well under all conditions. Tovota's experience has paid off with another winner again. It was one fine truck to drive and did everything with class.

If you choose to analyse my chandwriting, please tell me what you isee in terms of relationships, thinking patterns, motivation and work habits (and anything ilsi of note)

Dear L.J.K. (Trenton):

Here are my answers to your specific questions:

A. Relationships

You are a talented person able to converse on many different topics. Your thoughts run fluently and you have an excellent choice of words. You also have a special feeling for music and you dress well.
All this accounts for much in relationships. You feel with people but you have blocked expressing these feelings because you do not share yourself. I think this could improve when you have settled into your field of specialization.

B. Thinking Mentally you are observant and you usually digest new information slowly but thoroughly. It would be good practice to write down your thoughts and then choose what is important and what can be discarded. You have a tendency to clutter your mind with too many aspects of the same thing. You are alert and could be a fast thinker. Work on it. C Motivation

You seek stimulation from outside yourself, which does not give the desired result. You must make up your mind what you want. I would suggest you talk to yourself and draw up a plan, and set a definite goal and timetable to reach that objective. Don't deviate from it. You are much stronger than you give yourself credit for. D. Workhabits

The same as in 'C'. Work at it regularly. Allow yourself breaks to do what you enjoy. also surround yourself with nice things, good books and music. You need them. Good luck

Dear I.N. (Carrying Place)

You are a loving and caring person, who needs to

You are a norm and camp person, who necessore be busy among people. Through your activities of helping others you find your emotional balance.
You are a natural student, always ready to take on a new challenge. Your writing shows leadership capabilities and you feel responsible for what you take on. You never feel discouraged for long; you bounce back quickly. Your enthusiasm and impulsiveness is kept in their rightful place by a cautious approach to life. Sometimes you may drive yourself too much.

I.N., there are some anxieties involving your past still unresolved. It shows in your behaviour towards close relatives and friends. You cannot be candid about yourself and you are afraid of any interference in private and personal thoughts. You choose to ignore what others think about you and go your own way. This could also cause friction among co-workers. Yet I believe that your enterprising nature is an inspiration to many who have the pleasure of knowing you. Keep it up, Oma.

Dear N.E. (Trenton):

Change is the natural condition for all of us. Life is not static and therefore throughout one's life one must make adjustments. This is essential to growth and development.

and development.

At the present you are capable of holding a job and doing well. You did not write me in which area you are looking for another position, but, whatever it is, it involves change. Your writing tells me that you are upset by the unknown future. This is something you have to face alone.

Some thoughts which might help you: you work well alone; you work well in a routine job; you cannot handle pressure on the job; you cannot be rushed; you need people who understand you and you need to trust your co-workers. I hope this helps you

REMATA'S RECOPES

I love fish and am always trying out new ways to serve it. It is also quick to make and very good for you. A recent discovery is Fish Pin-wheels with Dill-Cheesesauce. Served with steamed snowpeas and new potatoes in their jackets this makes a wonderful dinner.

Fish Pinwheels with Dill-Cheese Sauce

1/2 lb skinless sole fillets or any other lean white fish fillets white pepper juice of 1/2 lemon

Rinse fillets, pat dry. Season with salt and pepper and sprinkle with lemon juice. Cut fillets into 20 strips 5-6 inches long and 1-1/2 inches wide. Roll every strip into pinwheels and fasten with wooden toothpicks. Oil a baking dish and arrange pinwheels in a single layer. Set aside. Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

In top of double boiler beat egg yolk and milk together until well blended. Place over simmering water and stir constantly until mixture thickens

4 oz. of shredded mild cheddar

1-2 teasp. finely chopped dill

Add to sauce and continue cooking until all cheese is melted. Cover and set aside.

Bake fish 5-8 minutes until it tests done. Drain on paper towel. Keep fish juices Brain on paper tower. Neep itsi juices. Remove toothpicks and arrange 5 pinwheels on each of 4 heated plates. Reheat sauce if necessary, stir in 4 tablespoons of the fish juices, and pour sauce over pinwheels. Garnish with dill sprigs, parsley or watercress.

Enjoy!

NIGHT SHIFT: (1982), 106 minutes Director: Ron Howard Starring: Henry Winkler (Chuck Lumley), Shelley Long (Belinda), Michael Keaton (Billy Blaze)

Chuck (Winkler) is a financial genius who is working in the morgue because it is an undemanding job and he needs the time to try to sort out his life. He has a domineering, demanding mother and a fiance who is obsessed with losing weight. His problems increase when he is moved to the night-shift and saddled with a partner (Keaton), a pushy, non-stop talker, who takes pride in being "an idea man".

saddied with a partner inceation, a pissity, indirested ratalier, who takes pride in being "an idea man bi onde Belinda (Llong) goes to the morgue to identify the body. She vaguely recognizes Chuck and later remembers that he also lives in her apartment building.

The murder victim, it turns out, was Belinda's pimp. Without his protection, the girls he was controlling are being harassed and beaten up by other pimps. Chuck's partner, Billy gets the bright idea that the two of them should take advantage of the situation and set up their own call-girl operation, using the deserted morgue as their base.

Although the story doesn't sound very funny,

Although the story doesn't sound very funny, this movie is an amusing comedy. It has few serious moments and manages to sustain a light-hearted approach to situations and occupations that are normally either morbid or sordid.

There is a solid TV influence in this film. Its stars graduated from Happy Days (Winkler) and Cheers (Long). It was directed by Ron Howard, who was also in Happy Days as well as The Andy Griffith Share

The sound-track features music by Rod Stewart, Van Halen, The Rolling Stones etc.

For a number of obvious reasons, this movie is unsuitable for children.

Glanmore House celebrates traditional Christmas

Even the Victorian era character of Ebenezer Scrooge would feel the Christmas spirit after visiting the Hastings County Museum this year ghosts or not. The annual tradition of a Victorian Christmas at Glanmore House has begun once again.

Well over 100 members of the public participated in three consecutive workshops this weekend in making ornaments for the display of 3 trees, 20 wreaths and putting together the countless boughs which adorn the restored Victorian home said museum curator Jennifer Gillmore.

Not only does the house have a festive look to it, it has the distinctive festive smell of cedar boughs and fruits which make up the annual display.

This is the first Christmas Gillmore has spent as curator at the museum and she's 'exabout the events which have been planned for the festive Sundays planned for December.

Free trade could kill recording industry

By David Botting

People in the Canadian recording industry are afraid the industry will "totally collapse because of free trade, says Michael McLeod, who is opening his own recording studio in Nor-

"No one's building studios," he said. "They want to see what's happening with free trade.'

Michael is a 1986 recording industry when he graduate of the Trebas In-graduate of the Trebas Institute of Recording Arts with a diploma in record downtown Toronto where producing. He found it most of the country's big hard to get a job in the recording studios are located, and partly because of fear of free trade in the industry.

'No one knows what's going to happen with any studio." he said.

The problem is simple: population and economics. The U.S. has a large population ten times the size of Canada's, and costs of recording and pressing a record are high.

The average album costs about $200,000 to record, which is paid for by the artist or group. They have to sell 100,000 copies just to pay the cost of recording and in Canada, that's considered a platinum record. That's one reason why there are no major Canadian record labels, he said. Most of the major labels Canada are from the U.S. They maintain large manufacturing facilities here because of tariffs on records produced and ported into Canada.

If tariffs are removed, those branch plants will leave, people in the in-dustry fear. And if the branch plants leave, so will the artists and repetoire departments, which search out and sign up new talent.

"There will still be Canadian artists, but they'll all be in California or New York," Michael said. Story, Photo Page 12

Who is Santa Closet?

Have you ever noticed how little kids don't have a clue? We think they know what's going on and they even play along with these crazy adults, but they're really just faking it.

A case in point

Every kid knows about Santa Claus, right? Every kid knows about Christmas and how this fat red man comes down the chimney and puts gifts in everyone's stockings and so forth and so on. Of course, we don't have stockings anymore, but you know what I mean. And most of us don't have chimneys anymore, but, well, everyone knows that Santa comes down the chimney anyway, even if there is no chimney, and puts gifts in the stockings even if there are no stockings.

So, every kid knows about Santa Claus, even the two and a half year old who is busy making Christmas tree or-naments out of dough and helping Quinte Weekly News get ready for its 'Remember Christmas' edition this week.

But if she knows who Santa is, how come she always refers to him as Santa Closet?

No, kids don't have a clue. They humour us adults along, but they really are kind of yawning behind their hands and saying, gosh, when will these adults quit talking about this Santa Clause, Santa Closet, Santa Close or whatever and get down to handing out the presents.

CAMPAIGN COMMENTS

The NDP campaigned against free trade, arguing that Canada would be swallowed up by the U.S. Overheard at the campaign headquarters of the NDP as the party went down to defeat on election night: "Well, at least in the next election we'll get a chance to defeat George Bush." Speaking of U.S. vice president elect George Bush, he was quoted after a particularly vicious campaign as say-

"I want a gentler and kinder nation.

Yeh. He meant Canada," responded a voter here.

ALIEN CLAMS

Alien clams are invading the Great Lakes! Sounds like a sci fi horror movie or a headline in the National Enquirer, doesn't it.

Apparently, a tiny, striped mollusc called the zebra clam is reproducing at a rate that would put it in the category of rabbits rather than clams. Hundreds of thousands of the clams have been found clinging to the hulls of fishing boats and docks on the shore of Lake Erie and now they are starting to clog up drawing pipes on water treatment plants and power generating stations.

Seems we can blame those darn Russkies — the clams come from the Caspian Sea in the Soviet Union but have adapted to fresh water. Fish biologists believe the comnist clams stowed away in the ballast of a European freighter, which would make it the first time communist clams have been known to defect.

NAME CHANGE

The world's longest place name is no more. A Welsh village with a name that sounds like a stutter has decided to shorten its name by 38 letters to a mere 20.

Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantisi liogogogoch, meaning "Mary's Church in the hollow of the white hazel near to the rapid whirlpool of St. Tysillios' Church by the red cave", has been shortened to Llanfair Pwllgwyngyll

As a founding member of the Welsh Anti-Vowel Society, I feel I must offer the most profound objection possible. True, some vowels have been deleted. In fact, many vowels have been deleted — a goal of the society. But a lot of perfectly good consonants were also sacrificed. Where ise have you ever run into four 'l's in a row?

No, on balance, we want those consonants back, even if it means returning a few of the vowels too.

Unfinished business

The federal and municipal elections have come and gone, the shouting and the fuss is over, but we have a few final comments to make before closing the history books on them forever.

George Zegouras won re-election handily in Belleville over his two opponents, but it wasn't an overwhelming vote of confidence. One of his opponents was a Japanese immigrant who spoke with an accent that was hard to understand and had to stand on a chair at some candidates meetings. He had no previous political experience, aside from losing an election for alderman last time, but still polled 36 per cent. His other opponent was a country western singer with no political experience and no funds for a campaign. He polled almost ten per cent. Together, they polled almost 46 per cent of the vote.

The victories by Liberal Lyle Vanclief here and Liberal Christine Stewart in Northumberland depending on a recount) confirmed a theory of ours that the political makeup of these traditionally Tory ridings has been shifting. The shifts haven't been noticed, however, because of longtime Tory incumbents. Hugh O'Neil has held the provincial quinte riding through several elections, Keith MacDonald won the Prince Edward Lennox riding, a Tory stronghold, for the Liberals in the last provincial election, and now Liberals bucked a national Conservative trend to win locally in the federal election. Liberals may not continue to win these ridings, but they can no longer be regarded as safe Tory seats. The times, they are a 'changing.

• John Herring of the Christian Heritage Party made a strong, credible showing in his party's first run for office. The 2,000 votes he polled wouldn't have won the race for Tory Jack Arthur, but they changed what should have been a toss up into an easy win for Liberal Lyle Vanclief. Rev. Herring earned private praise from other candidates for his well-prepared and thoughtful performance and good organization.

• The federal election proved once again that a party has to win both Ontario and Quebec to win the nation. Until the NDP becomes a credible party in Quebec, it will never form a government. Meanwhile, the Tories appear to have broken the Liberal domination of the province. Probably no party will ever dominate Quebec again the way the Liberals have since the death of Sir John A. Macdonald. We believe Quebec and local ridings have joined the rest of Canada, where party loyalty has become more fluid and is no longer inherited at birth.

Catching a man

Hunting season is upon us once again, so, a little humor to the sport. Making man the animal and females the hunters.

Man (the animal) is a ferocious beast. Some are docile; these creatures can be domesticated, taught tricks, even become house pets.

These creatures come in a variety of sizes and shapes.

Places to hunt for these are in duck dens such as dens of iniquity, pool rooms, back rooms gambling, perched on bar stools, some even on the dance floor — yes, they can be quite graceful

They posses large appetites and thirst (Beer usually satisfies this). They love TV, watching their mates wrestling, playing ball and hockey, they usually let out loud roars during these times.

Other places you might stalk these are car lots and golf courses. When approaching them,

When approaching them, be friendly but cautious, as not all are trustworthy. When you capture one, when you capture one, make sure you have a comfortable lazyboy and love and feed them well. These conditions generally pacify them loose. Give them lots of leeway and they'll return home.

Don't put chains on them, they'll only break

Some are good with kids, others not, they generally leave the rearing of the young to the female. If treated well, they can be monogamus.

Once home, keep from female species. They tend to stray. I owned one for 26 years, but he got away, but I'm still combing my sites for an older, more domesticated one. Experience probably taught him how to please his mistress.

No one answered emergency calls

The Editor:

Wednesday, Nov. 16, Belleville had an electrical blackout along Dundas Street West for a couple of hours. It was raining heavily at the time.

This area in the past on three or four occasions has had sewer backup when rains cause a sewer overload that our disintegrating sewer pipes cannot handle and the Ministry of Environment pumping station electrical system cannot function properly if at all.

Several people called for help to the public utilities and were referred to public works, who referred them to a Ministry of Environment 800 number, which was an answering machine service in Toronto.

This is not satisfactory. If we have an emergency after working hours, we citizens should be able to contact someone locally and instantly provide assistance in a critical situation.

A review of the ministry's emergency call system is urgently requested so that we won't have a repeat of this "pass the buck" message service. Some of us can no longer get insurance to cover losses caused by city sewer backing up into our basements, and the city has never compensated for our considerable losses. This emphasizes why local handling and servicing of emergency calls is vital.

R. Bonisteel Dundas St. W. Belleville

Put the filth where it belongs

Dear Sir,
I am writing this in regard to the letter published in the Oct. 11th issue of QWN.

I am disappointed and disgusted that such a movie as "The Last Temptation of Christ" could even be produced. I didn't watch it, nor do I plan on doing so. It is not a question of my faith in Christ, weak or strong. The ques-tion is: 'Can I sit and watch this movie knowing that it is portraying a lie about Christ? Will my conscience let me do it?"

Christians are being ridiculed because of their faith, and we are going to keep on believing in Christ in spite of all the mockery!

The only excuse for some people to use today, whether they know it or not, is their ignorance of the truth. They think they can take a verse out of the Bible and twist it around so it will read how they want it to, instead of reading and believing it for what it really is. You degrade Christ and then try to use Him as an excuse for your own immoral behavior.

The Holy Word of God did not 'come about by the prophets own interpretation." For prophecy never had its origin in the will of man, but men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit. The Bible was inspired by God, not man. Jesus was the one who warned us about temptation. He said not to give in to it. Jesus was tempted and He said 'No!" Jesus told us 'not to get drunk on wine", so does that mean then that He had to visualise the concept in His mind in order to warn people about it? Jesus knew what it was like to be tempted. He witnessed it. He told us not to give in, to see if we had enough faith in to sin. We are responsible for the choices we make.

Have you ever realized how much Jesus suffered for you? He was spat upon, mocked, beaten, forced to wear a crown of thorns, hang on a cross for hours with no mercy shown towards Him at all. While enduring all that pain and agony, do you think for one moment that His last thoughts are going to be of Jesus came to this earth to fulfill a purpose. While on this earth he had to live His life as an example to others. That example was and had to be flawless. It was sinless. True, He might not have wanted to do it, but He did. No ifs, ands, or buts. After His task was accomplished did anyone ever hear Him say that He regretted it?

I would suggest that you stop polluting your minds with the filth this movie portrays, and certainly stop other people polluting it for you!

Put the garbage where it belongs - in the dump! Joy Peterson

Despite the gossip, this second marriage endured until 1979 when, would von believe it, Freda began to complain of severe pains which racked her entire body. She called on her doctor, the very same doctor who had been unable to ascertain the cause of the former Mrs. Wilson's death so many years

The doctor was well aware of the earlier police suspicions. He realized that Freda had been ostracized by the few neighbors she had out by the farm. In fact, Freda had only one close friend, an independent type, Jessica Lacey, who owned a grocery store near the Wilson farm.

Events unfolded like a Xerox copy of Norah's death. Jimmy was in Wellington on business. Freda's friend Jessica called the doctor, but he arrived too late. Freda was dead and the doctor had no idea what had caused the 35-year-old woman to die. He refused to sign the death certificate and ordered an autopsy.

The was due to arsenic poisoning. The deadly may be more importantly, in the victim's hair, indicating that she had been poisoned over a prolonged period of time.

There was no talk of an accident this time. When detectives discovered that Jimmy had a brand new mistress, he was arrested and charged with his wife's murder.

The accused man vehemently denied any

Detectives pushed details aside. They were sure this guy had killed two wives. He was not going to get away with double murder. Jimmy was questioned until he finally broke. He confessed that he had murdered his first wife. Norah, by putting strychnine in a lemonade bottle. He was well aware of her habit of drinking lemonade each day. She kept the bottles in a row on a shelf and drank them in succession when she watched her TV program every afternoon.

In this way, Jimmy knew the day and the moment each bottle would be consumed. He made sure to be in Wellington when she consumed the poisoned lemonade

Freda had known of his plan and had advised against it because she thought he would be caught She truly loved Jimmy and wanted to be his wife. Ignoring Freda's misgivings, Jimmy carried out Norah's murder to perfection. There was one thing he wanted made clear. He had not killed his second wife, Freda.

Since such a lengthy period of time had elapsed since Norah's death, it was decided to try Jimmy for Freda's murder. At Jimmy's trial, prosecution attences put forth the theory that the motive for Freda's murder was her guilty knowledge of Norah's death. She had also learned of her husbands current mistress. When he asked her for husbands current mistress. When he asked her for husbands with the state of the st

A broken man, his hair gray, his face haggard, Jimmy Wilson stood before his peers on April 24, 1890 and heard himself being sentenced to life imprisonment. When the verdict was announced, Jimmy fell to the floor with a heart attack. He recovered and was transferred to a prison hospital Less than a month later he suffered a second heart attack and died. Before expiring, he swore to those present that he had not murdered his second wife. A few days after Jimmy's death, Jessica Lacey walked into a police station. Jessica disagreed, advising her that no man was stupid enough to kill two wives in the same manner. Freda didn't care. Above all, she wanted to prevent another woman from getting J.m.ny.

Freda went on to tell Jessica that she knew arsenic remained in the body and was traceable by autopsy. Propagation is what indoor light gardening is all Propagation is what enture is growing from seed about. If your first venture is growing from seed your second should be growing from plant parts, growing new plants from old plants. And the process is almost as easy as growing from seed.

ARDENING ND GROWING

By Ross Hawthorne

In fact, even if you are an experienced indoor light gardener, you can have greater success growing new plants from old plants then the experienced. new plants from oid plants then the experienced, professional greenhouse grower — and for one reason. In the indoor light garden, the conditions for propagation are near perfect. The light source is constant, temperature and humidity conditions are easily controllable and there need be no concern about disease or insect invasion.

As long as you have a source for plant cuttings, you can propagate a superior plant, and under lights, your results will be faster than in a greenhouse.

If you are taking cuttings from a plant grown under natural light, such as a window, the cutting is best taken in spring when the plant is putting on new growth. But under lights, the cutting can be taken anytime because there is always new growth.

The easiest way to propagate a new plant from an old plant is from a stem cutting. Take a look at your house plant collection and if you have a branching plant such as a jade, hibiscus, an ivy or a geranium, you can take a stem cutting.

Select a shoot three to four inches long and make a clean cut just below a bottom leaf. Then remove all leaves except two or three at the top. These are needed to develop the energy, through photosyn-theses, for the generation of roots.

Fill a container, any container as long as it has drainage, with medium-grade vermiculite or a soiless mix. Both can be obtained in a plant store or nursery. Add about one cup of tepid water for every compared to the contained of the contai those points on the cutting where the bottom leaves have been removed, with a hormone rooting gel. It provides a thin, even coating and also contains a fungicide and prevents the number one problem of plant cuttings, then rot. Insert about one third of the cutting in the rooting medium.

To ensure maximum success, you can convert the container into a closed propagation box. This is done by simply inserting in the container, four upright supports about eight inches long. Thin bamboo stakes cut into eight-inch lengths are ideal. Over these stakes, pull a clear plastic bag such as a sandwich bag and side it down over the sides of the container. Fasten with an algatic hand or masking. container. Fasten with an elastic band or masking tape. Then, set the cutting under lights so the plastic is about six inches from the tubes.

After about a week or so, check your cuttings' progress by carefully removing one cutting from the rooting medium. At that point, fine root about the showing. Replace the cutting and check again in two three weeks by gently tugging. If the cutting resists, that means the cutting is rooting and in another two or three weeks should be ready for potting up. ready for potting up.

sound has made possible small studios such as Toruil Recording Studio, which Michael McLeod has set up in his parents' 150-year-old Northport home. With the use of digitally sampled sounds, he can create the effect of a full rock band for a solo artist and all on a single keyboard sampler and computer music system.

His set up is "ideal for people who write their own songs or do their own music but don't have the money to put together a demo tape or a band for a

Sampling refers to digital recordings of sounds — samples — that can, through the miracle of the microchip, be reproducand manipulated through keyboards and computers to produce any sound imaginable.

With his computer, he can manipulate the sounds he creates. He can "edit" the music right on the computer, even by sight, based

The miracle of digital on visual graphics of the sound waves

> According to Michael, the new technology is putting musicians out of work. Orchestra members who once found work in recording studios are now being replaced by a single sample of the sounds of their in-

Michael graduated with a degree in record produc-tion from the Trebas Institute of Recording Arts in 1986. Although he could have probably landed a job in the recording industry, he chose instead to work for the Quinte Summer Music Festival for a year in charge of promotion and public relations.

His own interest is in composing music, which is why he assembled his recording equipment in the first place. The idea of making it available to other musicians came later, because he already had the equipment and because it keeps him from getting "rusty" in producing recor-tracks for films and videos, but the field is tough to crack headmits.

"It's fairly sewn up," he "Several people have been doing for a long time (in Canada). That's the hard part - getting so-meone to trust someone new with their project for the first time."
Michael also knows what it's like to be a musician in a band. He was a member of Brigand, a band that featured Celtic sounds and toured the country for three years.

Brigand's Celtic roots reflects Michael's own interest in Celtic music. So, too, does the name of his recording studio - Torquil, after the original ancestor of his branch of the McLeod family.

Brigand broke up in 1983, although they rejoined briefly to play during the province's bicentennial in 1984. Michael still plays, however, with Glenora, a group that has been gaining a local reputation for its music.

The managers of two major regional industries sounded warnings for North American industry in separate speeches to the United Way and to the Belleville and District Chamber of Commerce.

"Massive changes are in the wind." predicted Kenneth Kleckner, manager of the new Goodyear tire plant being built near Napanee, in a speech at a recent fundraiser for the United Way.

"We don't need to be afraid of it," he said, but warned that the consequences of failure will not only affect industry, but suppliers, employees, stockholders and customers

Similarly, Brian Shields, the manager of the Belleville Procter and Gamble plant, told members of the chamber of commerce a week earler that quality in North American industry is "an issue of survival."

He quoted a presentation made to the Ford Motor Company in the early eighties in which Ford executives were told they were out of synch with the rest of the world. "The whole country is totally uncompetitive. We're done. The Japs can just pick us off one at a time anytime they want," the quality expert told them in a video shown by Mr. Shields.

CONSUMERS LOVE CARAVAN'S VERSATILITY

By Glen Konorowski

When Chrysler introduced the mini-van back in 1984 they hardly thought they would create a vehicle that would change the way peo ple travel.

These efficient but smaller vans make sense. They carry as many people as a full-size wagon, with the comfort that only a van can give.

The one feature that sets the Chrysler vans apart from the rest of the other mini-vans is front-wheel drive. (With our winters, front-wheel drive is the way to travel).

The van I was given to test from the people at Kingvar Motors was the Dodge Caravan. What really makes this particular mini-van a little different is that it's turbo-charged.

The reason for the move to turbo was that the demand for Chrysler's V6 had exceeded the production figures they had anticipated.

My first thought was that this 2.5-litre turbo-charged four -cylinder could never do as good a job as the 3.3-litre V6. Boy, was I wrong.

The turbo-four has more horsepower, more torque and is actually faster from 0-60 than the V6.

The Caravan-as may know-comes in two lengths: a short and a long body. The extended Caravan is 14.6 inches longer than the regular

My test van was the SE version of the Caravan. equipped with seating for My black test van was equipped with a very handsome grey cloth interior. Here I found the quality sesqueak or a rattle to be found anywhere, even on rougher country roads.

With all the seats in, cargo room is a little tight; but with the rear seat out there isn't a car that could touch this van for cargo Engine choices on all vans come in the form of a regular four-cylinder, the turbo four-cylinder I mentioned earlier, and, of course, the V6. All engines have had a boost in power this year and that is especially true for the V6. There, Chrysler raised the horsepower from 136 last year to 141 this year.

turbo-charged fuel-injected four-cylinder is a higher: 150 hp is produced by this engine. The only disadvantage of the turbofour is that it is not recommended for towing heavy

For those of us who like to shift gears, the fivespeed manual is standard with both the regular four and the turbo version of the four. On the V6, a three-speed automatic is your only choice.

My test van was equip ped with the optional three-speed automatic. This fine-shifting unit worked well, giving the van ample amounts of speed when needed.

On the extended-length vans Chrysler's new fourspeed automatic is now available.

This year a trailer-towing option will increase towing capacity to 4,000 lbs. from the standard 2,750-lbs. capacity of

One thing that always made the larger vans more cumbersome to drive was the steering. All Caravans come with power-assisted rack-and-pinion, which makes getting around town very easy.

Stopping is also quick and precise, with disc brakes up front and drum brakes in the rear.

The Caravan, in my eyes, is a fine alternative to the full-size wagon. I found the van easier for loading people and cargo, plus it carries a bigger load. As the demand for the Chrysler mini-vans increases, it's not hard to see why so many people are just so in love with the versatility of this vehicle

STAINED GLASS ARTIST COMMEMORATES FRENCH EXPLORER

The work of a local stained glass artist has been presented as a gift to the government of France in commemoration of the 375th anniversary of the French explorer's first en-try into what is known today as Ontario

The nine-foot stained glass window, made by Milford artist Stephen Taylor, will be installed at L'Eglise Saint-Pierre, the church in Brouage, France. Champlain's birthplace.

The six-part window features images of native life such as canoes, Indian corne and the deer hunt as well as the astrolabe and sun face that Champlain in cluded in all of his maps

THE NEW MOTOR VEHICLE REPAIR ACT

Ontario car owners will be better protected through the new Motor Vehicle Repair Act.

Included in the new act are the following provisions:

· Repairers must provide a written estimate on request;

· Customers must be advised, in advance, if there is a fee for an estimate and the amount of the fee:

 The actual repair cost cannot exceed 10 per cent of the written estimate without authorization; • The repairer must offer return of removed parts to the consumer when the work is authorized;

· A warranty must be provided on new or reconditioned parts and associated labour for a minimum of 90 days or 5,000 kilometres. For motorcycles and motor-assisted bicycles, the warranty period is 30 days or 1,500 kilometres.

· Conspicuous signs must be posted stating repair rates and the methods used to calculate the charges.

· A detailed invoice must be provided to the customer describing the vehicle, work performed, parts installed and their price, number of hours billed, and terms of the warranty

If the vehicle becomes inoperable or unsafe due to defective repairs while under warranty, the customer must return the vehicle to the original repairer unless it is unreasonable to do so. If it is necessary to have the vehicle repaired by another repairer, the consumer may recover the original cost of the work and reasonable towing charges from the original

All car repairers must display a sign directing consumer com plaints to the nearest regional office of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

This is a war movie that deals with a different aspect of war: the interaction between foreign troops (the Americans) and their civilian hosts (the British). It takes place in 1942 when the first of about one million American soldiers began to ar-

The main story involves Matt (Gere), a U.S. mess sergeant, and Jean (Eichorn), an English girl. The secondary story concerns Vanessa Redgrave, an aristocratic Englishwoman, and William Devane, a U.S. army captain.

This is a long, involved film, covering more than complicated romantic relationships. It digs, quite penetratingly, into the problems that arise when two cultures try to co-exist, and it illustrates graphically how basic, universal and violent racial prejudice can be.

It captures the mood of a wartime society and how ordinary, decent people try to cope with physical and emotional upheaval. It should appeal, particularly, to anyone familiar with England, to ex-soldiers and to people who experienced the war.

The acting, photography and the dialogue are all above average and scenes of the Yorkshire and Lancashire countryshide provide a beautiful background.

The director, John Schlesinger, has a number of other well-known movies to his credit. They include, Midnight Cowboy, Day of the Locust, Marathon Man and Separate Tables.

Some of the language is a bit rough for children, but it is not a film which would hold their interest anyway.

PRINCE EDWARD CHAMBER ELECTS NEW PRESIDENT

The Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce has elected Michael Stiff as president to replace the void left by the resignation of Steve Campbell.

The new president praised his predecessors for the progress the chamber has made in the last three

"When past president Nancy Harrison took over, membership had dropped to under 80 and there as a definite lack of direction,' Mr. Stiff said. She and her executive set an immediate goal of increasing the membership, an emphasis that was continued under membership is nearing 150.

Mr. Stiff says the chamber has a long list of new projects. During the municipal election, it surveyed candidates to assist voters in making a seleciton. As well, the chamber has taken an interest in waste manage-ment and recycling, in-cluding endorsement of the recent Women's Institute seminar on recycling, and a future county-wide "spring cleaning", possibly with the co-operation of the Prince Edward board of education

REMATA'S RECOPES

Christmas Customs have travelled the world

Each family has their own traditions they follow during the Christmas season, whether they centre on family gatherings at home or at church. One thing that remains common, however, is that many traditions have been adapted from the ones commonly followed throughout North American society.

But what about the rest of the world?

The custom of the Christmas tree The custom of the Christians trees stems from pre-Christian times in Germany where the tree sybolized the Garden of Eden. A theory on how the custom expanded from continental Europe to England is that Prince Albert brought it after his marriage to Queen Victoria in 1840. A picture in an 1848 edition of the Illustarted London News of such a tree and his family spread the custom throughout the entire country.

Happy Christmas

One of the earliest known American pictures of Santa Claus was done by artist Thomas Nash for Harper's Weekly in 1863.

NORTH AMERICANS ADOPTED SANTA

Claus his size, his white beard, had him smoking a pipe and wearing a piece of holly in his hat. His costume was made of fur but was adapted by others to a red suit trimmed in white similar to that of England's Father Christmas.

North America eagerly adopted Santa Claus as their own with different aspects being taken from many European traditions now coming to the conti-nent in a wave of immigration.

But it was an editor of the New York

Sun who verified the existance of Santa Claus in a letter he answered from Virginia O'Hanlon in 1897. "Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds ... Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not helieve in Santa Claus? well not believe in fairies ... No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood," he

MAKING A WREATH

A basic, traditional evergreen wreath can be easily made for Christmas. Materials you use will depend on the size of the wreath, the form you decide to use and foliage you wrap around the

Among the items you will need are:

Bare stems flexible enough to bend into a ring, or a foam shape or a double-wire

- Sprigs of foliage Spool of green floral wire
- Wire cutters Ribbon
- Liquid glue
- Decorations of your choice

This list should be used as a guide - it isn't exhaustive

Take several lengths of stems in a bunch and bend them to form a circle, using wire to secure the shape. Position bunches of foliage on the base, wiring it firmly in position. Work your way around the form, overlapping the tips of the foliage to cover the stems of the preceding bunch of foliage. Fluff out the foliage and the work of the preceding bunch of foliage. Fluff out the foliage and add bunches on the inside or outside if necessary to completely cover the frame. Turn the base over and attach a wire or ribbon hanger to the base. Add decorations, using glue or wire to hold them in place.

Dough figures and decorations can be done by children of any age. Kerri Desveaux, 2, slides another figure onto the cookie sheet. For tree ornaments, insert a paper clip at the top before baking. The figures can also be painted.

Basic Salt Dough

2 cups all purpose flour 1 cup salt

1 cup water (or cold tea for a darker dough)

Combine flour and salt in large bowl. Mix well. Add water a little at a time. Knead seven to ten minutes until smooth. Dough should not be sticky, a little more water or flour may be needed. This will keep in a plastic bag for five days in the refrigerator.

For larger forms such as Santas, Mrs. Claus, Clowns, etc., use aluminum foil balls slightly smaller than your desired finished size. Attach together with toothpicks.

Cover with dough, then using smaller pieces of dough to make your characteristics, arms, feet, facial features, hat, hair, etc. Bake at 300 degrees F. for 11/2 to 2 hours. Paint as desires and spray with Acrylic Sealer.

For smaller items such as tree or table decora-

The second annual Adopt-a-Child program is getting underway in Belleville and will also be starting this year in Trenand will also be starting this year in French ton, according to Lance Jeffery, promotions director at CJBQ radio in Belleville.

The program is a joint effort of CJBQ, the Belleville OPP and Belleville police.

The idea is simple. The Salvation Army and the Children's Aid Society have com-piled a list of children who need clothing. The first name of the youngster, age, size and item of clothing required is given to the radio station, which then announces the need over the air. Listeners can phone in to adopt a child. They buy the clothing, wrap it and bring it to the radio station before Dec. 16.

According to Lance, the need is growing. Last year, the Adopt-A-Child program provided new clothes to 118 youngsters. This year, the list has grown to 220, but Lance is entiringistic the goal. to 230, but Lance is optimistic the goal

'We've had a tremendous response, he said on the morning of the first day.

Already, six to eight children were adopted for presents before 10:30 a.m. In fact, the radio station had been receiving requests for several weeks before the program even started, he said.

The program was so successful last year that other communities are planning similar programs. Lance said he has had a call from Kingston and CJTN in Trenton is starting a program this year with their local police force.

The program was initiated by Wayne Baker of the OPP, who reported on the success of the program to his provincial headquarters with a suggestion that OPP in other areas adopt the program.

THE MOST MAGNIFICENT GIFT OF ALL

and they kept asking and asking.

At last, the final day arrived. The little star-lighting angels arrived on the pink cloud as usual with all their candles lit, ready to practice.

There will be no practice today,' Mother Angel told them, though, after they all had arrived.

'My dear little angels," she said. "You are ready to take part in the greatest event that the world has ever seen. And you will not be alone. The Great Heavenly Choir has also been practicing all this their sheep by night. They twinkled and shone with such brilliance that it frightened the shepherds. They had never because Jesus had been born that day in the city of Bethlehem. Then the Great Heavenly Choir began singing their praises and the still, dark earth came alive with music and light.

Slowly, the little angels floated along, guiding the shepherds to Bethlehem, where they stopped over the stable where Baby Jesus lay sleeping. There they stayed undtil dawn, Mother Angel allowing them to whisper or wiggle about, pro-viding they did not lose their positions in the star. And with each wiggle, the star twinkled a little more brightly. Below

'Why are you crying, my dears, when this should be the happiest moment of your heavenly existence?" she asked.

We are crying because we can't give gifts to Baby Jesus," the little angels Mother Angel understood. Her little angels were too young to know that gifts don't always come in gift-wrapped boxes.

"But my dear little star-lighting angels," she said. "Can't you see? You have already given the most magnificent gift of all — You gave the gift of light!"

A TRADITIONAL CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS STORY By Patience O'Reilly

nce upon a time nearly 2,000 years ago, Great Mother Angel had a very important decision to make. Twas the greatest responsibility she had ever been given in all her heavenly years. The time, the place and the results of her job must be perfect. She would begin immediately.

Great Mother Angel floated gracefully through the heavens, whispering first to one and then to another of her little starlighting angels.

"At dusk," she said, "please meet me on the long pink cloud in the west, for I have something very important for you to take part in.

Then she flew on to the next little angel and the next until she had included all the little star-lighting angels in the heavens and there were thousands and thousands of these little angels.

At dusk, Mother Angel faced her thousands of little angels. They were nestled on the soft pink cloud, anxiously the sky.

"But," she said, "it will take practice to become perfect. Bring your star-lighting candles with you as we will need them. We only have nine months to become perfect, so we will start immediately. You can go on to your other duties of lighting the stars after we have finished

It took six months for Mother Angel to arrange all her little angels in their proper places. At times there was great confu-sion on the pink cloud and the glow of their candles lit up the edges of the cloud in the oddest places, but it didn't really much matter because it pleased the peo-ple on earth, who could see the beautiful bright glow radiating in bursts of ir-regular patches of light from behind the cloud. It also gave earth's meteorologists something to ponder.

Great Mother Angel, knowing how little angels love surprises, didn't tell them what they were practicing for until the final day.

"Please tell us the surprise, dear Mother Angel," cried several angels every day at practice time.

And every day, she would reply, "When the time is right, little angels, I will tell you. Besides, a surprise is not a surprise if you already know.

time. They will be singing "Glory to God in the highest and on earth, peace and good will towards men" while you fly in perfect formation to light the brightest star ever seen.

"You see," she said, "earth is not a peaceful planet. Many of the people on earth are selfish. They fight with one another and ever their countries fight with each other.

"We angels in heaven know that God loves us and we do our best to please Him. But He also loves his earth children. And do you know what He is going to do? He is going to perform His greatest miracle, sending His only son Jesus to be born on earth of the Virgin Mary. The Archangel told me so.

He will teach them about the impor-tance of loving one another, the importance of giving and the importance of forgiving," she said.

And all of you little angels will lead the shepherds and the men who are wise to Jesus by the light of your perfect star," she told them. "This, my dears, is your surprise. This is what you have been your surprise. Inis is what you have been practicing for. Now, take your places quickly and follow me. We will join the other angels taking part in this great event and we'll take off for Bethlehem immediately

The little angels followed Mother Angel, flying in the shape of a perfect star. They floated closer and closer to ear-

ANNUAL DISPLAY COMMEMORATES CITY YOUTH

In 1958, Bill Foster, 19, of Emily Street in Belleville was killed in a car accident on Christmas Eve. From that year on, the Foster family maintained an annual Christmas display in memory of their only son.

Nor did the display die out when the Fosters retired. Marjorie and Bruce Nickle have kept up the display since 1981 as part of Belleville's Christmas tradition.

The display at 45 Marsh Drive has become well known over the years, attracting many carloads of visitors and even bus tours. In fact, in 1983, a city bylaw was passed making Marsh Drive a oneway street every Christmas Eve from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. to help control the long stream of traffic.

As many as 60 or 70 volunteers help maintain the festivities on Christmas «Eve, including a sea cadet alumni band that has made a tradition of playing carols for visitors every Christmas Eve

The display has become known as far away as New Zealand. Last year, some New Zealand residents heard of the display and decided to include it in their visit to relatives in the area.

The Nickles have also been recognized in a Prince Edward Island restaurant by the owner, who had seen them on television ple, you have been decorating Christmas trees for years with a couple of strings of Christmas lights, some candy canes and coloured balls, perhaps with popcorn strings or icicles.

This year, you might consider trying something different — a theme tree.

Think about the things you and your family enjoy. Perhaps it is a hobby such as quilting or gardening, perhaps it is a sport such as hockey. Look around your house for materials. Do you have a collection of antique dolls or toys? Perhaps you collect stuffed animals that would look good around a tree.

Some simple theme ideas follow:

Cartoon Capers: This is a tree for children. Have your children choose their favourite cartoon characters and cut them out of comic books or from the weekend colour comic section and mount them on cardboard. Attack a thread, hang them on the tree, and presto, you have a cartoon Christmas tree.

□ Food Tree: When you think of use food to decorate? Strings of popcorn or cranberries are traditional, as are candy canes and cookie cutouts in a variety of shapes. Try a cookie tree with cookies and the actual cutouts used to make them. Or use fruits and vegetables - colourful red apples are traditional as well.

If real fruit is too heavy, use wax or plastic reproductions - or have your children cut pictures out of women's magazines and mount them on cardboard. An assortment of little candies would also be popular with the little ones.

☐ The Natural Look: Do you live near the seashore or collect shells and driftwood? Use that for a local flavour. Look around at your area and for other uniquely local ideas.

☐ A Toy Tree: Ask your children to help you on this one. Perhaps you might like to arrange a stuffed toy collection around the base of the tree or dangle a collection of miniature figures in the branches. Your imagination and your children's toy collections are the limit.

FVERYONE LOVES EDDY BEARS

Everyone loves a teddy bear. Shirley Hicks has discovered since opening her new store called Teddy Bear Land at her house on Highway 2 between Belleville and Shannon-

"So many adults collect teddy bears I couldn't believe it," she said in an interview about her new

As the name suggests, Shirley has teddy bears. Stuffed teddy bears jostle for space in her jam-packed store with carved teddy bears, teddy bear prints, four-foot tall teddy bears dressed in suits and dresses and teddy bear

Although Shirley stocks teddy bears in all shapes and forms, don't get the idea that she carries only teddy bears. She actually carries much more, in-cluding refurbished used furniture, dolls, doll furniture, wooden toys, quilts and clothing for babies and small children.

The idea for the business came when Shirley was looking for furniture, toys youngest baby, who is now 18 months old

She was looking for good quality used items, said they were hard to find.
And "prices were so ridiculously high," she ad-

She decided to start a business where people could buy good used fur-niture that had been refurbished like new and at reasonable prices. She also decided to carry baby quilts since her mother made them. The business just grew from there, as she added more and more items to her list of handicrafts, jam-packing her store and forcing her to make plans to build.

She stresses locally handicrafted items whenever possible. A 75-year-old local man makes the wooden rocking horses, for example.

She also tries to set reasonable prices. Sweaters cost $20 to $25 compared to $40 in most other stores, handcrafted quilts cost $45 to $49 compared to $80 and up kicks off the month on Dec.4 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Along with the sale of 'tomorrow's heirlooms, demonstrations will be held with hot apple cider and homemade cookies for everyone.

For a traditional Christmas, A Yuletide at Home will follow on Dec. 11 from 2 to 4 p.m. At a cost of $2 for adults and $1 for youths, participants can sample mulled cider, eggnog and other traditional treats.

Gillmore is excited most about a visit from the Vaghy String Quartet from Queen's University on Dec. 18. This is an exclusiva engagement in clusive engagement in Glanmore's Drawing Room from 2 to 3:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door with limited seating. Mulled cider will also be available for this

For the singer brought out in everyone during the Christmas season, a carolling tour will be led from the house from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Dec. 21. The tour will be led by the Salvation Army Band and the College Chamber Choir. Once again, mulled cider and treats are available afterwards. Admisison is free

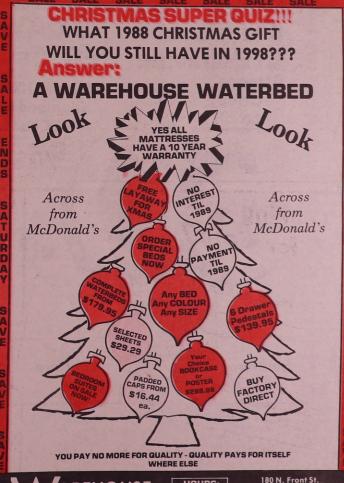

But these scheduled events aren't the only things offerred to visitors. From Tuesday to Sunday, from 1 to 4:30 p.m., the museum is open until Jan. 3 with a theme of home for the holidays. Even the din-ing room is outfitted with a full Christmas dinner and the new general store with candy canes.

The festive spirit will have to be experienced at home during Dec 25, 26, 31 and Jan. 1 since the museum is closed during these days.

Shirley finds that her store appeals particularly to grandparents, who, she said, like the idea of giving handcrafted gifts to their grandchildren the way they did for their own children years ago.

"The toys become handme-downs," she said. "They're not plastic and won't break in two weeks.

Dioxins found in bay walleye

Dioxin levels found in Bay of Quinte walleye are cause for concern but not for alarm," said Murray German of the Kingston regional office of Environment Ontario at a meeting last week of the Bay of Quinte Remedial Action Plan's public advisory committee

Four walleye taken in 1986 were recently analysed by the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans. All contained dioxin and furans, but all were below the Health and Welfare Canada edible porconsumption guidelines.

The dioxin 2,3,7,8-TCDD and furans 2,3,7,8-TCDF and pentachorodbenzofuran were found in the four walleye at levels ranging from seven to 18 parts per trillion (ppt) for the dioxin, five to 14 ppt for the furan 2.3.7,8-TCDF and three to five ppt for the pentachlorodibenzofuran. Health and Welfare Canada's edible portion fish consumptions within fish consumption guideline is 20 ppt for the dioxin found in the Bay of Quinte

walleye. When found together, the toxicity of dioxins and furans are considered to be additive, Mr. German said in a press release.

However, he said, even when the toxicity of the furans are added to the dioxin, the Bay of Quinte walleye still fall below the Health and Welfare Canada guideline of 20 ppt.

Mr. German also tioned that the federal testing procedure used will higher concentrations than those used just to test edible portions of the fish. In the federal testing procedure, the whole fish is used for the analysis. Dioxins and furans accumulate in the fatty tissues of the fish, which are not part of the testing procedures that focus on the edible portion.

A 1988 collection of walleye has been sent to the Environment Ontario laboratory and is at the top of the priority list for dioxin testing.

Dioxin was detected in testing of the Domtar wood preserving plant discharge in 1987. Since then, a control order has been served on the company, requiring upgrading of Domtar's activated carbon treatment system and the collection and treatment of contaminated surface and groundwater from the plant property.

Domtar has recently completed the ministry's required upgrading.

Beware of these plants

Regular readers are aware of my major complaint about houseplants in today's market place - there are too many of them. And that is particularly true at this time of year when people decorate their home for the holidays with house plants, especially exotic flowering house plants with cultural demands that just can't be met in the average home environment.

There is no one place to lay the blame. The high demand for house plants is persuading retailers to stock anything and everything that is offered by wholesalers, especially if they are in bloom. And the plant lover, thrilled at the prospect of having something new, is buying anything, and everything particularly if they are in bloom.

CARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

The one thing that is lacking in the equation is knowledge. Often the retail staff knows little beyond the minimal information that is carried on the colourful little plant tag, especially some of the seasonal demands that are made by some plants. The problem is compounded when the owners, sadly surveying the skeletal remains, lay the blame where it doesn't belong- on themselves.

Over the past few weeks in trips to plant stores and nurseries, I have spotted eight plants for sale that you shouldn't even consider without knowing their demands and whether or not you can meet those demands in your home. Over the next few weeks, I am going to talk about those eight plants. The final decision will be yours, but at least you'll know what you are getting into. They are listed alphabetically rather than by degree of difficulty beginning with Bonsai: Before you lay out the big bucks demanded for Bonsai plantings, go get a book on Bonsai because the demands of Bonsai differs greatly from house plants. And if that doesn't deter you, make sure you purchase a Bonsai of a plant that is normally grown as a house plant, e.g. Aralias, Citrus, Figs, Hibiscus or Jade. And make sure what you are getting is a true Bonsai in one of the accepted styles shown in the book or be prepared to train it accordingly.

Recognize that none of the evergreen Bonsai can be grown as house plants. They are outdoor plants that must remain outside winter and summer and only brought in for short periods.

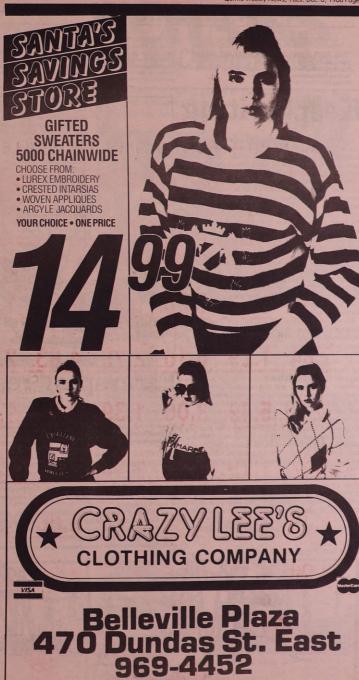

And in the words of Terry Lund, Bonsai specialist from Streetsville, Ontario, "...never, never give a Bonsai as a gift."

Bougainillea: A gorgeous, vigorous growing woody vine that must have the atmosphere of a greenhouse or a full-sun plant room or it's a waste of time and money. The leaves are sparse and uninteresting but the flowers are something else, papery bracts during spring and summer in white, yellow, orange, pink or purple surrounding white flowers with long stamens.

During the growth period the Bougainvillea must have four or more hours of full sun a day. Likes humidity in the 60 per cent range year 'round. Rest of the year - bright light.

During the growth period from March through summer, soak and then let dry. During the winter rest period from November through February, water just enough to keep the plant from drying out. Feeding is also done only through the period of growth, alternating a 20-20-20 and 10-52-10, 1/4 strength, monthly. Can be purchased as a floor plant and is often seen in hanging baskets. Often loses all of its leaves in mid-winter and any Often loses all of its leaves in mid-winter and any other time it doesn't like the care you are giving it. Next week: Six more to be wary of.

Keep writing

Over the last few months and especially during the recent federal and municipal elections, we have received many letters to the editor. Most were published, though in some cases the authors had to wait a while; some were not.

Some explanations are owed to the authors of letters that weren't published. In some cases, letters weren't published because they came from what we recognize in the profession as "professional" letter writers, i.e. from people who write us all the time. We publish some of their letters, but not all — and especially not all of those with an axe to grind, because we want to give other letter writers an opportunity for space.

The main reason, though, that some letters didn't get publication was because of length. We think in particular of one letter received from a Mr. Robert Bradford in which he took exception to an editorial comment on Theresa Kellaway. His points were well-taken and well-argued — but we simply didn't have space for a letter that took up almost two thirds of a page.

We will, on occasion, cut a letter, not because we disagree with the author (though we may well do so), but because of length. In some cases, no cuts can be made without severely changing the thrust of the letter. The letter from Mr. Bradford was a case in point: we didn't feel we could cut it without damaging the letter. On the other hand, we ran a lengthy response from Mrs. Kellaway, allowing her space we wouldn't allow someone else because she had a direct interest in responding to our comments.

In our September readership survey, we found that the editorial page receives exceptionally high readership, much higher than in most papers, certainly higher than any other newspaper we know in Canada. Five out of the top six items were from the editorial page, with the editorial cartoon leading the pack, followed, in order, by the editorial, Cheers and Jeers, letters to the editor and the Quintessence car-

We want you to keep writing. That's part of this paper's mandate — to provide space for other points of view in the Quinte area. But if you want to get published, we recommend that you keep your letters brief and to the point. We don't have unlimited space your questions, grain fields in Ontario are sprayed mainly with MCPA; however, several other herbicides including 2, 4-D can be used. Application of these herbicides is usually done before the grain is 15 centimetres tall. By the time the crop produces grain, residues of these herbicides have dissipated and are no longer detectable in the grain.

In the case of strawberries, there is a wide range of pesticides used on the crop, some of which leave a residue at harvest time. Under the Food and Drug low level residues are permitted.

The Ministry, along with Health and Welfare Canada, annually monitors most strawberry crops for residues. Over the past few years, results of these tests have indicated that residues are well below permitted levels

Some are destroyed by cooking. Since the start of the monitoring prpgram in 1981, we have noted an increase in the number of samples where no residues can be detected.

GOLF COURSE ROBBED

Quinte Crime Stoppers, in co-operation with Belleville Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, request assistance ronce, request assistance in solving a break enter and theft at the Frankford Municipal Golf Course, which is located at 3 Wallace St. in Frankford. The incident occured sometime overnight of June 26, 1988.

Entry was gained by cutting the bottom screen of the outside door at the west end of the clubhouse and unlocking same. The thieves then gained entry through the inside wooden door without damaging it. This door was locked when the course opened for business the following

The culprits then went into the hallway and entered the storage area but it appears that nothing was taken from here. They then went to the snack bar area where the cash drawer from the cash register was stolen along with four cartons of cigarettes as well as some loose packages which were on the shelves above the cash register. The total loss is approximately $330.

Quinte Crime Stoppers would like to hear from you if you can assist in solving this case.

Crime Stoppers offers a cash reward up to $1,000 for information leading to an arrest in this crime or any other unsolved case. If you have any informa-tion call Crime Stoppers at 969-8477 or 1-800-267-4357. Callers will not be required to reveal their identity nor testify in court

Home maintenance made simple

The first snowfall stuck to the ground this weekend and I'm adding an item to my Christmas list - a flame

This is not a hasty decision. I've given it a lot of thought, usually as I straighten my aching back before shovelling a few more square yards of snow on the

The theory is simple: why move it if you can melt it? Fact one: snow melts. Fact two: the sun melts the snow but takes several months to get the job done. Conclusion: more heat is needed. You can see why a flame thrower comes to mind.

In fact, there's probably a business in this idea. Snowbusters! A stationwagon skids to a halt on the street and a man in a flame-proof suit and backpack leaps out and surveys the driveway. A few bursts of flame and presto! the driveway is clear. A few more short bursts and the sidwalks are snow-free and dry. He tilts his headgear up as a gorgeous blonde falls upon his neck to thank him. "Just part of the job, ma'am," he says laconically before doing a donut in the road and heading on, lights flashing, to the next tough snow-clearing job. XXX

HOME MAINTENANCE

A flamethrower fits in with what I call the Conan School of Home Maintenance. Only a few tools are needed in this approach to keeping the house up to snuff: a chainsaw, a hammer or two and a glue gur

A chainsaw is always useful for jobs both big and small. The table wobbles? Vrooom! Fire up the chainsaw and Ine table wobbles? Vrooom! Fire up the chainsaw and take a bit off one leg to even it up. And then off another. And another. So it still wobbles, just keep cutting until you get it right. Okay, so you always wanted a larger coffee table. We can always buy another dining room table. Or you always wanted a picture window? A chainsaw can solve that quickly and easily, too. No job is toob big or too small.

Hammers come in useful when things don't work. Just hit it. If it still doesn't work, hit it again. If you really want to get sophisticated, get yourself a heavier hammer for those really tough jobs. Then buy a new part and attach it with the glue gun.

You can see why my wife shudders when I decide to do a little home maintenance

THE DOMINO THEORY

But have you ever noticed how a small home maintenance job always turns into a bigger one? It's the old domino theory, the same one that got the Americans into the VietNam War: if one country goes communist, then, one after another, other countries will go com-munist until communists start winning school board seats in California. And anti-war activists were convinced the opposite was true: that if the U.S. got involved in one small war, then it would get into another larger war and then another until finally everything would go up in flames. Fortunately, both sides were mostly wrong about the domino theory.

But the domino theory is true when it comes to home

I start by changing a washer on a dripping tap. Before I know it, I'm changing the whole faucet. And the piping leading up to it. Then the toilet won't stop overflowing. Before you know it every pipe in the house is ripped out, the hot water tank needs replacing, the city is digging up our connection to the municipal water main, the water treatment plant is at risk and the province has declared Belleville an emergency area

I'm serious. I know a family that started out installing a simple $180 skylight and wound up with a $50,000 sun room

Those bottom-bumping with jigs below the Bay Bridge lately have been rewarded with some fan-tastic walleye fishing. Although most of the fish have been small jacks in the 1.5 to 3 pound range, the quantity more than makes

THE NET RESULT

By Bruce Elliott

With nephew Roger Elliott and standardbred horse trainer Len Callacott, we found the walleye extremely co-operative last Thursday in the channel below the southern span of the bridge. Black and white jigs, sweetened with mud minnows, put the limit on our stringer between 3:30 and 5:00 p.m. While the sizes were not of boasting proportions, a quickly-emptied dinner platter spoke of their eating quality

Perhaps a positive sign for the upcoming ice fishing season is the disappearance of the huge schools of gizzard shad that have been inhabiting the bay the last year.

Bits and Bites

Myers Pier remains a good local for shore anglers in pursuit of walleye. Near dark is the premier time when casting deep running minnov imitations. When jigging below the Bay Bridge last week we witnessed a less-than-sportsman-like angler dropping the smaller walleye be caught off the top span of the bridge back into the water. We counted four of them belly up in the water. What a waste!

CUSTOMER SERVICE CALLED KEY TO SURVIVAL IN 1990s

More than 700 executives have participated in similar sessions in the U.S. since the Tom Peters Group started them in 1984, but this will be the first such brainstorming, idea-swapping session ever held in Canada or, indeed, outside of the U.S.

Although other Canadian firms and individuals have sought the right to sponsor the think tank ses-sions, Loughheed and Associates was chosen after one year of discussions. It represents a coup for the local firm and proves that Eastern Ontario has the facilities and exper-tise to provide "world class" marketing con-ferences, Mr. Loughheed taining a strategic edge in said at a press conference the 1990s.

The focus of the think tank will be customer ser-

Customer service and incustomer service and m-novative leadership will be key to survival in the 1990s, especially with free trade between the United States and Canada, Mr. Loughheed said.

"Those companies with superior customer responsiveness have the highest market share," he noted.

The think tank will focus attention on the Quinte area, he said, noting that all of the major media in Canada have expressed interest in getting news coverage of the event in March.

LOCAL RECREATION RESOURCES STRETCH TOURIST SEASON

The Isaiah Tubbs Resort is successfully expanding its tourist season beyond the traditional May to September tourist season thanks to business conferences such as the Skunkworks think tank sponsored by Loughheed and Associates.

According to sales manager Kathryn Pearsall, that market is "growing in-credibly" and the resort expanded its marketing to Ottawa and Montreal as well as Toronto, where the resort has two sales representatives.

However, she said, when Toronto executives think of retreat centres, they think of the Muskokas, where they have as many as 15 to choose from. They don't think of Quinte, where the Isaiah Tubbs is one of the few possible sites. Kathryn Pearsall aims to change that.

The key to the success of the Isaiah Tubbs has been personalized service each client receives - no two rooms in the resort are the same, even the wallpaper is different in each room.

Another factor is the combination of meeting and recreational facilities in a retreat setting.

Although business con-Atthough business conferences are usually working conferences, some recreation time is also required. At the Isaiah Tubbs Resort, the key has been to promote the area's rural resources. Hayrides with a horse-drawn wagon, hoe downs, "down home cooking" of pork and beans, clam bakes on the beach, boat tours around the county and entertainment by local talent such as Grandpa's Goodtime Gang has proven popular with the city folks who attend the conferences.

"We use our resources," Kathryn said. "That's my selling point."

And it works.
"The response is incredible," she said. "They're eating us up.

arl Loose ran a tight ship. Carl and his wife left their native Germany for a bet-ter life in the U.S.A. By 1909, he had risen from a baker's helper to foreman of Max Leiser-sohn's establishment on Second Ave. in New York

The family was extremely religious. Carl had taught his brood to fear God, keep high moral standards and observe their religious obligations. Sunday at most observe their religious obligations. Sunday at moral marked the frederick took his rows and marked when Frederick took his vows and the sunday at the sunday and the sunday at the sun

Carl and his wife put their heads together and came up with a solution. Marie should marry. Let's see now: Carl knew a boy who would fill the position just fine. Both mother and father instructed Marie to allow her prospective husband certain liberties, so that he would believe he was the father of her unborn child.

under their own roof.

Mrs. Loose didn't like what was happening to her family. Marie brooded all the time. Meta was becoming more despondent and Carl wasn't his usual satisfied self. She wrote a letter to her son, Father Frederick. The essence of the note was, "Come home. We are in big frouble."
Father Frederick came home to meet the family emergency, never in his wildest dreams realizing the nature of the dilemma. Both sisters flew into his arms and told all. Father Frederick was almost shocked out of his cassock. What's more, his mother told him that Carl was now toting a handgun he had purchased at a hockshop and was threatening to commit suicide. All three women pleaded with the priest to do something. Father Frederick did what he thought best. He went directly to a police station and informed them of the situation which existed in his home. Carl was lugged into Magistrates Court, where he was given a choice—leave the country immediately or stand trial on criminal charges of incest. He was forbidden to return to his home and was placed in the Yorkville Hotel on Third Ave. to spend a night or two until he had made up his mind.

Carl was devastated. To his way of thinking, he had never caused anyone any harm. His daughters were an ungrateful pair, his wife a stupid woman who should never have written to Frederick, Speaking of Frederick, now there was a traitorous son, who had gone to outsiders to solve what was obviously a family problem.

By morning, Carl was like a man possessed. He rose, dressed and walked directly to his home. He intruded on his family as they sat around the table eating. At his seat sat his son, the priest, whom he wished had never been born.

Carl looked and shouted in his native German, "Ver fluch sei feder mann hier", which, as we all know, means, "Everyone here be dammed."

Mrs. Loose couldn't think of anything germane to say, so she replied, "Care for a cup of coffee, Carl?"

Carl didn't answer. Instead, he pulled out his revolver and fired at Frederick's head. Not being as

Carl?"
Carl din't answer. Instead, he pulled out his revolver and fired at Frederick's head. Not being as accurate as he might have been, he missed. The builet struck John in the chest. Undeterred, Carl next levelled the weapon at his wife. At that precise moment, Meta rushed to her mother's assistance and was shot dead.

An ambulance and police were at the scene in a matter of minutes. John would recover from his wound, but Meta had died instantly. Carl was handcuffed and taken into custody.

In due course Carl stood trial for the murder of his younger daughter. The entire story of his incestuous relationship with his daughters was aired in open cont. Marie testlifed against her father. Carl took the witness stand in his own defense and presented his warped side of the story.

His incestuous relationship with the girls had never hurt anyone. He claimed Marie had instigated the relationship by coming to him. So had Meta. He went along with their desires to protect them from the neighborhood boys who had no respect for decent religious girls.

the neighborhood boys who had no respect for decent religious girls.

And why had Carl returned to his home after being ordered by the court to stay away? Simple, the had planned on reconciling his differences with his family and then committing suicide in the friendly confines of his own home rather than in a cold hotel room. Instead, he had gone temporarily insane and pulled the gun on his family. The prosecution cross examined Carl in order to repudiate the suicide story. Did he write a suicide note? No, he had overlooked that little detail. In fact, Carl had overlooked any piece of evidence pointing to reconciliation to be followed by suicide. The defense's case of temporary insanity slowly crumbled. crumbled.

Carl Loose was found guilty of murder in the first degree. He was sentenced to death, a sentence which was carried out in Sing Sing's electric chair.

Five-goals salvage victory

The Belleville Bulls pulled ahead of the Ottawa 67's on Saturday night with nothing short of an amazing effort in the third period.

The 67's caught up with the Bulls at the end of the second period with the score locked at two each and the Belleville club looked like they were heading down-hill. In the third period, however, the Bulls pulled ahead by scoring five goals in just over eight minutes of play, leaving the game with a 7-4 victory

The Bull's offence didn't ease off at all during the period, keeping the puck well across the 67's blue line. Shots on goal by the end of the game were relatively even with 33 for the Bulls and 31 for Ottaws

Although the Bulls re-main in last place of the Leyden division, the victory gives them a record of behind Toronto Marleys.

THE ARMCHAIR ATHLETE BY JOHN G. SMITH rnest in earnest

With Harry Ornest purchasing the Toronto Argonauts, there has been a great deal of speculation as to his intent. But one thing that fans should remember is that he's a businessman ahead of everything else - and not a stupid one at that.

The main part of the sale isn't the club itself but the rights to football in Toronto's Skydome. With this, he's open to bring the NFL to the great, white

CFL fans must face the fact that they are among a dying breed. It's hard to forget the fiasco in Winnapeg this year when only a handful of spectators showed up to see their team go on to the Grey Cup. With fan support at NFL football games on the other hand, such a team seems to be a more profitable venture.

He's not likely to hold on to the Argos if he's given a sweet enough purchase price either. He's in this game for the profit. Remember that he sold the St. Louis Blues only two years ago for an estimated profit of between $10 illion and $20 million. He doesn't sound like he's in this game to lose money, and as a CFL club, it seems that that's the only alternative. What would

Sports injured 1.3 result." she said.

By David Botting

An estimated 1.3 million sports, fitness and recreation-related injuries in 1986 alone can be reduced, says Linda Thom, Canadian gold medalist in the sports pistol competition at the Los Angeles Olympics and past chair-man of the Ontario Sport Medicine and Safety Advisory Board.

The board has sponsored a major report on sportrelated injuries and made recommendations to the Ontario Ministry of Tourism and Recreation, she said during a visit to Belleville.

'Most studies sit on the shelf and collect dust," she said, commending the ministry for taking immediate action on the report. "This one isn't."

She said that 530 people suffered serious injuries and and 87 died in 1986. Forty per cent of the fatal accidents, most of them in recreational diving or fishing, involved alcohol. Alcohol was a factor in ten per cent of all the 1.3 million injuries.

She noted that hockey had the highest number of injuries for a team sport with 230 000 reported injuries. One of the board's key concerns, she said, was the number of players who don't use helmets and face masks or goggles. Half the players in Ontario — about one million players — belong to associations that don't require the headgear. The gear helps prevent brain and facial injuries that result from spearing or hitting from behind into the boards. "We get tragic

She said the board was asking either the associations or the arenas in which they play to make the gear mandatory.

She said the board also examined minor but chronic injuries, noting, for example, that there were 140,000 jogging injuries in 1986.

The overall cost to the health system is estimated at over $600 million per year, she said.

Among the recommendations to the ministry were establishment of a new, independent Ontario Sport Safety Organization that would be responsible for helping to implement safety programs aimed at reducing the number of sport and fitness-related injuries, implementation of safety programs and guidelines, a system to monitor player-safety programs, more affordable liability insurance and protection for sport, fitness and recreational organiza tions and collection of data on sport injuries.

The board is also recommending development of a public awareness and education campaign aimed at males under 30 years of age, focusing on aquatic safety awareness, fitness consumer educationan, the use of proper protective equipment in hockey and raquet sports and the dangers of alcohol use.

GM's 4-WHEEL JIMMY IS FOR TRUCK LOVERS

their

Someone once said to me that there are two types of trucks, and those who trucks of all sizes and shapes - especially four-wheel-drives. So when I was asked if I would like to test General Motors four wheel-drive S-15 Jimmy, I was in second heaven.

In fact, interest in trucks has grown so much, one out of every four vehicles GM sells is a truck. The bulk of these sales is made > of light-duty trucks - small and large pickups, vans, and sport utility vehicles such as the smaller GMC

just work vehicles has grown over the past 10

so has engineering and styling.

As technology has improved in the automotive world, so have the improvements to trucks. Today's trucks are better looking, better equipped and easier to handle than their predecessors.

The GMC Jimmy I was given to test has to be one of the best-looking trucks I have ever driven. The Jimmy was equipped with the Timberline sports trim-package. This gave the exterior of the truck a twotone paint scheme that started with black at the top and faded down to a gold color at the lower edge. The mag wheels were also painted gold.

Opening the door of my Jimmy, I found an interior that would be the envy of many expensive cars. The highlighted with natural-coloured suede, making an interesting and attractive

At first glance, the seats in the Jimmy don't look that comfortable, but they give just the right amount of support for those long trips

A short wheelbase has forced the designers to place the rear seat between the rear wheel-wells to give the Jimmy plenty of rear cargo space. This rear seat also folds up out of the way for larger items, giving the owner almost double the load capacity.

My Jimmy was equipped with the digital-dash option. This very appealing but somewhat busy looking dash was generally not too bad once your eyes became accustomed to it

The biggest news for the Jimmy and the Blazer (a Chevy sibling) was the introduction last year of the 4.3-litre V6. This engine was developed as a result of the growing demand for more power in the Jimmy. The 2.8-litre V6 was not producing the kind of power that was being demanded of this sport utility vehicle. So the use the engine block of the 350-cu-in V8 and eliminate the last two cylinders. And, low and behold, they came up with the 4.3-litre.

This engine gives the Jimmy all the pulling power and get-up-and-go it will ever need. This V6 develops a healthy 160 hp and a stump-pulling 230 lbs./ft. of torque, enough to get any off-road out of Changing all this horsepower and torque (the amount of turning power of the engine) is a choice of a five-speed manual transmission or a smoothshifting four-speed automatic.

My S-15 Jimmy was equipped with the four-speed automatic, the most popular choice.

The unit worked well, upshifting and down-shifting whenever needed. Being a four-wheel drive, the S15 Jimmy comes with a twospeed transfer ease that lets the driver choose between two-wheel high (normal mode), four-wheel high, and four-wheel low.

Most off-road thusiasts, and probably most who drive the Jimmy will find the handling of this sport utility vehicle very good. From the back woods to the mall parking lot, the Jimmy's tight turn-ing circle makes this vehi-cle easy to back in to or out of most tight places.

To keep the ride from being rugged, the engineers decided to use a conventional-type indepencoil springs. This give the mer.

Jimmy a great ride for a four-wheel drive, with not a lot of bounce. In the rear, leaf springs are used for optimum ride and load capacity.

Those of you who might be considering the S15 Jimmy for a tow vehicle will be happy to know that it's one of the best. Its fullframe construction, plus the 4.3-litre V6 on the 4 x 4 models allows the vehicle to tow 5,500 lbs. The twowheel drive will tow an extra 500 lbs.

The S15 Jimmy is a unique vehicle in that it's a tough as any four-wheeldrive on the trail and goodenough looking to take the family out on Saturday night. It could be called fun yet practical - but always

THE AGE OF EFFLUENCE

DECEMBER 7

The first photograph of a black hole in our galaxy, the Milky Way, was shown today in 1983. It sounds like the kind of thing one might see more clearly on a negative.

December seems the month for black holes. The term was coined by Prof. John Wheeler Dec. 29, 1967. The first tenidentification, binary-star X-ray source Cygnus X-1, was made in December, 1972. But it's all very hypothetical yet, and Cygnus is a long way to go for a cancer or TB test.

As Trekkies know, once anything is sucked into a black hole by its enormous gravitational pull, there's no escape. Matter disappears absolutely ...

like political promises after an election.

Still, with our world rapidly burying itself under layers of personal and industrial waste, science is fascinated with the possibility of cosmic garbage dumps. Here, at last, may be trash cans we can afford to simply throw litter near.

Garbage is chaff in our greed for the fine grains of life. Throughout human history refuse has been a symbol of progress. In just over 50 years, the average American has progressed from producing 2.8 pounds of personal waste daily to eight. The trash of superstars yields up momentos for scavenging fans. The wastebins of public figures teem with investigative reporters scurrying for trashy headlines. That one man's garbage might be another's treasure is certainly true in times of effluence.

It's comforting we're looking to black holes rather than the moon or Mars for disposal sites. We should save those orbs for future tourist industries. The tourists will turn them, soon enough, into garbage dumps anyway.

but let's start thinking now of the kinds of non-biode-gradable junk we'd most like to see disappear absolutely. I'd start the list with Gilette razor blades and unsuccessful political candidates. patronage might become palatable when the plum is a nosting to NASA for setronage training, and a is a posting to NASA for astronaut training...and a ride into the black hole as captain of a galactic, disposable garbage truck.

A Letter to Brezhnev: (1985), 95 minutes Director. Chris Bernard

Starring: Alexandra Pigg (Elaine), Margi Clarke (Teresa), Peter Firth (Peter), Alfred Molina (Sregei)

On the surface, this is a simple boy-meets-girl story without much of a plot. It is about two Liver-pool girls. Teresa (Clarke) is employed in a chickenprocessing plant, where she does unspeakable things to chicken carcasses. Elaine (Pigg) is on welfare, but daydreams about escaping from her seemingly hopeless life. They spend most evenings in sleazy bars and clubs, where they have brief, un-friendly, encounters with their male counterparts.

One night they meet two Russian sailors who are in town for a day. Elaine and the poetic, sensitive, Peter (Peter Firth) are immediately attracted to each other. From that night on, life is never the same for Elaine.

On a deeper level, this film takes a penetrating and critical look at life in an economically depressed, industrial city. Anyone whose ideas of England are based on stately homes, Charles and Di, etc., will see another, very different, face of the country. The depressing on-location shots of Liverpool, and its working-class people, make it easy to understand Elaine's compulsion to escape.

There are qualifications: the quality of the film is not good; the dialogue is often difficult to follow. partly because of the sound-track, but mainly because of the thick Liverpool accents. The language is extremely coarse, but is authentically British working class.

With all its flaws, this film is recommended because it is completely different from most conbecause it is completely interest on opportunity to temporary movies. It provides an opportunity to look at a depressing, but strangely upliftine piece of life. It is not suitable for children. NEWS COMICS

speechless

Marcel Marceau, the world's most famous mime, brought a Belleville audience the creation of the world, a walk in a public garden, a ride on the train and many other performances on Dec. 8 - all without a prop or whisper, leaving his audience as speechless as the star.

Marceau brought his show to Centennial Secondary School as part of his latest Canadian tour. According to Susan Steven-son of the Quinte Arts Council, Belleville is the smallest city in Canada to see him perform

"The calibre of performance is outstanding," she said. "It's something very special you often don't see in a community this size. Since Marceau is at retirement age by many standards (born in 1923). there's a chance this could be his last Canadian tour. she said.

He opened up the show by doing nothing less than creating the world. With the movement of his hands, he was able to convey fish swimming in the newly formed oceans followed by birds and other creatures of the earth. Many members of the audience were left with a more vivid See MEMORABLE Page 5

Newsstand price won't change free home delivery

Readers will notice this week for the first time that Quinte Weekly News has a newsstand price of 25 cents printed on the front page.

No, this does not mean that you will have to start paying for your home-delivered copy of Quinte Weekly News. Home delivery will continue to be free; your carrier will not be knocking on your door asking you for subscriptions. The newsstand price of 25 cents will only be charged in stores that carry Quinte Weekly News

We have decided to put a newsstand price on Quinte Weekly News because of a growing demand for the newspaper, both from people within our circulation area who want extra copies and from people who live outside our normal distribution but want to receive the newspaper anyway.

Quinte Weekly News is a controlled distribution newspaper, which means that it is distributed free to selected areas and the cost is covered by selling advertising. Extra copies of the newspaper cost us money to print and distribute. Thus, the newsstand price is intended to cover the cost of the extra copies that Quinte Weekly News readers want.

A list of the stores carrying Quinte Weekly News will be printed each week on the first page of the classified section

We are pleased by the extra demand for Quinte Weekly News, because it shows that the newspaper gets read, confirming our fall readership survey, which also showed high readership interest in the newspaper. Keep on reading and we'll keep on bringing you Quinte Weekly News!

Lies about Santa Claus

Why do otherwise sane adults insist on telling children that Santa Claus is real?

A surprising number of adults (surprising to me, that is) insist that children should never be told that Santa isn't real, despite the evidence before their eyes of a different Santa in every Santa Claus parade and every department store and mall. They insist that children should believe in Santa Claus and that this belief should be encouraged as long as possible, if possible until the shidden raph addispanse, that patural stage in life children reach adolescence, that natural stage in life where doubt in everything becomes an article of faith.

Why should we lie to children even about such things as Santa Claus? Most of these same adults would be horrified if their children were taught lies, as, for exam-ple, that the holocaust of ews in the Second World War never happened.

It's not as though these adults believe in Santa. No way. They may recall nostalgically how they used to believe in Santa when they were kids and how horribly disappointed they were when they discovered he wasn't real, but they don't believe in his existence now except as a fairytale and they don't seem to believe that they ought to. Just their kids.

Curiously, the adults I have known who have insisted on telling children that Santa is real would never dream of telling children that Jesus Christ is real. They would be offended by my own insistence that not only children but

And there in a nutshell we have the story of the North American Christmas. For many, perhaps most North Americans, Christmas is about Santa Claus, not about the birth of Christ. And yet, the habit of faith persists. Although faith is not for them, these adults insist their children have faith, if not in Christ, then in Santa Claus.

A sleeper issue

In our opinion, the environment was the sleeper issue in the last federal election

We remember when environmentalists were regarded as kooks or worse (U.S. President Ronald Reagan apparently still regards them as barefoot hippies wearing love beads). But in the recent election, the environment was named in polls as one of the leading concerns for the first time. Pollsters were surprised to find that people even said they would pay more money to help clean up environmental problems.

The debate over free trade, such as it was, unfortunately obscured environmental issues during the recent election. Nevertheless, we were surprised when most of the candidates agreed at a candidates meeting that the environment should be a top priority. A candidate from one of the three major parties even went so far as to say that if we didn't solve problems such as the greenhouse effect, we wouldn't be around to worry about other problems such as free

Similarly, we note the growth of municipal recycling. Joe McInnes, a pioneer in municipal recycling, recently spoke in Belleville to the Quinte Environmental Resources Association. He noted that 14 years ago, Metro Toronto's engineers laughed at them when they started the first municipal recycling program. Since then, Metro Toronto has embraced recycling, and this fall, the one millionth blue box was handed out to - you guessed it - a person in Metro Toronto.

Both the spread of interest in municipal recycling and increased sensitivity to the issue by politicians indicate a change has been going on. People finally seem to have realized that what we eat, drink and breath is important, and none too soon. The environment may have been the sleeper issue in this past election, but watch for it to become one of the major issues of the 1990s.

☐ CHEERS - To ourselves, for a change. Our front page picture last week, taken at the local animal shelter, brought a man and his lost dog back together again. Stewart (Sonny) Thompson recognized his pooch Doris in the background and was reunited with her. The pet of 11 or 12 years had gone missing more than a month ago.

CHEERS - To the OPP for their crackdown on speeders on the 401 from Trenton to Kingston. Alarmed by an increase in fatal accidents on the highway, the police ticketed 976 people.

Cartoon was 'lifted'

The Editor:

As a long time fan of world-renowned cartoonist Carl Giles, I was at first shocked and then angered when I saw the comic strip Quintessence in the Dec. 6th issue of Quinte Weekly

The strip in question was poignantly funny and hit home an "every person" type of humour, as I am sure it did on Feb. 6, 1973 when it first appeared in the London Daily Express with Giles' signature and just a few other minor

I spell this kind of cartooning plagiarism (a nas-ty word with an even nastier journalistic meaning). I think that a smart editor/publisher might want to cover his posterior and offer a full confession and apology at the least before someone more than just a fan notices this little indiscretion. Ask yourself, and definitely ask your cartoonist: "is this the first

Carlton R. Temple

Editor's Note: Mr. Temple also sent a copy of Mr. Giles' original cartoon, and we, too, were shocked and angered. Plagiarism is a nasty word, as Mr. Temple notes, but he's right. The cartoon by Quintessence cartoonist Peter Kinnes was plagiarized. Borrowing an idea is an honourable tradition practised by Shakespeare, among others - but only if you make the idea your own and treat it in your own way. "Borrowing" a cartoon (or, for that matter, a story or poem or anything else) is just plain wrong in our books. We apologise to Mr. Giles and thank Mr. Temple for bringing it to our attention.

Seniors group seeks land

This spring, over 250 retired couples will be ready to develop a seniors community under the new provincial and federal acts. We have been studying this proposal for several years. We are interested in Eastern Ontario, and Quinte falls within these boundries. We expect another 500 couples within another year. Our membership exceeds 37,000 but not all want to relocate. We are searching and are willing to purchase 1,000 acres in a reasonably remote area. And we will build our own homes, health and therapy centre, workshops, chapel, plazas, etc. We are non-religious, non-racial, just everyday ordinary seniors that want to live together where we can relate to one another and form support groups. Perhaps there are a group of individual land owners covering over 1,000 acres, then please contact us immediately.

MEMORABLE PERFORMANCE

to obtain in Sunday school classes from years ago.

Remaining in the heavens, he was also able to show an angel falling from and returning to the grace of God — something most people couldn't por-tray as well with the most extravagant special efextravagant special ei-fects. His portrayal of the angel being caught up with more earth-bound pleasures kept the au-dience in stitches, especial-ly when he was able to por-tray, the embracing of tray the embracing of a woman using no more than his hands clasped around his head with his back to the audience.

When taking a walk in a "public garden," Marceau kept the audience in stitches while being tugged around by an imaginary but ambitious dog something many pet owners were able to relate

His performance of the Mask Maker showed the versatility of his face as he donned different masks in his imaginary shop, por-traying different moods. Another skit that demonstrated his dramatic range, was his portrayal of a soldier. With a shift of the body, he was able to take the audience from fits of laughter at the way he marched, to utter silence. as he conveyed the death of the a friend in battle.

But it was in the second act when Marceau became Bip, a loveable character of his own creation. And all he did was add a hat to his head with a red carnation stuck in the side.

In Bip Travels by Train, Marceau added all the shakes and other discomforts associated with travelling by train — in-cluding the problems associated with trying to manage an enormous suit-

At one point, with the aid of a screen, Marceau is able to portray two characters at the same time - David and Goliath. Ducking behind the screen for just a moment, he would transform himself from one character to another, keeping the au-dience in stitches. He was even able to pull both characters forward for a curtain call.

In black and white, it was a memorable performance by Marcel Marceau.

CORRECTION

In the December 6 issu of Quinte Weekly News there was an error in the Don Harvey "Merry Christmas Sale" advertisement.

On Dec. 7, 1837, about 1000 Canadian loyalists stormed Montgomery's Tavern, north of Toronto, routing William Lyon Mackenzie's makeshift rebel army. The tavern was then razed before local society members could erect a plaque and stop such wanton dastingtion of a historical monument. ton destruction of a historical monument

Two days earlier a rebel force of several hundred had lurched toward Toronto from Montgomery's, to be met by a handful of loyalists under Sheriff Jarvis. Since this was before the questionable activities for which the street commemorating him became famous, his name was pronouced "Jah-vis."

DATES 'N DARTS BY FRED WEBSTER

The loyal defenders fired one volley and fled in panic. Mackenzie's front rank returned the volley then fell to the ground to reload. Seeing their leaders fall like that, the attackers behind assumed all had been killed, took sober stock, and fled in panic themselves Rebellion in Upper Canada was first brewed secretly at another watering hole — Elliot's. A Canadian version of the Declaration of Independence was drafted July 31, 1837, at Doel's Brewery. It was fitting the party ended at a tavern. Who ever said Canadian history was dry?

The rebels of 1837 called themselves patriots. The loyalists called them traitors. Almost 60 years earlier, similar confusion had reigned when rebellious American patriots labelled Loyalist Benedict Arnold a traitor.

Patriotism has always seemed too American for Canada, so who would have forecast still more confusion over the recent free trade platforms of "Elec-

Marshall McLuhan once described ours as "the only country in the world that knows how to live without an identity." On a world menu, it's been suggested Canada is the vichyssoise of nations ... cold, half French and hard to stir.

Stirred we become, though, when politics and grog are mixed. That's probably why our pubs and polls never share business hours. Perhaps it's also why the beer of Mackenzie's Great White North is exempted from the politics of free trade.

McLuhan may have erred. It seems we do have an identity even free trade can't harm

I've tried most of them and have come to a number of conclusions. First, they are not worth the time and trouble required to bring them to a repeat peak of performance. Second, high-light house plant space is too precious to be occupied 12 months of space is too precious to be occupied 12 months of the year by a plant with a flowering period limited to a few weeks. Finally, for someone new to house plant cultivation, difficult house plants such as those we talked about last week, can be discourag-ing enough to convince them that they "can't grow anything" and offen they give up one of the most satisfying hobbies in the world.

Last week we talked about two house plants to be wary of: Bonsai and Bougainvillea. This week we are going to lead off with - Brunsfelsia.

ARDENING AND GROWING

Aptly named "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" r its brief transitional flower display, the for its brief transitional flower display, the blossoms of the Brunsfelsia last only three days, changing from purple to blue to white over that period and with the right conditions, should flower year round. But those conditions include four or more hours of sunlight a day from November through February. And night temperatures of 10 to 130 C. (50 to 550 F.) Plus humidity levels of 60 to 70 to 150 C. (50 to 150 F.) Plus humidity levels of 60 to 70 to 150 C. (50 to 150 F.) per cent. Otherwise they will grow an unresponsive mass of leaves mass or leaves.

The Camellia is a small tree or shrub that was prized during the plantation days of the southern U.S., producing sweet-scented flowers of near perfection in white, pink or red in spring and summer but they needed the Winter conditions of the deep Swith to do see deep South to do so.

As a result, they will not survive very long in daytime house temperatures exceeding 18° C. (65° F.) and must have night temperatures of 4 to 7° C. (40 to 50° F.). Enough said.

In the audience of my Toronto radio phone-in show is one of the most patient and persistant plant lovers I know. For three years he has tried unsuc-cessfully to bring a Clepdendron into bloom, and I can understand why. The flowers are very unusual, consisting of an inverted white calyx with a pro-tuding tongue of brilliant red petals but to achieve those results is no small task.

It must procede that period with three months of rest from December through February with night temperatures down around 10 to 13° C. (50 to 55° F.) and up. Difficult, to say the least.

The Gardenia is a popular house plant that makes its way onto the Christmas scene which is usually the start of its winter rest period. It has been brought into bud and bloom under controlled conditions of bright light, moist soil, high humidity, warm day and cool night temperatures and unles those conditions are continued, the flowers will quickly fall and the buds drop.

If you provide it with those conditions, it may

If you provide it with those conditions, it may break most of its buds and you have a good chance of growing it on successfully. Give it a winter rest period with reduced watering and no plant food until the end if March. Then give it sunlight, keep the soil damp, feed with an acid-type fertilizer once a month and this is a necessity for bud production, night temperatures of 15 to 17°C. (60 to 62°F), no higher, no lower and you could have it in flower again by summer. again by summer.

The same encouragement cannot be given if you lan to grow the Plumeria. Most texts don't even list it as a house plant and no wonder.

It is actually a tropical tree that normally grows to a height of 20 to 25 feet in the tropics. It requires humidity levels of 70 to 75 per cent year round, (some hope), and temperatures never below 20 to 24° C. (70 to 75° F.).

Next week we'll talk about some of the other flowering plants common to the Christmas scene, most of which can become a permanent part of your house plant collection.

REMATA'S RECOPES

Hi, Tis the season for entertaining and visitors staying up late and for sleeping in. But breakfast or brunch will still have to be prepared. Here is one recipe that can be prepared ahead of time and put in the oven when sleepy heads get up.

Brunch Casserole

- 3 tbsp. butter
- 1/2 cup sliced green onion
- 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper 1/2 zuchini thinly sliced or 1/2 cup chopped asparagus
- In large skillet saute all these vegetables.
- 1 lb thinly sliced ham, beef or pastrami
- Add meat to skillet

8 eggs, beaten

Add eggs and softly scramble. Transfer to a buttered 9 x 12 inch oven-proof casserole.

3 tbsp. melted butter

3 tbsp flour

Add to melted butter, stirring until smooth.

11/2 cups milk Remove pan from heat and add milk. Then bring to a boil, stirring constantly.

1 cup shredded cheddar

1 tsp salt

Stir in the cheese and salt and spread this sauce over the eggs.

1 cup bread crumbs

1/2 tsp paprika Mix together and pour evenly over eggmixture

3 tbsp melted butter Pour over egg mixture Refrigerate over night

Bake in 350° oven for 30 - 40 min. until bubbly. This recipe serves 6 - 8 people but can easily be doubled. Enjoy!

THE KIGER FAMILY'S NIGHTMARE

e walk

The Kigers were one of the most respected families in Covington, Kentucky. Carl was vice mayor of the town. His 48-year-old wife, Jenny, was justly proud of her family. Her two eldest sons, Marine Lieutenant Joseph Kiger and Seaman John Kiger, were her pride and joy. At home, both father and mother doted on six-year-old Jerry and their only daughter, Joan, 15.

The family appeared to be without blemish. Well, almost. There was one minor thing. Joan walked in her sleep, which caused the family some concern. Even neighbors knew that Joan often wandered in her sleep, sometimes falling out with her arms as if fighting an invisible enemy. Joan suffered from somnabulism.

In August 1943, her sleepwalking, which had been nothing more than a concern, was transformed into a night of terror. The family retired for the night in the usual manner. Carl glanced at the gun in his night table drawer. He felt reassured by the sight of his weapon. He kept several pistols around the house.

About midnight Jenny Kiger awoke with a start. She thought she heard a loud report and someone shouting. In her drowsy state, she believed the noise came from outdoors. Maybe a car had backfired.

in another bedroom, Joan Kiger dreamed that she saw in another bedroom, Joan Kiger dreamed that she saw an intruder enter her home via a downstairs window. There was no doubt in Joan's mind that the intruder was intent on killing them all—her mother, father and little brother. Only Joan could save them.

Silently, she rose from her bed. Perspiration poured down her face onto her nightclothes. She saw the man came be thother's room and close the door behind him. John her bed below the same face of the same face

There was the intruder beside her brother's bed, pre-paring to kill the sleeping child. Joan fired twice. One shot struck Jerry in the chest, the other in the head. He died instantly.

In her somnabulistic state, Joan saw the intruder rush past her out the door and into her parents' bedroom. She fired a couple of shots at him, but missed. Joan had no idea that she had just killed her brother. She still had to prevent the man from killing her parents. Joan burst into her parents 'room, guns ablaze. Five bullets crashed into Carl Kiger's body. Two in the chest killed him instantly.

Jenny had difficulty seeing in the darkness. She sat bolt upright and received a bullet in the thigh. Jenny sank back in her bed, unable to move. She stuffed bedclothes around her wound, which bled profusely. She listened and heard the noise of her daughter running through the house shooting at an imaginary stranger. She never realized that her daughter had just killed her hus

As suddenly as the shooting had started, it stopped. Joan appeared at her mother's side and turned on the light. Her first words to her mother were, "There's a crazy man in here and he's going to kill all of us. I don't want to be left alone in here."

Jenny, unable to move because of her wound, believed ber daughter's every word. She suggested that it was too dangerous for Joan to go downstairs and telephone for help. She should climb out the upstairs window and slide down a slanted porch roof. Joan was too frightened to take her mother's advice

Neighbors had heard the gunfire and called police

They arrived on the scene and rushed Jenny to St. Elizabeth Hospital in Covington. Joan was put in care of Initially, it was believed that the Kiger family had been attacked by a political enemy of Carl's. Joan had coura-geously engaged the killer in a gun battle and had driven him off.

One pistol was found in the house and two in a nearby cistern. All had been fired recently and were owned by Carl Kiger. Joan's story just didn't add up. Bullets taken from the victim's bodies and those found in the house underwent ballistic tests. They had all been fired from Carl Kiger's weapons. It appeared that the intruder had not fired a shirt.

When her story became indefensible, Joan was charged with murder and lodged in jail, where she spent her 16th birthday. Jennie was in such poor mental and physical condition that news of her daughter's arrest was kept

In the weeks between incarceration and trial, Joan was free on $25,000 bail. She attended the funeral of her father and brother. Jenny was released from hospital and returned to her home, hobbling on crutches. From the moment Jenny was told her daughter's version of the events of that fateful night, she steadfastly stood by

Ten days before Joan was to stand trial, Jenny was arrested and charged with the murders of her husband and son. It was felt that she was too aggressive in siding with her daughter. She, too, might very well be involved. One can only imagine this woman's anguish. She had

At the Crimestoppers Quinte Inc. regular meeting on Nov. 29, the board of directors authorizpayment of four rewards payable to Crimestoppers callers.

One of these was a $1,000 reward to the caller who supplied information that lead to the arrest of two suspects for the murder of Lennie Lloyd

As of the end of November, 1988, Crimestoppers Quinte Inc. has paid out over $4,000 for information leading to the clearing of 54 cases and the recovery of nearly $70,000 in stolen property and narcotics.

lain beside her husband, wallowing in his blood as he died. She herself was seriously wounded. She then was informed that her young son was dead. To learn that her own daughter was responsible for the shooting was more than enough wound, we will recovering from the property of the work of the was being charged with murder. Mother and daughter would stand trial separately.

On Dec. 16, 1943, Joan Kiger stood trial for the murder of her brother Jerry. There was no disputing that she had fired the fatal shots. The defense called Jenny Kiger to give testimony. Walking with the aid of crutches, Jenny took the stand and swore she was convinced an intruder was in the house on the night her husband and soon were killed. It was only later that she realized Joan had acted out a terrible nightmare while in a state of somnabulism.

Jenny swore that she had nothing whatever to do with the murders, sobbing that she loved her husband and son.

Jenny also told the court of the family's concern over Joan's sleepwalking in the past. However, they never thought for a moment that such a tragedy could result from her unusual condition.

Jenny's brother, Fred Williamson, told in detail how the family had been worried for some time over Joan's sleep-walking. Neighbors corroborated the fact that Joan had a long history of walking in her sleep.

The jury believed that Joan was not responsible for her actions while in a state of somnabulism. She was acquitted. All charges against her mother were dropped. The crowd cheered as mother and daughter embraced, leaving the courtroom arm in arm.

Kingston Raider Jeff Waver winces in pain after being checked by Belleville Bull Bryan Marchment. The Bulls were never able to pull their game together offensively on Saturday night, ultimately losing to the Raiders 2-1. (Smith photo)

Cat defense fails to stop Panthers

Defense was the name of the game as the Belleville Bobcats were defeated by the Pickering Panthers 3-1 at the Memorial Arena on Friday night.

Holding their opponents down to only 15 shots on goal, the Cats were still unable to stop three wellplaced shots on their net. Compounding problems, they were only able to send the puck home in one of the 21 shots allowed them during the game.
The Bobcats opened up the game with a goal in the first period by Al Newman, assisted by Scott Bennett and Sam Thornbury.

The rest of the game proved to be a different story all together as the Panthers scored twice in the second with only four attempts at the net.

Pickering was able to clinch the win in third period with a final shorthanded goal.

The loss leaves the Cats in second place in the MacKenzie division with a record of 6-12-5 followed by the Panthers with a 7-10-4

Singing the blues about paying the rent

How many people out there think that the great, omnipotent Harold Ballard would give them a break on their rent if it was past due?

I can see it now. A famous charity is one hour late in making a payment for the use of Maple Leaf Gardens and Ballard probably has a contract drawn up for their knees to be broken by a man named

When the shoe was on the other foot, however, Ballard was singing a different song. Remember when he refused to pay the city of Hamilton $300,000 for the rental of Ivor Wynne Stadium? What happened to his business ethics?

Now, I admit, on a reporter's salary I'm far from the world of high finance, but I still think $300,000 is a lot of money to face when it comes to back rent. Ballard just doesn't want anyone else to have a piece of his pie.

So what did he do when the chips were down when he had to put up or shut up ... when he had to face his problems like a

He did what any finan-cial leader would do — pack up his toys (in this case the Hamilton Ti-Cat's equipment) and went home. He's probably sucking his thumb at this very instant. So now that he has all of these toys, he wants something to do with them right? Rumour has it that he wants to start another CFL team in Toronto now that the Argos may be doomed to becoming an NFL team at the hands of its new owners

But look at Ballard from the point of view of a landlord. Would you rent a stadium to a man who stiffed his last landlord for $300,000?

Maybe he'll learn something from this when a group of Hamilton entrepreneurs begins making money on a team he gave up. That'll hit him where it hurts most - in the pocket

Besides, he should never have been allowed a football team to play with, anyway, especially a good one. He couldn't help but screw it up somehow.

I never did forgive him for trading quarterback Tom Clemens.

Mazda likes to think of the MPV as more than a van, more as an alternative to the full-size wagon. With the demand for the minivan growing in leaps and bounds, the Mazda people feel they can fill the void for Japanese quality with the MPV

The MPV, I have to admit, is one of the bestlooking mini-vans to come out of Japan yet. This may be attributed to the fact that it was designed in Mazda's own design studios in California.

All the people who had a chance to look at the van in

The MPV comes in two models: a base and an upgraded model called the LX. Both come with a list of standard features as long as your arm.
The MPV I was given to check out was the LX model, equipped with model, equipped with seating for seven.

At the front are reclining bucket seats with centre armrests. The back two seats are bench style, with seating for two in the cen-tre and for three in the far

The rear seat can be folded up for extra cargo space and the middle seat can be taken out quickly for bulky

Instrumentation comprises a tachometer, a speedometer plus fuel and temperature gauges. Wiper and headlight controls are located on stalks on the steering column, and the rest of the controls are located around the instrument cluster pod.

Heating controls, large rotary knobs with buttons underneath, are in the centre dash area. As in all Mazdas, the instruments are large and easy to read.

The powertrain on the MPV is a traditional frontengine rear-drive. The base engine is a 2.6-litre fourcylinder

MINI-VAN

Mazda feels the engine most people will opt for is the three litre V6. This overhead cam V6 is the same engine that powers Mazda's luxury 929 sedan, with a healthy 150 horsepower.

Combine this engine with Mazda's superb four-speed electronic automatic transmission and the MPV trailer towing package, and you can pull 1,950
kilograms.

A five-speed manual transmission is standard with the base 2.6-litre; the four-speed automatic is standard with the three-litre V6

Giving the MPV the luxury touch are powerassisted brakes and steering. The brakes are discs up front and drums in the rear, giving the MPV ample stopping power.

Mazda uses a fairly conventional suspension for the MPV: MacPherson struts up front and a five-link solid axle in the rear. Sway bars front and rear enhance the handling of the MPV, making it very steady on the street or highway.

Mazda has put a lot of thought into the design of this vehicle. In the short time I had it, I was very impressed with its looks, seating and practical ways.

As far as I can see, Mazda has made one fine stip into the mini-van market.

Our promise to Rural Canadians – signed, sealed and delivered

A recent independent study shows that 97% of our customers surveyed in rural areas, where retail postal services are now provided by local businesses, are fully satisfied with their postal services. Just as we promised.

Moreover, 92% are satisfied with their mail delivery, while 91% believe delivery to be as convenient or more convenient than before.

The message comes across loud and clear: an overwhelming majority of Rural Canadians surveyed believe that the post office is moving in the right direction. Furthermore, they consider that enlisting the help of local businesses helps to provide better services.

Our next step: Free lockbox service

Beginning January 3, 1989, customers who depend on lockboxes as their primary means of delivery will no longer have to pay a lockbox service fee. Charges will cease to apply for these customers when their lockboxes come up for renewal.

As part of our ongoing commitment to provide better services to you we will be mailing full details to you in the near future.

Canada Post is in rural Canada to stay That's a promise

THE FOURTH PROTOCAL: (1987), 116 minutes

(approximate)
Director. John Mackenzie
(Petrovsky/John Ross), Ned Beatty, Joanna Cassidy, Julian Glover, Matt Fewer In Moscow, Major Petrovsky (Brosnan) is sum-moned by the head of the KGB and commanded to carry out a top-secret mission in England.

The British Government is aware that something is brewing and puts John Preston (Caine), a member of the British Secret Service, on the case. His orders are to find out what Petrovsky is up to and stop him. The battle of wits between these two is complex enough, but it is further complicated by internal squabblings and jealousy within the British Secret Service. The entire operation, on both sides, is a continual series of betrayals and double crosses.

Close attention is necessary to follow the plot and to keep track of all the characters. This is not an impossible task because their actions and motivations are not too obscure to grasp. At times the action is slow, but it is never boring because of the quality of the writing - it is an adaptation of Frederic For-syth's best seller. The acting, from the lead roles down to walk-on parts, is very good. Fans of Matt Fewer (Max Headroom) will spot him in a minor role as a member of the U.S. Air Force.

In many ways the story is similar to several of the James Bond films, but it has more depth, and avoids the forced humour that characterized most of the more recent of the 007 series. The Fourth Protocol has some violence and some coarse language, but would appeal to most boys.

NATIVITY IS FOCUS FOR ITALIAN CELEBRATION

A nativity scene called a presepio -not a Christmas tree-is the focal point of the Christmas season in Italian homes. Itis also the focus of Christmas celebrations for the whole village.

In Joe Izenza's home village of Casacalenda, Italy, the townspeople would travel three to four kilometres from the town to a life-size presepio at the local convent

The trip was a pilgrimage of sorts, as "the people would go and visit the child in the manger and bring some gift to the the manger and bring some gift to the child, a very small gift, some money, bread, some food, he said." These sym-bolic gifts would be used in the convent. The walk symbolized the travels to the nativity made by the Three Wise Men or

Magi made at the first Christmas. This would go on from Dec. 25, the date of Christ's birth, until Jan. 6, or the Epiphany, the date that historically saw the Magi reach the stable in Bethlehem.

In fact, Epiphany is celebrated by Italians more than the actual day of

The North American influence has brought Santa Claus to Italian Christmas celebrations now. Saint Nicholas, the basis of Santa Claus, "is a patron saint of really a Christmas thing," Izenza says. On Saint Nicholas Day, Dec. 6, "people make a special bread that day and give it to poor, needy people," he said.

Christmas Eve brings a special midnight mass when everyone goes to church to await the birth of Jesus.

Christmas Day dawns and the family gets together for a meal.

'Main dishes are pasta made many different ways and we use a lot of fruits, Mr. Izenza said."

During the Italian Christmas season chestnuts are very popular, especially roasted chestnuts: Another Italian delicacy is crispelle, a homemade pastry just dough fried in oil, sometimes with raisin or other fruit fillings.

There is not a big tradition with gift giving on Epiphany, though children hang stockings that they will later find filled with dried figs, oranges, chestnuts, candies and pastries.

In Canada and the United States, it's "Merry Christmas", in French, "Joyeux Noel", but in Italy, it is "Buon Natale", a happy beginning for a newborn.

To all the Italian community, "Buon

Natale'

GERMAN CHRISTMAS STARTS WITH ADVENT

In Germany, Christmas starts with Advent. All the children have an Advent necklace or an Advent callendar, and everyday, when they open up a window or door, there is a piece of chocolate in it. You can count the days till Christmas.

There is an Advent wreath with candles of red or yellow. The wreath is made out of pine branches.

Every Advent Sunday, you light one more candle until it is Christmas.

The mother will bake ginger bread cookies for Christmas too and they taste good and you will say yum, yum. On the sixth of December Saint

On the sixth of December Saint Nickolaus comes and brings candy and nuts and cookies and apples and oranges. The night before the kids put out a shoe

The night before the kids put out a shoe or their plates so that santa can come and put the stuff on it. Bad kids got coals on their plates or shoes or they got a bunch of sticks.

The big celebration in Germany is on Christmas eve. Then we have special food like a goose filled with chestnuts and apples, and with red cabbage for dessert. We have all sorts of nuts. At Christmas, we also have all different sorts of cookies.

Every house has a real Christmas tree, not a fake one. Most of the Christmas trees have real candles on them for decoration and a lot of big Christmas

TREE GOES UP ON CHRISTMAS EVE

By Paul Ferguson

Danuta Bryszewska is almost three years and 7,000 thousand miles from her home of Lodz, Poland, but she will still be celebrating in the traditional Polish ways that she has grown up with. When Dec. 24th, Christmas Eve, ar-

When Dec. 24th, Christmas Eve, arrives, a visitor to the apartment of Danuta and her husband Kaz would find them and Polish friends from London, Ont., preparing a traditional Christmas from their homeland.

In Poland, as in Canada, a Christmas tree is put up and decorated—but just on Christmas Eve, never earlier. The night before Christmas, everybody is stirring, putting the tree up, decorating it, preparing traditional foods and putting gifts under the tree.

The main meal of a Polish Christmas is held on Christmas Eve. Danuta says, "We wait for the first star in the sky; it is a signal for dinner (to start). We have 12 dishes at this meal to signify the 12 months of the year. For dinner we have mushroom soup, fish, perogies, sauerkraut, but we cannot eat meat. We don't drink alcohol, only maybe some very light wine. We always make one empty place at the table for a stranger, another traditon to show hospitality."

During the course of the dinner everyone visits and sings many of the well known and remembered songs.

Santa Claus is one tradition that has crossed the ocean with little change from his European origins. Before a Polish Christmas dinner, a friend or member of the family will often dress as 'that jolly old elf' to hand out presents to the children. His red clothing and billowing white hair and beard are almost universal now and are the same, whether here or in Poland.

At midnight almost everyone goes to the church for "a very big mass with people playing the parts of those in the nativity, We go to church the morning of the 25th also, to another mass, sometimes before, sometimes after breakfast," Danuta said.

Although the Bryszewska's Trenton apartment is far from their native home, Danuta says, "We are going to do the same like in Poland."

PUDDING SINGS IN THE COPPER

You've probably all eaten some plum pudding at one time or another or heard Dickens' Tiny Tim tell about the pudding singing in the copper. Well, at our house it will do:

The recipe has been handed down for generations from mother to eldest daughter. It traveled over from England by ship before the First World War with my Great Grandmother and now is in the band of my Mom.

The cooking starts very early in the morning three weeks before Christmas. The ingredients must be mixed in a huge bowl with your hands to make sure everything is well combined, adding one ingredient at a time.

When all the necessary things are added we all wash our hands and line up behind Mom. Then each one of us, from the oldest to the youngest, stirs it once. When we do, each person gets one wish that will be baked into the pudding.

If the year has been a good one, a quarter, two nickels and five pennies are added to the pudding and who ever gets one on Christmas gets their wish. If it has been a bad year, an extra quarter is added for some extra good luck.

The most wonderfully delicious, get you in the Christmas mood smell floats through the entire house for the next 12 hours while the pudding is cooking. The puddings must be topped with butter and tied around the top with linen cloth for boiling.

Our neighbours have commented on the rich aroma that comes from our house at Christmas and I tell them it's our plum pudding singing in the copper.

It is boiled again for another two hours. Then the pudding is placed upside down on a large platter and my Grandpa will pour brandy all over it and set it on fire. The blue flames dance around until they hurn away

Then it is time to serve the pudding topped with custard. This is one of our family's most treasured traditions at Christmas and one of the tastiest. As the eldest daughter of this family, I hope someday to carry on the tradition

FIRECRACKERS GREET PHILIPPINE CHRISTMAS

"Maligayang Pasko"!

Merry Christmas!

That's a very familiar greeting all over the world at this time of the year. Regardless of the differences in

Regardless of the differences in customs and traditions, Christmas stands out as a unique festive season. I grew up in a friendly town of Paranaque, Rizal just at the outskirts of Manila, Philippines. Memories come so quickly depicting how Christmas is celebrated over there.

Four weeks before Christmas, familiar songs are heard on the radio and jukeboxes, the most popular of which are: Jingle Bells, Deck the Halls, Oh Little Town of Bethlehem, and Oh Holy Night. Some hits are performed by our local musical talent in our own dialect, which is called Tagalog. Some houses are bright with flickering lights shaped like a huge star or an angel that dangles outside the windows.

Santa Claus and the reindeer are nowhere to be found except on books and pictures. Santa coming down the chimney is an obscure picture or fact because none of the houses have fireplaces.

Since personal greetings are believed to be more significant than a greeting card, we only send Christmas cards to faraway friends and relations.

There is no exchange of gifts among adults. Instead, a family gathering at the table for Christmas dinner with festive foods and dessert varieties offers more happiness than gifts can bestow. It is not a turkey platter that sits on the table, but a roasted pig with its trimmings or a special smoked ham. Cashews and roasted chestnuts are plentiful.

On Dec. 24, we usually stay up at night to wait for the midnight mass. With the temperature at about 60 degrees F, friends, neighbours and acquaintances gather around outside without fear of getting cold. As midnight draws near, people light firecrackers, which continues on until the mass is over. Then each family have a small get together in their own bouse for a special midnight snack of ham, homemade bread and hot chocolate. Dec. 25, Christmas Day is mostly for children. With their best dresses and suits, they go around to houses of people they know, especially their godmothers and godfathers. Children kissing the elder's hands or put them onto their foreheads as an outstanding gesture of respect.

The children are then given money as presents. On the night of Christmas, different groups of choir members or glee club singers from schools and bands go around to sing or play Christmas carols.

So, no matter how we celebrate Christmas, the spirit and joys behind it remain unchanged and more so blessed.

WHICH IS THE REAL SANTA CLAUS?

Yes, there is a Santa Claus — and he lives with Mrs. Claus at 45 Marsh Dr in Belleville.

"And I heard him exclaim as he rose out of sight. Merry Christmas to all and to all a good night."

For the seventh year in a row, Bruce and Marjorie Nickle have donned their second identities as the famous North Pole couple, circling the area at different benefits and Christmas parties. They're probably better known, however, for their elaborately decorated home, which has become a Belleville tradition.

Carrying on the memory of Billy Foster, a local youth who was killed in an accident on Christmas Eve in 1958, the two have continued to add to their evergrowing display of Santas, workshops, nativity scene and other assorted holiday

And on Dec. 24, they run almost all day without a bite to eat while preparing costumes for almost 100 volunteers who greet families bringing their children to see Santa. Last year, the Nickles greeted over 4,000 people during the one night. But the costs do begin to add up since they cover expenses on their own with the disability pension he receives from Canada Post. Despite things like an electric bill increasing by $300, one of Santa's seven beards which costs $400, an additional storage shed that has to be built, new household wiring to accomodate everything and adding on to the display, the couple continues to carry on the Christmas tradition.

Not only do they carry on the tradition, but they go beyond just acting like Santa and Mrs. Claus.

The first party's the hardest, but once she (Mrs. Nickle) puts on the costume, to me she becomes Mrs. Claus," Nickle said.

With their new identities, the couple travels to different groups, listening to requests and even converting a few non-believers along the way.

A TWINKLE IN HIS EYE

Santa Claus (Bruce Nickle) can't help but have a twinkle in his eye after a special reward from Mrs. Claus (Marjorie Nickle).

Even though their friends tell them there's no Santa Claus, some children "can swing back if they want to believe," he said with a twinkle in his eye that's

Some people, however, don't need any converting, such as a child on Marsh Drive who ran into the house to tell his mother he had seen Santa driving Mr. Nickle's car. Others just want a few questions answered, such as how many elves he has working at the North Pole with

For those who are interested, at last count there were 4,397 elves including those who are retired but still live there. This reporter couldn't help but ask.

They do receive a token amount of money from a handful of the 30 parties they appear at in December but they don't make anything near a profit. Everything is nanced by themselves and operated t..rough volunteers from the public and the post office.

in their mailbox, Santa and Mrs. Claus thank you. To others who wish to help keep this Belleville tradition alive through a donation, thank you as well.

After all the wrapping paper is put away and the decorations are taken down, the true spirit of Christmas — giving — lives on. With people like Bruce and Mar-jorie Nickle, it can't help but live on.

A RURAL SCHOOL CHRISTMA

The Christmas concert was the stellar event of the year in the rural school era. Return with me now to yesteryear for a typical Christmas concert of the era. The time was 1931, the place a one-room school with an attendance of 40 pupils, five of whom were in Grade XI - pardon me, I mean Fifth class.
In mid-November the teacher began looking through Christmas concert books for dialogues, drills and recitations for the program, which she would assign to the pupils, according to their ability.

The older ones loved the dialogues, especially one with a negro role in it — they just loved to blacken their faces for that part. If there were one involving a teacher, all the older girls wanted that part. There were many comic ones - or really good one about Papa painting the parlour usually brought down the house

After weeks of practising, the big night arrived. The school room was gaily decorated and the teacher had created a make-shift stage by stringing sheets on a wire across the front to separate the platform from the audience. The boy who looked after the fire had carefully stoked the big Triple Crown heater, lanterns were hung from the ceiling and all was in short speech by the chairman of the even-ing. This gentleman and another who represented Santa Claus had been carefulhand-picked by the teacher. They would probably be members of the threeman trustee board or maybe a father who wasn't too happy with Junior's last report card.

The teachers were an astute breed. Didn't every teacher know that come May and salary negotiating time, her success in obtaining a raise depended on the success of that concert? Every teacher thought of at least a $100. raise from the generous $500. - $600. salary she was now getting. If she were very brash and that concert an unqualified success who knows? She just might as for a $100 raise.

The chairman made his customary speech and then came the various numbers. There were many humorous dialogues, but the recitations brought

One of the older girls recited "The Wreck of the Hesperus", complete with gestures and all. There would be a few noist eyes and a few lumps in throats. Ah! It was beautiful.

A tiny girl in a barely audible voice recited something about her dolly, proudly holding it up to the audience. A group of shy little girls joined hands and sang a little son, swaying slightly to the cadence of the music.

the program. The teacher put a march on the gramaphone, cranked it up and the pupils marched around the platform, pro-ud as peacocks. They did all sorts of difficult manoeuvres and never once made a

Sometimes when the teacher knew some of the pupils couldn't recite or sing, she would have them play a piece on the mouth organ or maybe do a step-dance. No one was ever left out.

All the while you could hear a pin drop. If any one felt an urge to cough or sneeze it was halted in mid-air by glares from the rest of the audience. Moreover they were packed so tightly into that room there just wasn't room to cough or sneeze.

At the grand finale, the religious significance of the season was not forgot ten. The smaller pupils sang their little hearts out in the children's classic "Away in a Manger". The audience was visibly stirred by the hauntingly beautiful "Silent Night" rendered by the older

Last of all came Santa Claus. There was always a tree and the teacher made sure every pupil got at least one present by having the pupils draw names. Of course there were always presents for the teacher too.

All too soon the concert was over. Each trustee in his secret heart was congratulating himself on the choice of the teacher. It had been quite a decision and there had been a few qualms. Several other applicants were much older — this one was only 19 and fresh from Normal School, but she was certainly worth every cent of her $500. annual salary

The men went out to get the sleighs and untie the horses from the fence posts. The women chatted gaily as they waited.

"Your Nellie was just wonderful," one mother beamed. "Oh, so was your Jimmie," the other replied. And another smi happily to herself as she thought 'What are they talking about? My Tommy can act rings around their kids.

What a shame all came to an end! Today's pupils will never know the ecstasy of acting in the rural school Christmas concert. It's extinct without any possibility of a return - how could you have a rural school concert without a rural school? I'm told today's pupils don't even have a spelling Bee - poor

All we seniors have now is nostalgia the memories invoke and I would be willing to bet there are lots of seniors out there who would gladly give their eye teeth, if they were still intact, just to attend one more rural school Christmas concert.

CENTRAL AMERICAN CHRISTMAS

By Francis Kavanagh
For most Canadian youngsters,
Christmas is the last thing on their minds when summer holidays begin. Christmas falls anywhere from the beginning to the middle of summer depending on where you live in Central or South America.

Manager scene is traditional

Elsa Wilson, a native Chilean, said Christmas today is a commerical package sent south from North America. She said it includes artificial trees and snow. But many of the older traditions remain.

The traditional manger scene that was found in every home 25 years ago has been left to the church, while people opt to decorate in typical North American Chileans are predominately Catholic and attend midnight mass. The church in most parts of Central and South America is often the only source of refuge, and around Christmas, it offers hope to the people.

After mass, Chileans return home to share coffee and Pan d'Pascua (fruit bread). The bread is comparable to Canadian fruit cakes but is drier with less fruit and a doughier base. It is too at in Chile to get excited about big meals but the warm weather livens the streets with music and dance. Chileans are festive, extending best wishes and hope to neighbours and family

In El Salvador, Milady Cavazos said the meaning of Christmas is the birth of Christ. In many places, she said, people are too poor to buy new clothes, let alone the extravagant gifts of the North American Christmas Christmas is celebrated on Dec. 24, culminating with midnight mass. Cavazos said people generally relax and take a couple days of work to reunite with neighbours.

Ponche is a favourite drink of Guatemelans at Christmas time, said Vilma Barrios. It is a fruit drink made of coconut milk, pineapples, apples, grapes and papaya. Children enjoy ponche as much as adults, so very little alcohol, if any, is added.

AN EARLY VERSION OF THE NORTH AMERICAN SANTA

The North American Santa Claus as we know him today was largely developed and popularized by the American artist Thomas Nast. This version of a rosy-cheeked Santa, smoking his Dutch pipe with toys under his arm, is perhaps the most famous. It was done for Harper's Weekly in the 1880s.

TRADITIONAL CHRISTMAS

By Francis Kavanagh

Five years ago, Johanne St-Amant and 14 others travelled to midnight mass in a sled drawn by two horses. It was a throwback to the old days, but, like the tiny community of Windsor. Que., St-Amant is a traditionalist.

Early Christmas eve, young children are tucked into bed for a couple hours of shut eye to ready themselves for the long night.

Christmas starts at midnight mass where people pack small churches and cathedrals alike to join with their extended family in celebration of the birth of Christ.

St-Amant said she never misses midnight mass.

After mass, families return home to tourtieres browning in the oven and ragout (a stew with pork balls) simmering on the stove. Plates of iced cookies arplaced high above the reach of sticky little hands and the yuletide log is lit. The family feast begins as members sit down at the candle lit table.

Gifts are opened after the meal and the party stretches long into the morning. As the sun comes up on Christmas day, St-Amant and her family are ready to snuggle in bed for few hours rest.

The refugees were held under close guard, but at Christmas time, they were allowed a little more freedom. On Christmas Eve Luong was able to attend mass of his denomination, Catholic, and stay up until midnight.

Money was scarce in the camps, but Luong said relatives from other countries often sent money so goods at the open markets could be purchased. However, goods were very expensive at the markets because venders had to bribe guards to let them set up in the confines of the

Meghan Beattie, 4, was one of the many children at the Omni Pre-School who presented some of their own toys to Ralph Boomhower, chairman of the annual Belleville Fire Department's toy drive. Each child gave their toys to help out Santa in his busy schedule. In fact, each child had a chance to change his or her mind when they were offered the toys back. "It helps them understand sharing in a different way," said Lorne Thompson, chairman of the parent's board. (Smith photo)

Paralegal charges intimidation

'I feel like a quarterback going into a game where the offensive line belongs to the opposite team and so do the referees," said Bob Smith of Ontario Paralegal in a recent interview.

The owner of a Belleville paralegal company, he has been charged with giving legal advice in violation if the Law Society Act, the latest in a series of charges against paralegals across Ontario by the Law Society of Upper Canada.

He calls the charges "intimidation" and wonders about the likelihood of getting a fair hearing.

"I'm being prosecuted by the Law Society of Upper Canada," he says. can't find a lawyer to defend me who isn't a member of that law society and the judge on the bench is a former member.

'But I'm a crusader," he adds. "I don't want to give

Mr. Smith is the second paralegal in the area to face charges of illegally giving legal advice. The first were the owners of Quinte Paralegal, who were charged in the summer. The charges against Mr. Smith bring the total brought against paralegals in Ontario to about 25. Paralegals in the province are worried about the charges, which seem to be increasing since a government task force was started in June to investigate rights paralegals and possible regulations for the growing industry. The report is ex pected in the spring, and the Paralegal Association Smith is a member, believes the prosecutions are an attempt to "circumvent parliamentary pro-cedure." he said.

Paralegals fear the Law Society is trying to close down as many paralegals as possible before the report and establish precedents in court before the law can be changed to regulate paralegals.

Through malicious prosecutions, they are trying to establish a law by precedent rather than wait for the Government of Ontario to write the law," Smith said.

The Paralegal Association of Ontario is asking the government to place a moratorium on prosecutions against paralegals until after the government task force report.

Many people charge that thousands of Canadian children are addicted to a drug.

They aren't referring to crack or LSD; they charge that Ritalin, an artificial stimulant used to control hyperactivity, is making "zombies" out of their children. Many other people, however, disagree.

There is no clear cut answer to many of the questions that have been raised and, in fact, an inquiry is now investigating it under the jurisdiction of the ministry of national health and welfare. Don Moore, a volunteer with the Citizens Commission on Human Rights, is in charge of informing Canadians east of Toronto on what he sees as the dangers associated with the drug. After he approached Quinte Weekly News, we also went to Dr. Arthur Wolfgarth, chief psychologist for Prince Ed-ward Heights in Picton for a contrary point of view. Wolfgarth contends that Ritalin is needed in many cases and that the horror stories are only isolated

This isn't their story, though, but the story of the children of Canada who have been diagnosed as hyperactive by the psychiatric profession. To read their story, turn to page 14.

Hugh Hefner at Playboy/ I really think he should be told, I mean, this is startling news

Apparently, though, big breasts a la Jayne Mansfield or Marilyn Monroe are so fashionable that hun-dreds of thousands of women are undergoing surgery to achieve them. According to the American Society of American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons, the trend towards surgery is increasing every year.

In 1986 alone (the last year for which figures are available), almost 100,000 women joined the more than one million U.S. women who have had surgery to increase

That's a lot of women — approximately one in every 125 women you meet in the U.S. has undergone some form of breast-augmentation surgery.

SHAPING THE NEWS An interesting fact to come out of the recent federal election is that a study of The Toronto Star's 1988 political coverage of the party leaders exactly parallelled pontical coverage of the party leaders exactly parallelled the election results.

During that period, 3,946 items contained the name Mulroney, 1,901 contained the name Turner and 1,048 contained the name Broadbent for a total of 6,894 stories. In percentages, 57.22 stories mentioned Mulroney, 27.57 mentioned Turner and 15.2 per cent mentioned Broadbent.

That translates into 168.8 seats for the Tories in the 295-seat House of Commons, 81.35 seats for the Liberals and 44.8 seats for the NDP. The actual standings after the election were 169 Tory, 83 Liberal and 43 NDP.
"How's that for balanced coverage," said the newspaper's senior editorial writer, Nate Laurie.
But that begs the chicken-and-egg question: Which came first? Did its coverage reflect what happened in the election or cause it? Maybe if you say it's so, it becomes so.

That's a frightening thought.
Maybe the Star had better quit running stories about the greenhouse effect and how California is going to fall into the Pacific Ocean. Please, write the Star and tell them to stop before it's too late.

A good loser

When do losers become winners in local elections? One way is through a recount, but another is by just being a good loser

We met a good loser the other day over lunch. The gentleman in question lost his first race for municipal office in the Nov. 14 election, but he was philosophical about the results. The man didn't want his name used or anything else that might identify him, a healthily non-egotistical attitude when we suggested an editorial on the subject.

He ran for office against incumbents who were friends of his and who he felt were doing a good job, but he decided to run anyway because he felt it was time for a change, and he wanted to give voters a choice. He also felt he had something to offer to the residents of his municipality.

He ran a clean campaign with no mudslinging or name-calling and can't see why other election fights couldn't have been cleaner. He had to learn the rules of politics, though. When a voter would "badmouth" one of his opponents, he would speak up for them. He had to be told to work for his cwn votes and let his opponents worry about theirs.

He accepted his defeat philosophically without complaint - no press stories for him about people trying to keep him out of office through underhanded tactics - simply saying that the people had chosen. Though he naturally would have preferred to win, he said he was satisfied that he had given people a real choice and was pleased that so many had voted for him in his first campaign.

Although he isn't sure he intends to ever run again - he is a retiree - he decided not to let his local activity just stop with one brief fling at elected politics. He volunteered to sit on a municipal committee and will be working for the good of his area that way for the next three years.

Now that's a healthy attitude for future candidates: run the best and cleanest campaign you can, accept the results and seek another way of serving your municipality if you lose.

Just when I was about to pen 20,000 words in praise of your editorial abilities. you request correspondents to be brief! Ah well, here is the bare bones version.

Your paper is a pleasure to read because:

1. Your writing is literate and lively:

2. Your articles are informative and entertaining;

3. Your commentaries are reasoned and fair.

'We will be watching

The Editor

A letter in the Intelligencer Dec. 1st from T.I. Bernard prompted me to respond. You demand an apology from Mrs. Kellaway to the mayor and council? How amusing!

Mrs. Kellaway was only one of fifty-plus who sought an investigation from the Department of Municipal Affairs. This decision was not made lightly but after months of observing and listening to broadcasts of city business.

The report from the Department of Municipal Affairs handed down in Council was not entirely accurate, whether through fault of their presiding officers or of the media. In any case I don't believe we have heard the last of this affair as Mr. Brandt, head of the Conservative Party, has questioned the validity of the report in the legislature

Nevertheless we still have double standards existing today. In spite of protests by residents of the Charles Street - Victoria Avenue area, a developer has been given permission to enlarge an existing building without adequate front yard space, a buffer zone to nearby properties, and the required number of parking spaces per unit.

Another developer on Cannifton road is exempted from contributing to the walkway parkland strip along the Moira River but will build a sidewalk "nowhere"

THEN THERE'S THE

"nowhere" in front of his building along a busy "future" four lane strip of These are just two contraventions passed already since the election. I would advise the public to make themselves aware of city business by watching Channel 4 in the evening after council meets to view the taped version. Hopefully we will receive the coverage in its entirety with no technical interrup tions or black outs. We will be watching. T.I. Smith

STUDENTS SEND A MESSAGE

By David Botting When Ron Stewart invited students at Quinte Secondary to form a SADD group (Students Against Driving Drunk), he wasn't sure anyone would turn up — a few years ago, the school tried to form a SADD group but it foundered on apathy

After receiving a request to attend a meeting on the subject at the health unit, he announced it on the spur of the moment over the school's public address system at the end of the day. He wasn't even sure anyone had heard the announcement, but 12 students showed Ironically, each of the 12 students thought they were the only one in-terested in starting a SADD group.

"They found out they weren't alone in their concern," says Mr. Stewart, staff advisor to the group. Coincidentally, a former Quinte Secondary school student arrived in Belleville at the same time after having driven from Sault Ste. Marie. He visited the school, upset because he had seen so many accidents, and sug-gested the school should put up some kind of sign to alert students to the dangers of drinking and driving.

So that's just what they

Grill's Fruits and Vegetables donated a wrecked van and asked Sherwood Towing to tow it to the school. There, the students had Tom's Towing turn the van over on its side and they erected a sign with plywood donated Guilevin International and paint from Coulter's Hardware.

The result is a highly visible reminder of the dangers of drinking and driving on the school's front lawn in time for the Christmas season

The SADD group also sold Candy Grams on the subject of drinking and driving to raise funds for more events and education on the issue. Students bought over 1,200 Candy Grams to give to friends.

The whole project came together with startling speed. A meeting of secondary school represen-tatives was held Dec. 7th and the Quinte SADD group managed to get their sign and van before school was out last week just two weeks later, to the surprise of Mr. Stewart

"This is the most active, gung ho group of kids I've ever been associated with."

The goal of the group is not to persuade high school students to stop drinking — and they acknowledge that drinking is a widespread problem in area high schools. Rather, they try to stop students from driving after drinking.

"Some people's highlight of the weekend is getting drunk." said Margaret Parkin, a Grade 10 stu-dent. "That's up to them— but it has to stop behind the wheel.

They hope to reach Grade 9 students new to high school before they get caught up in drinking and before they get their driving licences.

There are more flowering house plants sold at this time of the year than all others combined. And since most of them are purchased as gifts, this can result in a number of problems.

First of all, if the recipient is a neophyte, unay not be aware that the Christmas plants, like all flowering plants, require special care. Secondly, they often display them where they will be most visible, without realizing that the location could be totally wrong for the plant's welfare. And finally, since they are a gift, the frustration is even greater when the plants degenerate to a mass of yellowed leaves and bare stems.

It doesn't have to happen. Many of the Christmas flowering plants can be preserved for months and many can become a permanent part of your house plant collection as long as you realize that each plant has individual needs plant has individual needs.

There was a time when the Christmas flowering plant spectrum consisted of poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamen, but not anymore. Walk into a plant store today and you'll find: Hibiscus, Reigor begonias, Jerusalem cherry, Christmas cactus, Kalanchoes, Mums and Norfolk Island Pines, just

ARDENING AND GROWING By Ross Hawthorne

Today we are going to deal with two of the Big Three that make up 75 per cent of the sales, beginn-ing with the one that outsells all the rest by far.

There is good reason why the poinsettia is the Christmas favourite. Dark-green oak-like foliage. mounted by brilliant sepals in various shades of red, pink or white that with proper treatment should last for weeks, even months. To prolong their life,

Christmas plants require special care

recognize that the actual flowers are those yellowgreen nubs centering the sepals. Remove those (simply pinch them out), and the colour will be greatly prolonged.

By all means, display the Poinsettia during the evening hours where it gives maximum display as evening nours where it gives maximum display as long as during the day, you move it to a south win-dow where it will get whatever sun the winter season allows. But when you choose the night-time location, be sure of one thing - no drafts, otherwise, leaf drop is guaranteed. And I'm not just talking about a draft frome, a window. The constant about a draft from a window. The greatest of-fenders are heat vents mounted with a deflector. Even a vent with heat directed from eight or ten feet away is enough to start a cascade of leaves. And when you turn the lights out, move the plant to the coolest part of the room.

Leaf drop usually sponsors such counteractions as excessive watering and that just compounds the felony. In fact, the Poinsettia should be allowed to dry down until the foliage starts to droop and then soak. Do not feed.

Everyone who received a Poinsettia for the first time want to bring back into colour for a second season. Anyone who has tried will tell you it reseason. Anyone who has tried will cell you it requires a strict regimen involving ten hours of sun and 14 hours of total darkness from September through November. Most of them will also tell you it's just not worth it.

it's just not worth it.

The first thing to recognize is the care of the second most popular Christmas flowering plants.

Azalea - is that it is a Rhododendron - the gorgeous flowering shrub that puts on its flowering display in late Spring when the humidity is high and when day temperatures are in the 60s and 70s and night temperatures are in the 40s and 50s. In other words, when the short sh the Azalea abhors heat and dry air.

As far as light goes, it likes a sunny window dur-ing the day. Again, avoid heat vents and increase ing the day. Again, avoid heat vents and increase humidity by setting the plant or a plant asucer containing about an inch of aquarium gravel. Add water to the saucer daily. Recognize, too, that the garden Rhododendron is at is peak during the spring rains and that provides a clue to its watering. needs. In contrast to the Poinsettias, it is almost impossible to overwater the Azalea. In other words impossible to overwater the Azalea. In other words, make sure you keep the growing medium (which is almost pure peat) thoroughly moist at all times. If you live in an area where the water is alkaline, particularly if you depend on a well, you have another problem. The Azalea prefers acid soils. If you are a tea drinker a daily addition of used tea bags to the pot is a good idea. Otherise, feed every third watering with an acid-type Rhododendron feetilizer diluted to quarter strength of label in-

One last point. To help the buds unfold, pinch away blossoms as they wilt

If you get your Azalea through the holiday season with leaf structure intact, contratulations. Then you may be able to grow it through for another season. But we'll save those instructions until a further time.

Ritalin: cause or cure?

By John G. Smith

Robert (not his real name) was having a great deal of difficulty concentrating in school, always moving about and get-ting into mischief. After consultation teachers, his mother took him to a pediatrician. Through consultation with psychiatrists and a neurologist, he was diagnosed as being hyperactive and was put on Ritalin.

While on the drug, sixyear-old Robert suffered severe weight loss and had nightmares that were so severe he still can't sleep without the lights He complained of headaches, pains in his joints and bedwetting.

also talked of suicide and once even held a toy gun to his head saying, "I just want to shoot myself."

Robert's mother took him off the drug and on June 8, 1987, he was expelled from school.

Sarah (not her real name) was put on Ritalin at the age of two. At the age of 13, she was "addicted" to the drug and slashed her wrists because the psychiatrist threatened to take her off

In order to buy Ritalin on the streets (now common in many western cities) she turned to prostitution.

She now won't speak to her mother because she put her on Ritalin.

These are just two of 15 case studies Don Moore carries with him to prove to people that Ritalin is destroying the lives of the children that it's suppos-

'There 45,000 Canadian school children on the drug and there's absolutely no benefit to it," said Moore. 'It's an amphetamine ...

'All Ritalin does is put them into a chemical straight jacket," he said.

But Moore doesn't only complain about the drug itself but the way the psychiatric profession as a whole labels children as Psychiatrists labelling normal child ac-tivities as a disorder," he said. "Giving them heavy hallucinogenic drugs more potent than LSD.

for the purpose of 'mental therapy', is an absolute violation of these children's rights."

The normal childhood activities Moore refers to are listed in a brochure called "how psychiatry is making drug addicts out of our children.

Quoting the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, the brochure lists the symptoms involved in diagnosing a child as hyperactive under the headings of inattention, impulsivity and hyperactivity.
Under "inattention".

five symptoms are listed, three of which should be found in a hyperactive child. The child often fails to finish things he or she starts, often fails listen. is easily distracted, has difficulty concentrating or sticking to a play activity.

The five symptoms listed under "impulsivity" are acting before thinking, shifting from one activity to another, having difficulty organizing work, needing a lot of supervision, frequently calling out in class and having a difficulty in awaiting a turn in group situations.

Only two of five possibilities need to be matched under the hyperactive category, including excessive running and climbing, having dif-ficulty sitting still or fidgeting, having difficulty staying seated, moving excessively during sleep and always being on

For a diagnosis, these symptoms should be onset before the age of seven, last for at least six months and not due to schitzophrenia, affective disorder or severe or profound mental retardation. If a child is considered to fulfill the requirements under inattention and impulsivity, they are diagnosed as Attention Deficit Disorder Without Hyperactivity or conversely is hyperactive. This, according to Moore, describes an average, healthy child.

Moore charges that psychiatrists and physians who reccommend Ritalin are only interested in making money off of its sale. "They off of its sale. "They know the side effects of the drug but they're not taking any responsibility," he said.

Side effects he cites Ritalin as causing include anorexia, epileptic seizures, high blood pressure, can make children more hyperactive and can cause Tourette's syndrome. He also claims the drug is addictive and that the result of an overdose can be death.

"I have yet to meet one parent who says their child was helped by Ritalin," charges Moore.

Michael (not his real name) was six years old when the school notified his mother that he might be hyperactive. He had habits such as walking over desks, interfering with the class, pulling girl's hair and punching other students and had a great deal of difficulty keeping on track.

After a series of tests with a psychiatrist and pediatrician, neurologist at Sick Kids Hospital in Toronto put him on Ritalin. This was seven years ago. Now, his dosage is being cut down and he's a leader in his class and openly expresses gratitude to his mother for having him put on the

This is the type of story Dr. Arthur Wolfgarth has experienced involving Ritalin. "For every tragic case there are 100 cases that are just the op-posite," said Wolfgarth. But even this supporter of Ritalin admits that it's not the "end-all" answer to hyperactive children. But when does he say a child is hyperactive? Most physicians will take a conservative approach and won't diagnose a child as hyperactive if at all possi-ble, he said But there , he said. But there are children in his mind that need help

A "high level of motor activity" is one of the activity" is one of the first clues that a child may be hyperactive, he said. The fact that a five or six-year-old child can't watch his favourite TV show for ten minutes is a good rule of thumb, he said. "And some kids are literally swinging from the rafters." These problems usually compound themselves in school environment when a child can't stick to an assignment or begins talking about irrelevant topics when their mind

"Ritalin is one of the many tools which can help a hyperactive child assume his own reigns,

But how does Ritalin calm a child down if it's a stimulant?

Many hyperactive children apparently lack a chemical substance in their brain that enables their brain that enables them to control their behavior. Ritalin gives them this control, he said, but it shouldn't be the only cure looked at. He says that any responsible physician will always try to change a child's diet first. Unfortunately, this only helps 20 per cent of the children who have been diagnosed. Even Ritalin will only help in about 40 per cent of the cases.

The drug dosage is usually started at a minimal amount and steadily increased until the appropriate dosage for the child is found. strict medical supervision and if a child is exhibiting 'zombie-like' qualities, the dosage is immediately

If there is no response to the Ritalin after a period of time, another drug is usually reccommended such as Cylert. Although Cylert doesn't act as immediately as Ritalin, it also doesn't have to be administered three times a day - only once

Something which may cause many of the pro-blems which can occur is the parents. parents follow the mentality that if one dosage works, two is even better ... or instead of giving Johnny his medication in the morning and the afternoon, I'll give him two dosages in the morning." In fact, mis-dosage is the problem he cites for many of the negative side effects.

But if a child is given two much of the drug, can he become addicted?

No, says Wolfgarth. Ritalin apparently does not have the addictive qualities of an amphetamine

If a person has an addictive personality (usually due to another psychological problem) there is a chance that he or she may think they're addicted, but this isn't the fault of the drug, he

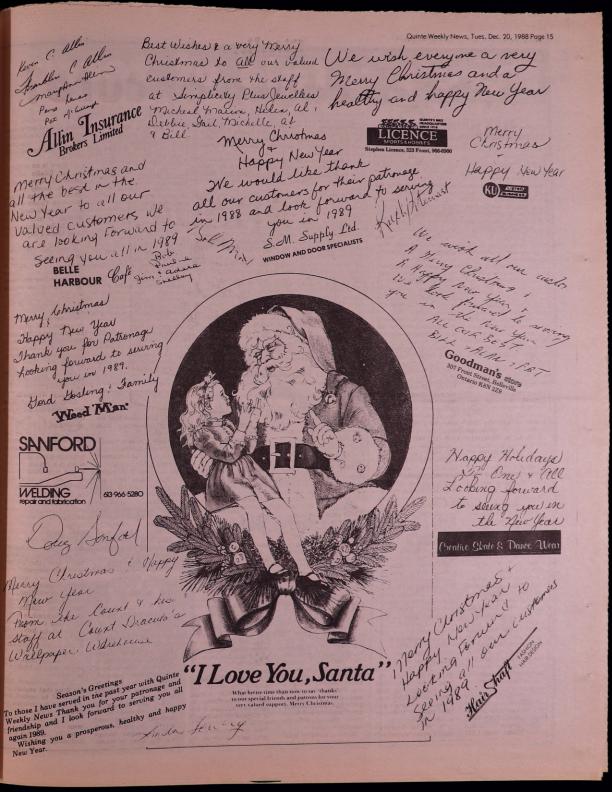

When discussing the suicidal tendencies some children have shown, he blames the child's environment and misdosage instead of the drug. If the drug isn't working, "everybody's telling them that they're not behaving properly," he said. "There's quite a psychological stigma associated with that."

"The chances of over-osing on Ritalin are about the same as a person taking too much salt if a group looks long and hard enough, they could probably find a case involving this as well."

"It (Ritalin) helps more people than it hinders,"

"It's unfortunate but any drug that enables an individual to control his own mind is mistaken to be a control in itself

"It's a controversial issue to be sure ... hopefully someday we'll find another answer."

The city of Moenchengladhach, West Germany, prides itself on the many floral displays scattered throughout the city. Before paying a return visit to Martina, the thorough, West German detectives learned that Hans had been a hairdresser. They canvassed all the hairdressing establishments in the city and were successful in locating Hans' place of employment. He had worked there until the previous April 29, when he simply didn't show up for work. The owner had not reported him missing, maybe because Hans was owed a full month's pay. However, the owner had called him at his residence and had been told that he no longer lived there. that he no longer lived there Charges of giving legal advice were laid against Mr. Smith and his 17-yearold secretary hired under the Community Futures program Oct. 27 after a Law Society investigator posed as a client, asking Mr. Smith to draw up a will. The investigator lied to Mr. Smith, telling him he was not an investigator for the Law Society.

The investigator, Mr. Stephen Douglas Jones, also signed a memorandum of authorization in which he stated: "I certify that I am not employed by or associated with the Law Society of Ontario or any member(s) of the Law Society of Ontario, I also certify that I have a genuine need for Paralegal Services and that it is not my intention to entrap the above named Paralegal Agent." Paralegals offer a muchneeded service, he said. He estimates that nine out of ten people don't have a will, often because they are afraid to go to a lawyer, either because they are afraid of the complexity of the law or the high prices some lawyers charge.

Redesigned auto produces 'great look'

People are always asking "What's the best car

My response is always the same: I can honestly answer that question only by taking into consideration what the person is looking for in a car.

But when people ask "What was the car you enjoyed driving the most?," I must say the Volkswagen Jetta Trophy 16-valve has to be one of my personal

The Jetta, as many of you may know, has its roots in the VW Golf. VW took the Golf, re-designed the rear roof and added a trunk. This extra length really gives the Jetta a finished look.

The car I was given to test was the Trophy Edition, a double overhead-cam version of the Jetta. This Trophy edition of the Jetta will be limited to 500

(Since the release of the Trophy, VW has decided to make a regular version of it: the GTX Jetta. This car, I'm told, is almost identical to the Trophy.)

Trophy and you know this car was made to perform. The 15-inch BBS mag wheels give the car a real performance look. This is accented by the fender flairs and front and rear spoilers.

One unique feature I lik-ed about the Trophy edition was the roof-mounted antenna. This little feature sets the car apart from others, with traditionally placed antennas.

The car's interior is designed to hold the driver spirited during manoeuvres. Here VW uses the best driving seat on the market: the Recaro. Usually an option on exotic, higher-priced Euro-pean performance vehicles, a pair of these form-fitting, high-performance seats is in the Trophy.

Once you fit yourself into these great Recaro seats you find a very logical and well laid-out dash. Large switches and knobs operate the lights and heaters. strumentation on all Jettas is large and easy to read at a glance)d To brighten up with manually operated

My test Trophy was a four-door - one that I actually found a lot more convenient than a two-door; though once in the back seat, I discovered there was enough room for no more than two adults. The Trophy's 1.8 liter double overhead-cam is the reason I love the car. This ever-willing power plant was a joy to drive.

Once the key was turned, the engine just begged to be driven. I found the gearing on the transmission to be better this year - allowing the driver better lowend torque compared to last year's engine, which I tested in the Golf. This improvement gave the car so uch more usable power in all driving situations.

Coupling the 123horsepower engine to the car's 15-inch wheels is a five-speed

For a very controlled ride, the Jetta Trophy and GTX get sport suspensions that comprise stiffer springs and thicker sway bars in front, to complement the MacPherson-strut suspen-

On the rear torsion-beam suspension the springs are stiffer also, and a sway bar is added. Add all this to very responsive rack-andpinion steering and you have a car that I feel can corner as well or better than a lot of higher-priced sports cars

To stop this brute force a complete set of disc brakes on all four corners is on the regular Jetta). setup worked well, and even after repeated stops I found no hint of brake wear or deterioration of stopping power.

Getting back to more practical things, cargo space in the trunk of this car is just 'mahvelous' to coin a phrase. Also included is a covered space that can be opened up where the centre arm-rest folds down in the back seat, so the interior con be used for carrying skis. This is one car that looks as fast as it drives, and to me that says a lot

VW has added plenty of improvements to this otherwise fine car and made it one of the besthandling cars on the market, regardless of price.

COMMANDO: (1986), 88 minutes

Director: Mark L. Lester

Starring: Arnold Schwarzenegger (John Matris), Rae Dawn Chong (Cindy), Dan Hedaya (Arios), Vernon Wells (Bennett)

There is one thing to be said about Arnold Schwarzenegger films: they teach you lessons. If you watch Commando you will not have any problem about remembering rules:

1. Never irritate Arnold Schwarzenegger.

2. Never let Arnold Schwarzenegger anywhere

3. If you are the leader of Arnold Schwarzeneger's enemies, make sure that your followers can hit what they shoot at.

 If you ever co-star in a film starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, never wear a sleeveless shirt when he is also on-camera.

This story is about John Matrix (Schwarzeneg ger), an ex-soldier. He has given up the military life to raise his young daughter in a more normal en-vironment. The dream ends when mercenaries kidnap his daughter. He is told that she will be killed unless he kills the governor of a Central American country. Matrix doesn't particularly want to kill the governor, because he is a friend. He is also strongly opposed to having his daughter murdered.

The frequency of the words "kill" and "murder" in the preceding paragraph should hint at what this movie is about. The presence of Arnold Schwarzenegger, in the starring role, should provide an added clue.

There is much violence and non-stop action in Matrix's race to find his daughter. It is not the type of violence that nightmares are made of, hovever. Either Matrix is bulletproof or none of his op-ponents have any shooting ability at all. The result is an entertaining but cartoon-like adventure story.

Mark Lester's most well-known other film was Stephen King's Firestarter. As well as the violence, there is some coarse

Recycler turns junk to treasure

By Shirley Langer

Patrick Charbonneau of Trenton has disassembled thousands of appliances that people put out at curbside on special garbage collection days. Everything from teakettles to stoves and television sets are reduced to neat piles of steel, aluminum, brass, copper and zinc. By the time Patfinishes, there's not much left to put back out at the curb.

Pat considers himself a conscientious recycler. Several times a year he hauls the scrap metal to the scrap yard in his car. He sorts and saves all the screws, nuts and bolts. He exchanges parts with other do-it-yourself fixit people. He gives all the TV tubes to repairmen. Although Pat enjoys the extra money derived from the sale of the scrap, he keeps at it because "people waste too much".

Now 68 years old, Pat started this activity after he was disabled in an industrial accident 30 years ago. After several operations, he still had stiff fingers, so he started picking up cast-off TV sets to take apart.

"It was a good way to get my fingers moving," he says, "and after awhile, I figured I might as well sell the scrap".

Pat explained that in those days, the only part of a TV that he threw away was the glass because the insides were mostly metal. The TV frames were made of weed, so he converted them into cupboards with shelves.

"I would do 15 or 20 a week, because people started bringing them to me," he says.

Keeping New Year's resolutions

We're nearing the end of 1988 but there is still time to tidy up a few loose ends.

Readers will be glad to know that I have not reneged on my decision to lose weight in 1988. Jan. 1st I resolved to stay away from rich desserts, second helpings and greasy french fries. I intend to fulfill that resolution tomorrow afternoon between the hours of 2 and 3 p.m. It will be tough, but that's what separates the men from the boys. Especially the fat men from the thin boys.

I don't understand why women are always going on and off diets. They moan about how hard it is to stick to their diets and how hard it is to lose weight.

Will power. That's all there is to it. Women just have to develop more will power. Like me. I expect it will be really tough tomorrow between 2 and 3 p.m. People will tempt me. I'm sure I'll want to give in, but I've got the will power to stick it out.

Sure, that hour without food will be agony, but I can do it without any whining or moaning.

And I'll lose weight. Sure I will. I plan to weigh myself at 2 p.m. and again at 3 p.m. to prove it.

Okay, so I plan to weigh in at 2 p.m. fully clothed and not at 3 p.m. But that shouldn't make much of difference. How much can a winter coat weigh? And shoes? And winter boots?

X X X X STIRRING UP TROUBLE

Last week I wrote about how big breasts are in. After publication, someone told me about breast augmentation surgery (don't you just love that phrase?) that involves surgery (don't you just love that phrase?) that invoives moving avoirdupois (fat) from one part of the body to another. You can guess from where to where.

Anyhow, seems that some people frown on that kind of surgery. Fat is sort of like silt. All those bad things we eat — PCBs, lead, heavy minerals, etc. — concentrate in the fat. Just like silt in Belleville harbour. And as long as we don't stirk in the constructed of the fat. don't stir it up, the concentrates don't move. But, say these people, moving fat is like stirring up the silt, with similar unforeseen consequences

Now that's why I don't exercise! Who wants to disturb the fat. I knew I had a good reason.

Appointment

The appointment of Al Lunenfeld, a local realtor, to Belleville's industrial development committee raises some serious questions, not because of any doubts about Mr. Lunenfeld's personal integrity but because of his position in the community as a realtor.

The situation is analagous to that of a few years ago when Peter Charbonneau, a former executive of Rollins Construction and now a realtor in Belleville, sat on the same committee. He resigned because he foresaw potential for conflict of interest.

The potential for conflict of interest is not hard to imagine. A realtor may very well have a vested interest in promoting a particular industry because he or she has property dealings with them. In fact, at the first meeting of the committe, Mr. Lunenfeld felt he had to withdraw from discussion on a matter because of a potential conflict of interest.

The appointment is particularly unfortunate because of the heat some city council members and the mayor have had to endure in the previous term over potential conflict of interest. The city can't afford any public doubts over the integrity of the industrial development or planning processes.

Some might think it unfair that Mr. Lunenfeld cannot serve the public on this committee simply because of his job. The situation, however, is analagous to the rigourous restrictions placed on real estate agents who wish to purchase property personally. The restrictions exist because of the potential for abuse of trust with their clients.

If Mr. Lunenfeld wishes to serve his community, he should consider serving on another, less sensitive committee

Christ in Christmas

Christmas began as a pagan festival that Christians adopted and renamed to celebrate the birth of Christ almost 2,000 years ago. Today, we find that Christmas has returned to the pagan festival it once was. In most of the hoopla and tinsel that marks the North American Christmas, how many notice the Nativity? How many notice the Christ child born in a manger? Very few.

We still sing the old carols, though fewer know the words, and we still talk of peace on earth among men of goodwill, though most few are referring to the peace of Christ.

Maybe it's time we changed the name - or rediscovered the Christ in Christmas.

Get the message

The Editor:
I enjoy hearing the antics of "The Kid" and "Big Brother". The latest story regarding the kid's efforts to earn money picking up beer bottles and cans was disturbing. I admire him very much for earning his own spending money this way. It is very sad realizing people are continuing to break the law by drinking in their cars and tossing the evidence out the window. What's it going to take to get the message across

Amendment hurts injured workers

I strongly oppose the amendment to the Workman's Compensation Act (Bill 162).

It is my belief that it strongly depletes my rights as an injured worker.

Mr. Isaac M. Singer The Inventor

Crime Flashback

MAX HAINES

Isaac Merritt Singer is remembered for two diverse activities. He was the founder of the Singer Sewing Machine Co., the giant world wide sewing empire, and was also one of the most prolific studs of all time. We'll let you decide whether or not he committed any crime

Isaac was born in 1811 in the village of Pittstown N.Y. of fine old German stock. As a young lad he distinguished himself as a better than average machinist and actor

When the machinist racket softened, he took to the road in travelling show up and down the eastern seaboard. In his spare time he chased girls, more often than not making dishonest women of them.

It was in this latter pursuit, while performing in Palmyra, N.Y., that he spotted 16-year-old Catherine Haley. Catherine was an early bloomer. She had luxuriant blonde hair, blue eyes and a variety of other attributes, normally associated with girls a few years older, all stacked in just the right

Isaac introduced himself. Catherine took one look at the six-foot tall, barrel-chested young man with the side whiskers and booming voice. She could do worse. Before you could say catchstitch, Isaac and Catherine were seeing each other on a regular

One fine evening, when the moon hung low over One time evening, when the moon nung low over Palmyra, they were doing what folks had been doing since Adam and Eve were an item. In walked Catherine's Daddy. You've heard of shotgun wed-dings. Next day Catherine became Mrs. Isaac

With little more than looks and personality, Isaac took-his bride to New York, where they rented a flat on Third Ave. Within two years, the union was using the stage name Isaac Merritt. In Baltimore he stayed with a family named Sponsler. Mr. Sponsler was in the oyster business, which might in some small way explain future events. Son of a gun, control to the stage of the s

A little over a month later, Mary Ann made a startling discovery. Certain biological functions which normally were as regular as clockwork were conspicuously absent. She wrote to Isaac, advising

Once she arrived with thoughts of wedding bells dancing in her head, Isaac confessed. He was married and had not bothered to obtain a divorce. Poor Mary Ann. not bothered to obtain a divorce. Four many Ann. This was a complication for which she was totally unprepared. Did Isaac have any suggestions?

Our boy suggested a nice flat on Third Ave. Mary Ann agreed. And that's how Isaac Singer had two wives living directly across the street from each other, neither having any idea of the other's

As time went by, Catherine tired of living in poverty. She complained continually, Isaac couldn't take it any longer. He moved, but not too far — just across the street to the waiting Mary Ann.

In the years which followed, Isaac managed to

In the years which followed, Isaac managed to make a living as an actor. He gave up the flat and travelled with Mary Ann. This cosy arrangement resulted in the birth of four more illegitimate children. In 1848, he came off the road and once again settled in a flat on Third Ave. in New York. It's a consist for fun, he dropped in on his deserted wife, Catherine, after an absence of many years. It's a cribute to Isaac's gift of gab that he managed to capie his long suffering wife into the bedroom. It was just like old times. Isaac took up where he had left off years earlier. Once more, he had two complete families living on Third Ave. One day, while walking the streets of Boston, Isaac spotted a sewing machine on display in a store window. His old machinist's instincts were aroused. It didn't bother him much when he discovered that Elias Howe held the patent on the machine. Isaac took the machine apart and Matthews. They kept having babies, but not one of them knew of the others' existence.

Isaac's business was booming, giving him the excuse that he had to travel. He made sure never to have his picture in the papers and shunned personal publicity of any kind. While Isaac spread good cheer in the bedroom, his sewing machines chugged away.

publicity of any kind. While Isaac spread good cheer in the bedroom, his sewing machines chugged away. He opened plants in Bridgeport, Conn. and Eliza-bethport, N.J. Isaac became a bona fide multi-mil-lionaire. When Elias Howe sued, Isaac was wealthy enough to settle the claim to everyone's satisfac

Out of fairness to Isaac, it should be pointed out that he took good care of all his women as his wealth grew. They now lived in fine homes and had liberal allowances.

Of course, it was bound to happen. One day he was driving in an open carriage with Mary Ann Sponsler (Mrs. Merritt) when he was spotted by Catherine, the legitimate Mrs. Singer. The bobbin hit the fan. Catherine made a scene after being informed by Mary Ann that she had borne her Isaac ten, count 'em, ten, children.

There was so much shouting on the streets that the newspapers smelled a story. The Police Gazette was the first publication to carry the juicy expose of the multi-millionaire Isaac Singer, who maintained one wife and three mistresses.

Isaac went about repairing fences. Mary McGonigal and Mary Walters didn't seem to mind the deception much. Mary Ann Sponsler was another stroy altogether. With 10 children she felt she should have some sort of rights. She wanted Isaac to divorce Catherine and legitimize her brood Catherine wouldn't hear of it, but Isaac had a plan. He found a gentleman who, for a price, would swear that he had an adulterous relationship with Catherine. In this way, Isaac was able to divorce Catherine and live with Mary Ann Sponsler. He steadfastly refused to marry the mother of his ten children.

What with one thing and another Isaac decided to Mothat with one thing and another, Isaac decided to divest himself of the everyday running of the business and live like a multi-millionaire without all the hassles. At age 51, he set out for Europe to take it easy, Instead, he met Pamela Lockwood Boyer and her gorgeous 20-year-old daughter, Eugenie. Isaac bedded down with both mother and daughter, in that order. He used an alias, but when Eugenie became pregnant, Pamela informed him that she knew he was the American multi-millionaire Isaac Singer. She threatened him with an international scandal if he didn't marry pregnant Eugenie.

Isaac and Eugenie were married in New York issac and Eugenie were married in New York City. He purchased a mansion along the Hudson for his new bride. A month after the marriage, little Mortimer was born. Ten months later, Eugenie bore a second child; a year later, a third. Eugenie had six children in less than seven years. The Sing-ers moved to Paris and then to Paignton on the Devon coast of England.

In 1875, at age 64, the old stud took to his bed and died of natural causes. With an array of wives, mistresses, legitimate and illegitimate chil-dren, there was some speculation regarding his will

Isaac satisfied most of his loved ones. About half his wealth was left to his widow and their six children. The balance was divided up between the other four women in his life and their children.

In all, Isaac Singer, who gave us the sewing machine, also gave us 24 children, mothered by two legitimate wives and three mistresses.

This film might sound familiar. It is similar, in many ways, to other courtroom dramas, such as Legal Eagles or The Jagged Edge, but it is not simply a weak clone of earlier productions. Whether it is judged on its own merits or compared with others of the same type, it comes out with flying col-ours. It is fast-paced, well acted and realistic.

Cher gives an excellent performance as a tired, jaded, public defender, who is determined to do her best for her client despite the barriers being thrown in her way by the legal system and the officious presiding judge. Newcomer Liam Neeson is impressive in his non-speaking role as the accused. Dennis Quaid, a political lobbyist summoned to serve on the jury, provides romantic interest as he illegally tries to help the defence.

Although the scene of the trial is Washinton D.C., some of it was filmed in a well-disguised Toronto.

Other movies by Peter Yates, the director, include Bullitt, Breaking Away, The Dresser and Evernitness

This is a film that will keep you engrossed and puzzled for a couple of hours. Pay attention from the beginning, because it is worth it. There are son quite violent scenes and the language is frequently extremely crude. It is not for younger children.

Pat has seen a tremendous increase over the years in the amount of things people throw away. He has his own explanation: "The stuff made in Canada used to be good. Now the imported stuff doesn't last, and it's cheaper to throw it away than have it repaired' Then he adds, "Besides, people nowadays claim they have no time to be fixing things".

Do people think he's weird for picking up throwaways? 'No way!' he responds quickly. "No one ever insulted me. In fact, the kids in the neighbourhood would come over wanting to help me. They especially love suing the magnet to sort out the steel from the other

With great humility, Pat allows that people think he's doing a good thing by Pat looks forward to a recycling program in the area, and has some bold ideas about it.

"I'm 100 per cent for mandatory recycling. We've got to help the environment fast. Trees won't last forever, there's no more space for all the garbage we make. All the stuff we throw out could be reused in one way or another. Sometimes I try to imagine all the stuff I saved that would have been buried somewhere," he says

Did Pat ever find any treasure? He points to a handsome mantel clock featuring a prancing brass horse.

"I had to have the clockworks fixed, and I made the horse solid but there it is, beautiful as new!" he said.

Pat has had to slow down lately because of age and finding winters too cold for him to work in the garage. Whereas he used to spend all day collecting and disassembling stuff, now he spends two hours a day, and considers them well spent. He gets a hat and puts it on for me. There's a big metal star on the cap the "LICENSED JUNK COL LECTOR

"That's me!". he says, grinning.

Before we go out to the garage to see how he separates the metals and other scrap, Pat hands me a key. It's thin aluminum, obviously a fake.

"This is an example of how good resources are wasted," says Pat. "It come in an envelope, part of an advertising gimmick to win a car from Reader's Digest. But at least this aluminum won't be wasted by me.

An old American saw tells us "Christmas comes but once a year is enough." In times of troubling trade deficits, with an old-fashioned Christmas demanding real trees from Canada, ornaments from Japan and candied treats from all over Europe, once is probably enough

The meaning of Christmas has changed. That's why there's such Santamentality attached to it now... and even that's changing. The labels on now... and even that's changing. The labels on Christmas toys tell us the Clauses no longer live at the North Pole. They've moved to Hong Kong. By Glen Konorowski Buyers usually don't look to Ford when seeking an expensive German car. Nevertheless, Ford-Mercury dealers have one of the least-expensive German luxury cars on the Canadian market. The car is the Merkur (mareKOOR)

This four-door luxury car came to the North American market in 1987. Its bold aero-styling makes it hard to distinguish from the Taurus and Sable at a quick glance.

But once up close you know you're looking at a finely crafted German car that has all the virtues of a truly European sedan. (I should correct myself here: the Scorpio is not really a sedan, but a five-door hat-Chback.)

The Scorpio is aimed to take a slice out of the growing market of European luxury cars that have been selling well despite their high prices. At $34,675 the Scorpio is by far one of the cheapest German luxury.

Bill Moreton, clerk for the Corporation of the City of Belleville, has maintained a ritual for 3,436 days.

He hasn't completed exactly 43 reports a day since 1987 or had three eggs for breakfast every morning, but he's jogged every day since July 30, 1987. without dropping a step.

In his daily routine, Moreton has found an additional benefit to the city's new city hall — 157 stairs.

While many members of Areas he frequents include East Zwicks Island, Meyer's Pier and Great St James but he tries to vary the scenery every once in a while. "If you run by the same place over and over again, you can get bored with it," said Moreton.

Although Mother Nature might scare potential athlete's off, Moreton is quick to point out the benefits of running.

"You don't have to rely on others," he said. "You can run whenever it's convenient ... you can run at 11 if you want.'

"All you need are a pair of running shoes and the desire.

1988: The year that was

By David Botting

Well, folks, that was the year that was! Or it will be the year that was in just three days. Sure hope nothing important happens after we have already closed the door on 1988.

The year was an exciting one in many ways, not only for this area, but for this newspaper. For one thing, Quinte Weekly News became part of the St. Catharines Standard family of newspapers in a joint venture with the St. Catharines, Ont. based daily newspaper. And after a sometimes-difficult two years, Quinte Weekly began to hit its stride and grow.

The election was also noteworthy locally for the six parties that contested for the riding. Two new parties surfaced — COR, an anti-bilingualism party, and the Christian Heritage Party, a conservative parconcerned about the decline of ethics in politics. The Christian Heritage candidate polled a surprising 2,000 votes here, not enough to have swung the election, but enough to have hurt Tory candidate Jack Arthur.

A record number of headline politicians visited the area, including the prime minister, who visited twice in the year, once in the election and once in January. In January, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney said sun was shining of Tories, and he certainly made that prediction true in a record second consecutive majority government in the fall.

History may look back and record that 1988 was a decisive year in the Confederation of Canada. The issue of free trade dominated the election, as Canadians wrestled - and not for the first time with the question of its connection to the U.S. But for the first time, Canadians chose free trade, after defeating free traders in elections in the 1870s. the 1890s and just before the First World War

Most eyes were turned to the Belleville arena, where George Zegouras sought an unprecedented fourth term. The subject of controversy during the year, Mr. Zegouras had been accused of conflict of interest and of using his office to acquire landholdings. Articles in the national press focused attention on Belleville and a vocal group of citizens began to monitor his and council's actions.

that the candidate intended to formally announce. It was pulled almost literally off the press when the potential candidate decided to sit out the election.

Also noteworthy in Belleville was the retirement of Ben Corke, the former city mayor. We are willing to wager that he isn't planning to just sit at home and cultivate his tomatoes. We'll hear from him again, though perhaps

In many ways we think of Quinte as being free of the hazards of crime in large cities, but this year were reminded of our vulnerability. There were murders and a police standoff that ended with police shooting and injuring the suspect. In one issue alone, Quinte Weekly News reported on a murder, a train/car crash and a hostage-taking incident.

On an early morning walk, a county resident made the gruesome discovery of a torso washed up on the shore.

June 16 — Accident simulation tested the abilities of Sidney emergency officials

Fishermen found more while serving as a police ofbody parts and OPP divers were called in. The body was later identified as that of an Agincourt woman who had disappeared earlier in the year.

But crime came to a stop in one area. Quinte Crime Stoppers started January. By the end of the year, Crime Stopper tips had led to the arrest of 67 persons, including one murder suspect, the clearing of 54 cases and the recovery of over $70,000 in stolen property and narcotics.

Ironically, Crime Stoppers was the brainchild of a Picton native, Greg MacAleese, who started it ficer in Albequerque, New Mexico.

Even more ironically, the Picton police department was disbanded at the end of January after 150 years of operation.

We've also had our quirky news. For example, the piles of ice that blew ashore within hours at the Mohawk reserve on the Bay of Quinte, pushing around cottages and elbowing trailors out of the way.

1988 was also the year that Belleville almost lost the Bulls. Owner Dr. Vaughan told the city he

Resolutions and promises

As 1989 approaches and the corks of champagne bottles fly across the room, Quinte-area residents should look at the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead of them Will resolutions and promises he kent?

them. Will resolutions and promises be kept?

On the national scene, the Mulroney government was re-elected with a mandate to pass free trade legislation in the new year. Conversely, Prince Edward-Hastings voters traded in their Tory blue colours for Liberal red ones with the election of Lyle Vanclief as their member of parliament.

Vanclief faces a great challenge being the first Liberal member from the region in decades and being a member of the opposition facing a huge majority government. Here his debating skills will truly be tested as he tries to meet many of the promises made during an election campaign.

Even the local political scene is not without its challenges.

Belleville Mayor George Zegouras faces another term in the municipality's highest office after overcoming many of the controversies that erupted over the year about his ability to govern.

As Belleville continues to grow, its council has to contend with an official plan in desperate need of updating and a number of studies that will need implementing on the city's most valuable resource, its waterfront, and its cultural activities.

It's crucial for these officials to meet their promises head on with the record development Belleville has seen over the past few years and probably will see in the year to come. It will also be up to the new council and staff to the city as a whole.

city as a wnor.

Whereas well thought out planning helps a city to prosper, poor planning will destroy it. We've seen elements of both over past years and as Belleville continues its rapid growth, it's crucial for council to keep a close eye on everything.

No doubt, citizens will probably even try to better themselves once again in a series of resolutions scrawled on a piece of paper and stuck to the fridge with a dimestore magnet.

Every resolution or promise made by a politician is just as difficult to keep as those new year resolutions we make every year. Voters should remember that before they set their hopes too high but they should also make every effort to help the people they elected to meet all reasonable goals and even strive for the seemingly impossible ones.

CHEERS — to all people who are responsable at various celebrations welcoming in the new year. If you're drinking, appoint a designated driver or take a taxi. A senseless tragedy is no way to welcome 1989.

Michail Gorbachev stunned the free world while delivering his speech at the U.N. He pledged that he would reduce his troops by 10 per cent and some of his military hardware by up to 40 per cent.

Rural Christmas continues to enchant

The Editor:

I read with great interest your recent special edition "12 Days of Saving till Christmas".

Of special note was the short story on page 31 entitled "A rural school Christmas" by Agnes Craigen.

I feel, however, that I must take exception to her observation that children and parents do not now experience the joys and enchantment of the country school Christmas pageant.

his is the story of a man who stood trial for murder in Ontario and returned to the very same courtroom years later as a judge.

In the 1806, Perth was quite unlike other frontier towns of Canada. Perth had been settled around 1816 through land grants. It became home to members of disbanded regiments who had fought in the Napoleonic wars. At the same time, dirt poor Scottish and Irish immigrants arrived in the area and were consigned to the bottom rung of the social ladder. For the next 15 years, the town developed a class structure that was just as stringent as the one they had left back home.

Robert Lyon was probably the most eligible single young man in town. Tall, handsome, athletic Robert, 19, was the son of a wealthy, socially prominent family. He was studying law, as was his friend Henry Lelievre, the son of a French frigate captain.

Another of Lyon's close friends was John Wilson. Today, we would say John came from the wrong side of the tracks. In reality, his parents were honest, hard working farmers, who had made many sacrifices to enable their son to study law.

The scenario, which was to find a place in the history of our country, began innocently enough.

In 1833, Lyon and Wilson were sent by their respective law firms to Ottawa, then called Bytown, on busi-The two law students met often, had a few drinks and talked about the girls back home. They knew many girls in common. Wilson had once squired Elizabeth Hughes, who had recently arrived in Perth from England to teach school. Elizabeth was alone in the world, having lost her father to cholera on the way over. She was a good looking girl and had several of the town boys doing flip flops over her affections.

Lyon had no way of knowing that Wilson no longer cared for Elizabeth. He had fallen hard for another Perth girl, pretty Joanne Lees. Lyon himself had no sincere interest in Elizabeth, as he was engaged to still another Perth belle, Caroline Thom.

Now, if you follow all this, fine. If not, it is enough to know that as these two young law students from such different backgrounds chatted over drinks, neither was particularly concerned with the affections of Elizabeth Hughes.

Lyon decided to have a bit of fun at Wilson's expense. He told Wilson that Elizabeth was in the habit of "allowing men to indulge in unbecoming freedoms." He told Wilson that their mutual friend. Henry Lelievre, "had sat alongside her with his arms about her in a position which no woman of spirit would permit.'

Back in 1833, those were fighting words. However, they didn't have the desired effect because Wilson had shifted his affections to Miss Lees.

John Wilson then did a rather silly thing. He sat down and wrote a letter to Elizabeth's guardian, a Mr. Acland. He quoted Lyon word for word. Later, wilson revealed he wrote the letter to finally end his relationship with Elizabeth. Acland was a blabermouth. He spread the word Robert Lyon had made "a dishonorable remark about an umprotected female."

Lyon returned from Bytown to find half of Perth giving him the cold shoulder. What a cad to have said such things about a defenceless woman. Even his betrothed, Caroline, wouldn't have anything to do with him. Lyon checked with Lelievre, who was furious at Wilson for writing such a letter. Lyon went looking for John Wilson.

Robert Lyon and John Wilson met in front of Perth's Robert Lyon and John winson met in troil of Perlis-courthouse on June 6, 1833. Lyon didn't waste time with formalities. Did Wilson write that letter? Wilson readily admitted that he had, but before he could offer any explanation, Lyon punched him in the face.

Lyon then turned, shouting over his shoulder, "You're a damn lying scoundrel, Sir, and I'll treat you as such every time I meet you.

Wilson realized that to do nothing about the insult would be tantamount to ostracization in Perth. He issued a duelling challenge to Lyon, firmly believing that Lyon would accept his explanation of why he had written the letter. Initially, Lyon did show an inclination to seek a peaceful solution but, under the urging of Lelievre, became convinced the dispute could only be solved on the field of honor. Lyon was a crack shot, while Wilson had probably only held a gun in his hands once or twice in his life.

The time and place for the duel was set. It was drizzling rain at 6 p.m. on June 13, 1833, when the assembled enrain at 6 p.m. on June 13, 1833, when the assembled en-tourage walked about one mile outside perth to a plowed field. The locale was carefully chosen to be outside the jurisdiction of the local sheriff, shom both men knew well. Lyon's second was Henry Lelievre. Wilson was seconded by Simon Robertson. Official medical representation for the event was Dr. William Hamilton.

At the count of five, both men fired. Wilson missed. Lyon's bullet barely creased Wilson's skull. Both men were unhurt. Wilson was to state later that he was surwere tunner. Whison was to state later that he was sur-prised to be alive. It was the custom of the time that dou-ble misses called for apologies all around and that was that. However, Lyon and Lelievre wouldn't hear of calling

The duellists reloaded. As Wilson stood waiting for the signal, he noted that a plowed furrow connected him to his adversary in a perfectly straight line. He used it as a point of reference to aim. Wilson shifted on six weight slightly, turned his head away and fired on signal. Lyon fell to the ground. The shot had pierced his lungs. He was taken to a nearby home, where he died within minutes. Wilson stood unharmed, amazed at his accuracy and thankful to be alive.

Henry Lelievre lett Perth immediately after the shooting and is variously reported to have spent the rest of his life in the U.S. and Australia. Wilson and Robertson turned themselves in to the authorities. Wilson was charged with murder, while Robertson was charged with being an accessory. The two men stood trial in Brockville. Both took the witness stand in their own defence and made impassioned pleas, stressing that at no time did they have any malice toward Lyon. They also pointed out that during the events leading up to the duel, they had made repeated attempts to have the whole thing called off. The jury found both defendants not guilty.

John Wilson tried to pick up the remnants of his life after his acquittal. He tried to renew his relationship with Joanne Lees, but her parents would not let their daughter have anything to do with someone who had been through such a scandal. Wilson moved to London, but kept in contact with Elizabeth Hughes. Following a script that would be unbelievable if written in Hollywood, he returned to Perth two years later and married Elizabeth Hughes.

We lizabeth Hughes.

In 1847, he became a member of Parliament, succeeding William Draper, who had been the prosecuting attorney at his murder trial 14 years previously. In 1863, Wilson was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario. Ironically, the first case he presided over was in the very same Brockville courthouse where he had stood accused of murder 30 years earlier.

murder 30 years earlier.

John Wilson's public life was successful, but not so his private life. It is said that the former Elizabeth Hughes was an inconsiderate nagging wife. John Wilson died in London in 1869. Elizabeth died in 1904 in Posentie at ang 93 Toronto at age 93.

If you are ever visiting Perth, you might enjoy a walk through the local park. It has the fitting name of Last Duel Park to commemorate the last duel ever fought in Canada.

This increase has resulted in a much-

1989 DODGE SHADOW ES THREE-DOOR HATCHBACK opinion. Right off the bat, horsepower has increased to 150 from last year's 146. The real gain from this new engine is an increase from 120 lb./ft. of torque to 180 lb./ft. It may not liik like a lot on paper but I really noticed it in acceleration

The test car was equipped with the manual fivespeed — the standard transmission for the Shadow.

and overall engine response.

Good, quick shifts are easy with this muchimproved unit. For the less daring, an optional three-speed automatic is available. With the increase in torque of the engine this year, this automatic should give the driver much-improved performance.

Bringing this much-improved Shadow to a quick stop was a prime concern, with the im-provements under the hood. I wasn't disap-pointed: the combination of disc brakes and drum brakes stopped the car very well even after repeated stops.

For nimble handling, all Shadows use a power rack-and-pinion unit. This unit seems to be ideally suited for the Shadow since it didn't give too much boost. Chrysler has done a fine job of making performance affordable again, and, by listening to the public, the company is winning. If the Shadow is any indication of its quest to be number 1, I'm all for it.

Base price: $10,150 (ES option $3,268).

Price as tested: $16,089 (included sunroof, turbo engine, air conditioning, power mirrors, mag wheels, performance tires, tuned exhaust system, rear-window defogger, upgraded sound system).

Engine: 2.5 Litre fuel-injected turbo-charged four-cylinder engine, with 150 hp at 4,800 rpm and 180 lb./ft. of torque at 2,000 rpm

THE GREAT BATHTUB HOAX

DECEMBER 28

Editor H.L.Mencken perpetrated "the great American bathtub hoar" on Dec.28,1920. His New York Evening Mail article falsely traced the bathtub's origins in America and the regulations or taxes various cities or states placed on it. To this day one can find items of his imagination quoted as Actually, bathtubs were slow catching on in the new world. Calamity Jane wouldn't have helped Mary Kay drive a pink Cadillac. Ads for sta tionary running-water tubs marketed by one company in the 1880s asked, "Do you bathe?"

Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy cauDATES N DARTS tioned against it as a By Fred Webster

She equated regular ablutions of an infant with taking a fish out of water once a day, "that it might thrive better in its natural element." And Mark

Twain, a profound influence on Mencken, thought baths for children were barely less destructive than formal education

As a child, whenever I spent a lot of time in the tub, playing with toy boats usually—till they ran aground—my parents expressed like concerns. They could have farmed mushrooms in my navel, yet too much water worried them.

yet too much water worried them.

Mencken was also a brilliant humorist. His history of bathtubs wasn't meant to be taken seriously, but we do confuse what we read in newspapers with news. While you can't fool all the people all the time, the fourth estate certainly manages to con too many too often.

smen don't lie outright, of course. They simply make accurate front page reports of the lies they support while burying accurate reports of those they don't somewhere inside. To appreciate them learn to read between the lies

However, that's sometimes difficult to do with reports involving politics. There are so many of them! And take "them" to read reports, politicians or lies — they could all be the same.

The great bathtub hoax succeeded because to Menken's readers it seemed reasonable that politicians would regulate and tax something so personal if there was revenue to gain.
